The Policy of Price Maintenance in Business

Address Given by One who had Experience—Decisions in Law Courts Favorable to It—Cases Where Lack of Maintenance has Driven Articles of High Merit from the Market—Motive of the Price Cutter.

Price maintenance is a live problem in all trades; all associations are discussing it in their regular sessions and annual conventions. A recent evidence of this was at the fifteenth annual convention of the National Hardware Association of the United States held recently at Atlantic City, N.J.

The principal address was that of R. E. Shanahan, treasurer of the Bissell Carpet Sweeper Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., on price maintenance. It was as follows:

My talk to you will necessarily be brief, and as we say that advertising is not literature, so the treatment of a business topic may wisely be couched in plain phrase and not raised to the dignity of oratory. Candidly speaking, if I should attempt a serious oration, I am afraid I would be in the position of the man who was called upon to make an after-dinner speech, and who said something like this: "My friends, it is alleged that according to the Darwinian theory, it took the monkey four thousand years to evolve into man. Now, if I should attempt a speech, I would show you how man can make a monkey of himself in five minutes."

From my point of view, the policy of price maintenance or restricted prices, is so broad in scope, so far-reaching in beneficent results, as to be worthy of the thoughtful consideration and earnest support of every manufacturer, jobber and retailer in this country. From an ethical standpoint, price maintenance typifies one of the best moral elements in the conduct of business; it is fundamentally sound in principle and preeminently just and beneficent in practice, fostering and stimulating as it does the best ideals in commercial life; promoting character in business, and securing to its devotees the confidence of the public, which is in itself a valuable commercial asset.

Entitled to Fair Profit.

There are certain inevitable laws in trade that affect in common the manufacturer, the jobber and retailer, and price maintenance recognizes the basic principle of commercial justice and equity, namely: that the manufacturer, jobber and retailer, in the process of distribution, are entitled to a fair living profit in the sale of any commodity. Experience has taught, and I believe you will all bear me out in this statement, that the maintenance of prices will more nearly insure the maintenance of the quality of an article, than any other factor contributing to its sale. Not only will the maintenance of prices insure the high quality of an article, but also its very permanence on the market as well. A hardware merchant of my own city, told me some time ago that price cutting, to his knowledge, had driven from the market many an article of hardware of the highest merit; and the reason for this is perfectly obvious.

In the beginning I said there were certain inevitable laws of trade that affect in common the manufacturer, jobber and retailer, and that work out with mathematical certainty; and one of these is that the article that is placed on the market without the stipulation that it must be sold at uniform prices, both wholesale and retail, will in a short time be retailed at such low prices as to destroy all profit in its sale, thus killing the demand for it with both jobber and retailer, leaving open to the manufacturer as a last hopeless course the lowering of his prices, which means the deterioration of the quality of the product; and so it seems to me that it can be logically maintained that price cutting is demoralizing from beginning to end, working detriment, disappointment and loss to all concerned—manufacturers, jobbers, retailers and consumers.

In order to expound the practical application of a sound, rigidly enforced system of price maintenance, I hope I may be pardoned for using in the main the Bissell Carpet Sweeper Co. as an exponent of this principle, for as I have never been conected with any other business, for accuracy of detail I must necesarily confine myself to what I know about the policy of price maintenance as exemplified in our business.

When the Bissell sweeper was introduced on the market thirty-three years ago, the policy of price maintenance, of fixed wholesale and retail prices, same to be rigidly enforced, was practically unknown, especially in connection with the sweeper business. No manufacturer of carpet sweepers except ourselves (until within the last few years, when they have been forced to follow our lead) ever conceived the idea of establishing fixed retail prices on his goods, and what has been the result? Except that an intelligent presentation of this subject demands a reference to our competitors and their business policy, I would not make such reference at this time; therefore, I trust I may be pardoned for making comparison to more clearly convey to you the things that lie at the bottom of this question, and that will serve to make clear the effect of price maintenance upon a business.

Carpet sweepers were manufactured and marketed long before the introduction of the Bissell, but the policy of our competitors from the beginning to the present time has been to seek recognition through the offering of lower prices, totally disregarding the retail prices with the result that their product has been sold at any price suiting the whim of the dealer, killing the profit for every other merchant handling the goods, and finally, doing the inevitable; killing the demand for the goods thus loosely marketed.

I want to emphasize here that it must not be assumed that our competitors have been men of mediocre ability, with limited capital, thus accounting for any little success we have had. On the contrary, we have had competitors made up of the ablest business men in our own and other cities, backed by vastly more capital than ourselves; but their failure to obtain prominence in the business was due primarily to two things; first, they have never made the carpet sweeper an exclusive line of manufacture, and secondly, their selling policy has from our point of view been greatly imperfect.

Considering that we have had competition all the time we have been in business, that our competitors in many instances have been men of unquestioned ability, and pronounced successes in other lines, and that they have had in many instances more capital than ourselves to prosecute their business; that they always claimed to have a superior product to ours; always offered it at a lower price than ours; what should be the reasonable conclusion as to the causes that have made the Bissell sweeper the recognized leader throughout the world? Simply this: With the beginning of our organization we established our business on a sound system of price maintenance, and saw to it that our prices were strictly enforced. The best proof I can give you as to the vital force and far-reaching effect of price maintenance in our business, supplemented by strong, consistent advertising, is to say that we are to-day manufacturing and marketing fully seventy-five to eighty per cent. of the entire world's consumption of carpet sweepers. The foregoing statement is not made boastfully or egotistically, nor is it intended to show the brilliancy of our organization. What is intended is to demonstrate to you through facts and figures what I conceive to be the power of a well-defined price maintenance policy supported by strong advertising.

Price Maintenance Complex Subject.

And now I take it that a brief outline of our methods of price maintenance will be of interest to you. As we sell the jobber as well as the retailer, you will appreciate the task of maintaining our prices is more complex and difficult of accomplishment than if we passed our goods through but one channel of distribution. It should be gratifying to any manufacturer contemplating the adoption of a price maintenance policy when I tell you that we have no great difficulty in obtaining the co-operation of both jobbers and retailers in the strict maintenance of our price. It is true that in the beginning, when the policy of restricting prices had been little advocated, and when it was not generally understood, many dealers felt that it was a direct invasion of personal liberty and a positive usurpation of the dealer's prerogative to attempt to tell him the price at which he must sell a piece of merchandise, which he had bought and paid for. We have had many interesting as well as amusing experiences in the promulgation of price maintenance. A few years ago one of our customers in a remote western city informed us that one of his competitors, a sturdy German, was cutting the price on our goods, earnestly requesting us to have it corrected at once. We immediately wrote the recalcitrant merchant, and his Teutonic blood was deeply aroused, and his reply was as follows: "Gentlemen, I bot them sweepers, and d'are mine, unt I sell them at any brice I blease, or gif dem away, or eat em; now what you say?" We replied that, however, it might distress his alimentary canal, derange his digestive machinery, or test his fealty to Fletcherism, we could offer no valid objection to his eating the sweepers, nor could we consistently object to his giving them away; but that when it came to selling them at cut prices we did interpose most emphatic objection, and that we hoped to have his early assurance that our fixed retail prices would be strictly maintained. Not hearing from him for some little time, we wrote again, and here was his reply: "Gentlemen, You t'ink you can dictate to me; I tell you I gif away every one of dem damn schweepers." And here the incident closed.

Mark the change of sentiment on price maintenance: To-day we are having the loyal support and co-operation of all the best jobbing and retail trade in this and foreign countries; and right here I want to say that in my judgment there never was in the history of merchandising a more opportune moment to inaugurate a price maintenance policy than the present.

Price Maintenance Growing.

Price maintenance has been adopted by so many manufacturers during the past few years, and the principle has been so productive of good results and has been approved so generally by the best jobbing and retail trade of the world, that I would strongly urge and recommend to any manufacturer who is producing an article of quality, protected by either patent or trademark, to lose no time in adopting a policy of restricted prices, as far as this is possible in the conduct of his business.

This is the most wonderful age of merchandising that the world has ever seen; never was competition as keen as it is to-day; never did the conduct of business demand a higher order of talent than to-day; and so it seems to me the policy of price maintenance should appeal to every manufacturer who can possibly adopt it, for its value to a business has been so many times demonstrated as to make it hardly debatable. Of course, it is a fact with which you are all entirely familiar, that the ideal condition necessary to the successful carrying out of a price maintenance policy is to have the article thus sold protected by patent or trademark. Personally I am so thoroughly imbued with the benefits accruing from a policy of uniform prices, and knowing as I do what a small percentage of jobbers or retailers are disposed to cut prices, if I were manufacturing an article not protected by patent, I would still surround the sale of my commodity with a well-defined scheme of restricted prices, appealing to the best business judgment of the jobbers and retailers of the country to secure their co-operation in the maintenance of my prices. I would supplement this with a campaign of advertising that would create a demand for my product, and by constantly pointing out to the jobber and retailer the profits to be secured by co-operation, in the maintenance of my prices, I would count upon results that are not obtainable when an article is sold on a haphazard-plan, with no well defined selling policy back of it.

A carefully devised and rigidly enforced policy of price maintenance means lots of thought and hard work, but once it is properly launched the work becomes comparatively easy, and the benefits accruing more than compensate for the labor expended.

Legal Aspect of the Problem.

To demonstrate how thoroughly the trade now understand that the manufacturer of a patented article has the legal right to fix the price on his commodity, we have never once been obliged to go into the courts in this country to enforce the maintenance of our prices, and only a few cases have arisen where a dealer even threatened to cut our prices and take the matter to the courts in defiance of our policy. A few years ago one of the largest department stores in Buffalo threatened to go into the courts in opposition to our policy and spend $10,000 if necessary to defeat us; but after they took time to investigate with their attorneys they concluded it was best not to go into litigation, and to-day they are one of our best customers in Buffalo, and are selling our goods at correct prices. Only recently one of the largest department stores in Chicago threatened to cut our prices on our regular line of goods if we would not agree to brand the goods specially for them, they to cut on the special brands. We discussed the question with them on the broadest lines we could command, politely refusing to accede to their request, and giving them to understand that we would defend our policy of fixed prices to the last ditch, with the result that they receded from their position, and will continue to sell our goods and maintain our prices.

There have been some notable decisions during the past few years sustaining the right of the manufacturer of a patented article to fix the price on his commodity.

We had occasion some time ago to proceed against an English merchant for cutting our prices, and the court granted us an injunction, and the decision of the English justice was most sweeping in the recognition it gave to the right of the manufacturer of a patented article to fix the price on his commodity. Justice Wills, of the English court, in summing up the case, stated as follows: "The sale of a patented article carries with it the right to use it in any way that the purchaser chooses to use it, unless he knows of restrictions. If he knows of restrictions and they are brought to his mind at the time of sale he is bound by them. He is bound by them on this principle: The patentee has the sole right of using and selling the articles, and he may prevent anybody from dealing with them at all. Inasmuch as he has the right to prevent people from using them or dealing in them at all, he has the right to do the lesser thing, that is to say, impose his own conditions. It does not matter how unreasonable or how absurd the conditions are; it does not matter what they are; if he says at the time the purchaser proposes to buy: Mind, I only give you this license on this condition, and the purchaser is free to take it or leave it as he likes; if he takes it, he must be bound by the conditions. This seems to be common sense, and not depend on any patent law or any other particular law."

Decisions in American Courts.

The Ingersoll watch people, who maintain a policy of restricted prices, have had numerous decisions in their favor. The two most notable decisions that I recall, and which have occurred recently, sustaining the right of the manufacturer of a patented article to fix his price, are those of the Victor Talking Machine Co. vs. The Fair, and the Dover Manufacturing Co. vs. The Fair. These cases were fought bitterly and carried to the Supreme Court, decisions being rendered favorable to the manufacturers.

In all the decisions that have thus far been rendered, the courts have made it perfectly clear that when the Government grants a patent it intends to do something more for the patentee than to merely give him the exclusive right to make and vend his invention for a limited term of years. The only object that the Government has in granting patents is to stimulate invention for the general good, and there can be no stimulus to invention unless the inventor is able to enjoy some profit from his invention. If he cannot fix the price on his commodity, and if every jobber and dealer can cut the price, thus killing the demand for the article, it is evident that the patentee would be robbed of his profits, the very thing the Government expects him to enjoy when his patent was granted.

And now a word in regard to the effect of price maintenance, on other lines. Consider the commercial standing of such products as the Knox and Dunlap hats; consider the prestige of the E. & W. collar—through their price maintenance policy. A notable example of the virtue of this policy is shown in our own city through the present status of the Macey Co. A few years ago this business was established by Fred Macey, a young man of unusual ability, but who in his ambition gave more thought to building up a business rapidly than safeguarding it through a carefully devised selling policy. Although Mr. Macey was a most skillful advertiser, and although he made most marvelous strides within a short period in building up a business, things did not go right, and finally, when Mr. Macey died, Mr. Wernicke, the so-called father of the sectional bookcase idea, was called to take the management of the business, and in his reorganization of this business he put into effect price maintenance, and has rigidly adhered to this policy, with the result that while the business was in bad shape when he took hold of it, it is to-day in the healthiest kind of a condition, the preferred stock paying 6 per cent. and the common stock paying 10 per cent.

Policy of Price Maintenance Must Work Both Ways.

The policy of price maintenance, to be fairly and honestly carried out, entails upon the manufacturer the same obligations to strictly maintain prices as it does upon the jobber or retailer. A salesman of ours would no more think of taking an order at a cut price than of sending in his resignation. A manufacturer advocating price maintenance must practice what he preaches; he must kept faith with the jobbers, and never take an order, however, tempting, at cut prices. This policy has won for us the confidence and co-operation of the best jobbing trade in this country, and I can say in all candor that the time is past when we ever hear of a jobber cutting our prices. Price cutting is a species of commercial debauchery that rests upon the relentless doctrine of the survival of the fittest, upon the narrow, cold-blooded principle that merchandising is a sort of commercial warfare; that "all's fair in war," and "the devil take the hindmost." Price cutting lowers the commercial standing of the manufacturer, jobber or retailer who practices it, destroys profits, breeds distrust, fosters prevarication, forfeits confidence, and, finally, robs the consumer by debasing the quality of the commodities upon which prices are cut, if not actually driving many of them from the market.

Motive of Price Cutters Bad.

When you analyze it, the motive of the price cutter is always bad. Did you ever happen to notice that he usually selects an article for cutting that is well-known and well advertised. He knows that the general public are better acquainted with such an article, and he figures that by selling such a well-known article at a cut price it will give the impression to the buying public that he is selling all other commodities at equally reduced prices. Whenever we run on to a commercial freebooter of this class, who attempts to cut the price on our product, we invariably give him the opportunity of a limited number of rounds or a finish fight, as he may prefer.

In contradistinction to the blighting effect of price cutting, price maintenance is in harmony with the soundest principles in business to-day. The manufacturer, jobber or retailer conducting his business under a broad, equitable system of uniform prices, commands confidence and respect and establishes for a business that fine personality that we all prize so much in the individual.

SOME OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

General Meeting of the D. C. T. A. Held —Increase in Membership of 425.

Montreal, Nov. 17.—Samuel J. Mathewson was re-elected president of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association at a general meeting held in Montreal on Saturday evening last.

Other officers were re-elected as follows:—Vice-president, J. Bevans Giles; Treasurer, Max. Murdock. Five retiring directors were replaced by E. Daoust, A. M. Ellicott, J. A. Dawson, (re-elected), Luke F. Moore and Bruno Trudel. No ballot had to be taken.

A good attendance made the meeting an interesting one, and it was announced that the membership had increased to 6,500, a gain of 425 over last year.

As usual, a banquet will be held in December, at a date to be decided upon at a special meeting. The committee appointed to make arrangements consists of W. J. Egan, chairman; D. M. Lefebvre, S. December 11 was the date decided upon for the annual meeting, which will be held at the Windsor.

Samuel J. Mathewson's re-election to the presidency will be a matter of general rejoicing. Under his management the association has made excellent progress during the past year, as the large increase in membership alone should testify. He is a practical worker, whose experience on the road leaves him in possession of the problems the commercial traveler has to overcome. Nothing is too good for the salesman, in his opinion.

"Bev." Giles is another favorite official, and an indefatigable worker, while Max. Murdock is everybody's friend.

DETAILS OF THE CHRISTMAS CONTESTS.

The Canadian Grocer in recent issues announced the beginning of our annual Christmas window dressing and retail advertising competition which closes on December 31st. This is done with a view to encouraging a greater interest in holiday displays and holiday advertising. If both are performed in the proper manner they will be found to be of much selling value to merchants.

Following last year's precedent, window dressing contestants will be divided into two classes:

For the best selling window display shown in (1) a city over 10,000 population, and (2) in towns and villages under 10,000 population.

In the window display contest in each case there will be two prizes as follows: 1st, $7 in cash; 2nd, $3 in cash, making in all $20.

To enter the contest send a good, clear photo of one or more Christmas windows, with a description and the name of the person who arranged the display. Photos must be mailed to us not later than December 31.

Most grocers use increased newspaper space during the Christmas season with a view to booming holiday trade. We want to get copies of these advertisements.

The advertisement submitted should be about Christmas goods sold through grocery stores. All that is necessary is to forward one or more clippings from your local paper to us, with the name of the writer of the advertisement, and the name of the paper it was clipped from. There will be a prize of $5 cash given to the winner.

The award will be made by an advertising specialist and will be announced, with a reproduction of the prize ad., shortly after the close of the contest. All entries in each case should be mailed not later than December 31 to the Editor of The Canadian Grocer.

Montreal Grocer's Window Display Suggestions

What the Assistant Manager of Fraser, Viger & Co., Considers the Best Methods—Particular About Cleanliness — Believes in the Simple Display—Motto of the Store.

Chas. P. Macklaier, assistant manager of Fraser, Viger & Co., (The Italian Warehouse), St. James Street, Montreal, who dressed the accompanying window, said in regard to it "I used about 50 different articles in preparing this display. Many of them are goods carried by most grocers or at least some corresponding article is in stock. A few of the lines will be found only in the larger stores, such as ours.

"It is very easily possible for the average retail grocer to produce some such effect from his stock. It is simply a matter of originality. Anyone with ideas can readily adapt stock in hand to make attractive selling windows.

Display Clean Goods.

"One of the main mechanical details in all good window displays, is to have everything, from the window glass to the smallest article in the exhibit, scrupulously clean. Any evidences of handling, or lack of care of stock, has an immediate effect on the average observer, and it is to the average man or woman that we wish to appeal.

"Where there is a choice between two styles of packages or bottles, use the one which would attract you most, if you were in the place of the prospective customer. It may not seem to make a great deal of difference, but when the whole effect comes to be summed up, every article will be found to add or detract its share from the advertising value of the whole.

Dress Simple Windows.

"Florid, sensational windows are not the best mediums for a first class house. Comparatively simple displays, as far as color and general placing go, will be found to give an impression of stability and quality that cannot be gained in any other way. This matter depends, of course, to a great extent on the class of customers, which it is desired to attract.

"The window under discussion is a fair representation of the style of dressing I most favor. Some details as to contents of the window are as follows:—

"The background is a liquor cabinet, filled with choice wines and liqueurs. The filling of such cabinets is one of the most successful features of our store. Upon the cabinet are placed wines and dining room accesories in as attractive a display as possible. In front of this is a table, covered with a neat cloth, and displaying a variety of "good things" to eat and drink. Still in front of that is a Stilton cheese, flanked by more wines, and pickles.

"The sides of the window are filled with a few large exhibits, such as a 200 pound wheel of Gruyere cheese, a three gallon glass jar of corn on the cob, and a gallon bottle of champagne. Some 33 ounce potatoes occupy the front of one side, while a ham and bacon display is shown on the other."

In concluding his interview, Mr. Macklaier made the following statement:—

"There is always one article in every line by which the other are measured. The motto of the "Italian Warehouse" has always been to handle only the VERY BEST of everything, eatable and drinkable.'"

A General Delivery System Proposed for Guelph

Question Introduced at the Annual Banquet of the Retail Merchants' Association—Meets With Favorable Reception—What the Collection System Has Done For the Merchants—Value of Organization Shown.

Guelph, Nov. 16.—A plea for a united delivery system among the merchants of Guelph was one of the features at the annual banquet of the Retail Merchants' Association held here on Nov. 10th. It was made by Ald. J. A. McCrea, grocer, and has since been favorably commented upon. He believed that a great deal could be saved to merchants and customers alike, if the merchants would band together for a united delivery system as they had done in the case of their official collector system. He believed that if the merchants had all their delivery work done together they could cut off a great deal of expenditure in this respect that was really quite unnecessary. For instance, there could be a collection made early in the morning from all the stores and the parcels hurried down to a distributing place, where they could be sorted out and sent out on the various routes. Four deliveries a day might in this way be sent out to all parts of the city, and so there would be no overlapping of two or three delivery wagons going to the outskirts of the city with little parcels that could all go at once. The idea met with the hearty approval of all, and Mr. McCrea was warmly applauded.

Value of Collection System.

The work of the Guelph Association, now famous for its originality and success in establishing a general collection system, was dealt with in a paper by H. Occomore, vice-president. He reviewed the work since its organization and in an interesting manner made some reference to the benefits that had been derived by the merchants who had been wide awake enough to become members. The collector scheme was one of the phases of the work that he touched upon. He told how the bad accounts had been hustled in by the official collector in a manner that had gladdened the hearts of every member of the Association, and had convinced them all of the truth of the old proverb that in unity is strength. He claimed that the members had not yet more than begun to realize the benefits of organization and system as an association, and predicted that in a few years things which now seemed to them to be vague possibilities would be realized as great benefits just as the collector scheme had been. The collector scheme, he pointed out, though only organized in Guelph a couple of years ago, had been successfully adopted by a number of other cities and towns all over the province.

Benefits of Organization.

The names of J. M. Struthers and James Ramsay were coupled with the toast "Our Collection Department." Mr. Struthers spoke of the wonderful benefits of organization and harmony among the merchants of the city, and how that keen, good-natured rivalry would tend to improve business conditions in the city where petty rivalries of an unkindly character would only tend to retard progress. He spoke of the way the aldermen in the city council wrangled unpleasantly over unimportant points and used uncalled for personalities. This was not the best way to get along, and he hoped the Retail Merchants' Association would not degenerate in such a manner.

This toast was responded to by James Ramsay, who spoke of the efficiency of the collector scheme and the work of the association generally. He thought it all tended to better business understanding among the merchants and an improvement of business conditions in the city at large.

President B. W. Zieman and Secretary E. M. Trowern, of the Provincial Retail Merchants' Association, who were to have been present, were unavoidably prevented from attending. Consequently, there was no one to respond to the toast to the Provincial Organization, which was proposed by Ald. Waters, last year's president of the association.

Bettering Trade Conditions.

With the toast to "Our Guests" the names of Ald. Kelly as proposer, and Mayor Hastings, and Mr. Hamilton, of Galt, for responses were coupled.

Mayor Hastings spoke of the power and influence of the association, and expressed the belief that they did a great deal in the way of advertising the city and bettering trade conditions.

Mr. Hamilton, of Galt, was the only outside speaker. He told of the work that was being done by the association in his town, and said that he had greatly enjoyed and profited by the evening he had spent, and heartily invited all who could spare the time to attend their annual banquet in the Manchester town, which they would hold in the course of a few weeks.

Songs by Prof. Kelly, W. G. Howell and a duet by A. L. Williamson and Prof. Kelly were greatly enjoyed and helped to a large extent in making the proceedings enjoyable to all.

The banquet was presided over by President R. E. Nelson. G. D. Pringle one of the earliest advocates of the association, also spoke of the work that it had accomplished, yet he thought that the idea was still practically only in its infancy, and that great good could yet be derived from the association that had so far not been dreamed of.

Canadian Grain by Way of United States Ports.

Statements Made by Grain Dealers Across the Line That Insurance From Montreal is too High—This Claimed to be the Cause—Canadians Think Differently — Say That Montreal is Still the Big Shipping Point.

Statements have been made to the effect that freight and insurance rates have brought about a curious situation in connection with the shipment of grain from Canada to England. It is stated that despite the large increase in the grain output from the Canadian west, Montreal is getting less of the grain freight trade than it has had in past years.

An explanation given from a United States standpoint, is that, freight rates from, say, Boston to Liverpool are one and a half cents a bushel cheaper than from Montreal to Liverpool, and that though the extra cost of transporting the grain from the Canadian west to Boston brings the total cost of freight from the wheat fields to England to twelve and three-quarter cents in each case, the insurance on the freight from Boston is less than one-third of that on grain freight on the Montreal route, outward bound. In other words, United States ports are getting Montreal's grain export trade because the insurance rates on grain cargoes from those ports are about seventy per cent. less than those on such freight from Montreal.

Montreal Still the Port.

In discussing this question with Chas. B. Watts, secretary of the Dominion Millers' Association, he stated to The Canadian Grocer, that grain dealers would naturally ship grain by the cheapest route, but did not believe the statement that Montreal was losing her prestige as a shipping port for grain. Naturally, he said, the insurance from Montreal would be greater than from Boston, in view of the long river route to the sea, and of the narrow channel. Insurance, too, was high because of many losses recently, but nevertheless. Montreal, with the exception of a few weeks in the autumn, was the port through which the bulk of Canadian grain passed because on the whole it was the cheaper.

He pointed to the recent comment on United States grain from Duluth, and all along the Great Lakes, going abroad by way of Montreal. Grain shipments, he said, always follow the lines of least resistance, and if the insurance rates at Montreal caused the cost of shipping to be greater than via Boston, the grain would go through the latter port. Freight rates and facilities are always taken into account.

Wrong Reasons Given.

Another grain authority said that the argument used as to why Canadian grain during the last few weeks was going by way of United States ports, was entirely fallacious. He did not know whether the transportation charges as given above were correct, but as regards the extra cost of insurance out of Montreal diverting the grain, this was obviously an error. If the season of St. Lawrence navigation be taken as seven months, and the price of wheat at $1 a bushel, for five months in the season, up to the beginning of October, the extra cost per bushel for shipping out of Montreal would be 3-20c, for the month of October 3-10c, and for say three weeks in November, the extra cost would amount to ½c a bushel. It was on these last few weeks of navigation, he thought, that those interested in the United States ports based their arguments for accounting for some of the grain moving out of their ports, when the St. Lawrence is closing up.

He said that the extra cost of insurance out of Montreal over the whole season is so infinitesimally small that it is ignored by the shippers, and is more than compensated for by the better facilities for handling grain out of the port of Montreal. He maintained that if there were sufficient tonnage from the St. Lawrence to carry the grain at the time when the movement was heaviest, it would certainly be shipped from the St. Lawrence.

NOMINATION OF OFFICERS.

Business Meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association—Some are Re-elected.

The Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada held their annual nominations for officers for the coming year at St. George's Hall, Toronto, on Saturday last, Nov. 13. The president, John Gibson, was in the chair. Before calling for nominations he congratulated the meeting on the continued prosperity of the association and intimated that the current year was one of the best in its existence.

The president, John Gibson : 1st vice-president, Robert Gemmell, and 2nd vice-president, S. M. Sterling, were re-elected by acclamation. The only contest for office is that of E. Fielding and John H. Kenny for treasurer. Mr. Fielding is the present incumbent, and has held the office since 1904, when he led in the fight to retain the maximum mortuary benefit at $1,000 against the claims of several actuaries that the association should reduce the amount to be paid to members of ten years standing. Mr. Fielding, speaking at the nomination meeting, said that the claim he then set up had been verified in every particular, quoting figures in support of his contention. He also showed the amount of present liability, the number of members, and the cash reserve. The latter has increased by 51 per cent. and the liability by 21 per cent. during the past five years.

The other nominations were as follows :—

Directors for Toronto board—James G. Cane, H. B. Ellis, J. H. Lumbers, W. J. Micks, W. H. Scott, C. A. E. Colwell, W. M. Fielding, George W. Moore, M. Matthews, C. J. Tuthill, J. W. Charles, P. M. Goff, W. R. Mosey, D. H. MacKay, J. H. Wildfong, Alexander Cook, R. G. Hector, Anthony Mitchell, A. C. Rogers ; nine to be elected.

Hamilton board—1st vice-president, E. J. Fenwick ; 2nd vice-president, John Stoneman, elected by acclamation. Directors—George M. McGregor, H. G. Wright, C. C. Smye, E. O. Zimmerman, P. A. Sommerville. Six directors are to be elected.

Berlin board—Fred Doering and W. J. Moody, directors, elected by acclamation.

Kingston board—W. H. Graham and W. S. R. Murch, directors, elected by acclamation.

Guelp board — Adam Taylor, vice-president ; one director to be elected.

Brantford board—J. S. Hamilton and D. J. Waterous, directors, elected by acclamation.

Montreal board—S. O. Shorey, vice-president, elected by acclamation ; Wm. Cauldwell and D. Adair, directors, one to be elected.

Winnipeg board—H. Miller, vice-president ; A. C. Merrett, director, elected by acclamation.

Vancouver board—Fred Buscombe and Robert Stewart, directors, elected by acclamation.

Ottawa board—John Everett, director, elected by acclamation.

Brockville board—J. W. Hooke, director, elected by acclamation.

The following were elected scrutineers of the ballot—H. Clearihue, Robert Keves, and Walter Madill.

The ballots are being distributed this week and the election will close at noon on Monday, December 20. The result will be made known at the annual meeting, to be held in St. George's Hall on Thursday, December 23. A meeting of the executive will be held on Saturday next to decide upon the time and place of the annual banquet.

Among the Toronto directors, the grocery trade is represented by J. H. Lumbers, W. M. Fielding, J. W. Charles, C. J. Tuthill, and D. H. MacKay. The Hamilton grocery travelers nominated for the Hamilton directorate are C. C. Smye, Wm. Bremner and E. O. Zimmerman.

A. S. Grant, Toronto, who is one of those interested in the New Western Sugar Refinery Co., has returned from his western business trip. When asked by The Canadian Grocer, regarding the plans of the company, Mr. Grant stated that no definite location had been decided upon yet. He said, however, that it would not be in Ontario. He intimated that nothing of a positive nature would be known before Christmas.

SPLENDID FRUIT SHOWN

The Horticultural Exhibition Over—Ontario Packing Laws Inadequate.

The Ontario Horticultural Society's Annual Exhibition, which was held in St. Lawrence Arena, Toronto, covering a space of over an acre, is over. The place was beautifully decorated with bunting and evergreens, as well as brilliantly lighted and comfortably heated. While the attendance from outside of the city exceeded previous years the city people showed a lack of interest. As the object of the exhibition, under the patronage of the government, is to assist in educating those engaged in the culture of fruit, vegetables, flowers, honey, etc., to a higher understanding of these industries, it is therefore encouraging to know that the fruit, flower, and honey producers were more interested than in former years, even if the city people did not patronage it as well as they might have done.

In connection with the exhibits, regular meetings were held which were addressed by qualified men on the proper cultivation of orchards, the pruning and spraying of trees, fertilizing of the soil, and in preparing and packing the fruit for the markets of the world. Among those who spoke were E. D. Smith, Winona, Ont., J. A. Ruddick, cold storage commissioner at Ottawa, C. C. James, of the Department of Agriculture, Ontario ; R. J. Graham, Belleville, Ont.; S. R. Cornell, New York State; W. F. W. Fisher, Burlington, Ont., S. E. Todd, Guelph ; Max Smith, Burlington, and L. Caesar, Guelph.

Mr. Graham spoke on the necessity of getting more Canadian apples on the English market with profit to the growers, and proposed a scheme of co-operation in order to do so which may be considered later.

E. D. Smith contended that the packing laws in Ontario are not adequate—not strict enough. He said :

"We cannot expect assured success except through united action, not only in the townships but in the whole province. We can then make a strong recommendation for better legislation which will serve to stamp out the most prevalent diseases and pests. In some cases the inspectors themselves are not fitted for their work, and a barrel of apples which will pass one inspector will not pass another. There should be a school of training for them."

As a result of these efforts, there is a decided improvement, noticeable from year to year. The directors elected for next year were : R. B. Whyte, Ottawa ; Harold Jones, Maitland ; P. S. Wallbridge, Belleville ; W. H. Gibson, Newcastle ; R. W. Grierson, Oshawa ; L. A. Hamilton, Clarkson ; E. D. Smith, Winona ; A. Onslow, Niagara-on-the-Lake ; J. E. Johnson, Simcoe ; G. L. Hillborn, Leamington ; P. Metcalf, Blythe ; C. W. Gurney, Paris ; Adam Brown, Owen Sound.

Never before was such a superior collection of fruit exhibited in Toronto. The bushel boxes nicely packed attracted much attention, and they may be the coming package for shipping our choicest fruit. At the close of the exhibition, all the fruit which consisted of about 500 bushel boxes and 200 barrels were sold to White & Co., Toronto, who offered the highest price.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Quebec Grocer Advises the Remembering of Names—How Improvements are Being Made to Stores—Value of Constancy in Window Dressing—Success of a Yukon Grocer Who Began Business in a Tent — Systems Needed in Arranging Stock.

Meat Slicing Machines Double Sales.

St. John, Nov. 16.—It is only within the last year or two that retail grocers have taken up with the idea of installing slicing machines for bacon, cooked ham and the like, and this also has proved a good paying investment. One dealer remarked that since he had installed one of these slicing machines, his sales had about doubled. The meat was cut more uniformly and in less than half the time that it formerly took with a knife. It was important also, he said, that orders of this kind should be carefully put up. Every package of sliced meat sent from this store is wrapped in waxed paper before the ordinary wrapping paper is put on. In this way absolute cleanliness is assured and there is no possibility of the parcel reaching its destination in a greasy condition.

Suggestions to Customers.

Montreal, Nov. 16.—The value of making timely suggestions to customers is pointed out by Armand Larue with the Stanford Market.

"See what lines your customer is buying," he says, "and help her with any hints you can, as regards what may be accomplished with some particular article by the aid of some allied line. Use one to sell the other."

Don't Forget Customers' Names.

Quebec, Nov. 17.—"One of the best ways to impress a new customer is to remember her name. If necessary have a little book handy, in which names are to be entered as a customer is gained," said a Quebec merchant recently. "It will soon be unnecessary, for, with a little practice, names will not be forgotten. Put yourself in a customer's place and you can readily see the value of this little hint. You will naturally deal with a man who knows you, rather than with one who simpy acts as an automaton, selling goods only, with no particular thought as to who is buying.

"I always make it a point to call by name as many of those who come into my store as possible, and when I get a new customer, especially, I notice her appreciation of the little consideration."

Fitting up a New Store.

North Sydney, C.B., Nov. 16.—The new block erected by Kirk & Whitman, in which the grocery department is given particular prominence, is creating much favorable comment. It is in charge of B. B. Weaver, and is fitted with all the latest equipments, which class it among the best of the kind anywhere in the provinces. Not even the slightest thing is left untouched that would tend to improve. In the biscuit department a patent biscuit case, running the full length of that department, contains all the best of manufactured goods, which are protected from dust and air by an air-tight plate glass. Modern bins, the very latest for holding bulk goods, all air-tight compartments fitted with glass fronts, have been installed on one side of the store. This is perhaps, the first store in the province to be fitted with this system of dust proof, air-tight, latest device, a device that permits of intending purchasers examing their goods without handling them. In this department a full line of fresh, dainty groceries will be constantly kept, while the larger range of provisions and feeds will occupy quarters in the big warehouse in the rear of the building as well as in the rooms above the store. There are first-class delivery teams and expert clerks under the superintendence of one of the most experienced grocerymen in the country.

Address by Merchants.

Chatham, Nov. 17.—Instead of going outside the mercantile circle to secure attractions, the local merchants' association at its last meeting had as its feature an adress by J. H. Kadwell, the Grand Avenue grocer, on business methods in England. Mr. Kadwell, before coming to this country, was for many years in the grocery business in London, Eng., and his address proved quite a revelation to his hearers. It is intended to have a number of similar addresses during the winter, the merchants feeling that many helpful ideas will thus be elicited.

The association has given the official collector power of attorney to act in its behalf in instituting prosecutions against delinquent debtors.

Impression Made by Windows

Peterboro, Ont., Nov. 17.—A correspondent of The Grocer was passing a George Street grocery shop a few nights ago, and although it was closed, it being after eight o'clock, several men casually stopped to look at a new "window" that had been put in that day. One of them remarked: "These people always have something new in this window," and that same thought has frequently occurred to your correspondent. This store not only changes the display about once a week at the lowest average, but they also arrange it in such a manner with electric lights that after dark it is even more attractive than during the day.

The grocer may not realize the importance of this kind of advertising, but it must be productive of good results. A magazine ad. of some particular article may not impress itself upon the reader at first notice, but if he finds it recurring continually and in an attractive form he is bound to read it and to become interested in the article. Window advertising is much of the same nature. A window may be attractively decorated, but if it is allowed to stand too long easional dressing, or too long a time between the changes, robs them of their best effects.

Yukon Merchant Begins in Tent.

Montreal, Nov. 17.—Isaac Taylor, of Taylor & Drury, general merchants, White Horse, Yukon Territory, visited Montreal recently on business preparatory to spending a winter's holiday at his old home in Yorkshire, England. Mr. Taylor has been in business in White Horse for over ten years, and from a beginning in a small tent, has built up a trade that utilises a large store in White Horse, and several branches in the surrounding territory. He states that the mail order question, particularly in dry goods, is a serious problem for them. They endeavor to counteract this influence by keeping good stocks, and using aggressive methods of display and advertising.

The cash basis is not absolutely adhered to, as thirty-day credit is often given. Clerks receive salaries of from $150 to $175 a month, but living is very expensive, and amusements limited.

Their store is departmentized and purchases and sales of different lines kept separately. White Horse has only a population of about 250, but the transient trade and outfitting of camps makes possible a large turnover.

PERSONAL NOTES.

J. K. Chambers, with "Salada" Tea, returned Saturday from a two weeks' hunting trip in the Parry Sound district. There were eight in the party, but only six deer were bagged.

The Guelph Herald makes a lengthy reference to the marriage of Frank Everist, of McWilliam & Everist, to Miss Jessie Walker, which took place there recently. Miss Walker is a daughter of Hugh and Mrs. Walker, of Guelph.

A. McNeil, chief of the Fruit Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is seriously ill in a private hospital in Toronto. As Mr. McNeill is a very useful official his absence from the department will be felt considerably.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

A RAISE IN SUGAR.

Two weeks ago The Canadian Grocer pointed out that an early advance on refined sugar was about to be realized and advised purchasing by the retailer. A little more than a week later the advance came and those who did their purchasing prior to that time will make some money on sugar.

The raise was due to the scarcity of European sugar-beets, which will possibly be greater than was at first anticipated, and to the reported scarcity of cane raws. It took place on the eleventh and amounted to ten cents per 100 pounds.

Brokers and wholesalers are of the opinion that it will advance again in the near future as the market is yet firm for both raws and refined. The fruit season, being an excellent one, much sugar was consumed then, and as the Christmas trade is now on, it is not likely that a decline will occur, as people will have sugar to prepare the Christmas dainties, no matter how poor they are. Even buying now looks like a good investment.

THE NEED OF ADVERTISING.

Merchants throughout the country must not be misled by statements that mail-order houses are not looking out for trade in the communities in which they are doing business. The following quotation from the Palmerston (Ont.) Spectator, indicates the policy of these houses :

> A representative of the T. Eaton Co., was in Palmerston last week looking after the local customers of that big institution. He had a list of names of the T. Eaton patrons and made a personal call for the purpose of soliciting orders and stimulating trade. If the country merchants are not going to be wiped off the map, they must arouse themselves, from their lethargic condition and grapple with problems confronting them. There are ways and means of meeting the departmental store baits, but there are few country merchants who appear capable of successfully coping with the situation.

This serves to show the necessity of merchants paying more attention to the advertising of their stores and goods. They should point out through their advertising and conversations just how much a consumer loses by sending for certain goods to the mail-order houses, as such arguments cannot fail to be convincing.

LOSSES THROUGH NEGLECT.

Every grocer knows that the oyster season begins with the month of September. By the middle of October, at least, grocers and especially those in the large cities should be carrying oysters, if they profess to carry them at all. Yet this is not the case, and a consumer tells of his experience in this regard. Last week he went into a grocery store, which always makes a practice of selling oysters in season, and called for some. The grocer, however, had not yet secured a supply, and he was forced to have his wants catered to somewhere else.

Here is just where some merchants err. They neglect to stock seasonable goods at the proper time, and this neglect loses them trade, because no person wants to go into a store that he cannot depend on. The failure to have an article on sale that he should have creates an impression on the intending purchaser unfavorable to the merchant. The chances are he may go elsewhere for all his household necessities as well as for his oysters.

The grocer who secures the first stock of new oysters, or for that matter any other new article in season, and advertises it well has the best opportunity to do the best trade.

"Better too late than never" is a poor motto for a merchant.

LACK OF ADEQUATE HELP.

All merchants, if they stop to think, realize the necessity of having sufficient assistance behind the counter. As the Christmas season approaches this necessity becomes more apparent although during the year and especially on Saturday nights the trouble and loss caused by inadequate help is quite easily recognizable.

Frequently one hears complaints from customers that they can never get waited upon promptly in some stores ; nothing will tend to destroy the trade of a merchant quicker than to have some person tell this a few times. It spreads rapidly and very soon customers begin to drop off.

Prompt service is required above almost everything. If a merchant and the salesmen he employs cannot serve those who want to purchase from him without five or ten minutes delay, then he should increase his staff. If Saturday is a busy day he should secure an extra salesman or saleslady. Never allow a customer or even a transient purchaser to go away with the story that he cannot get waited on promptly in your store. Show him that you are interested the moment he enters and see to it that his wants are supplied without delay.

With Christmas only a month away make your plans for increasing your staff so that it will be efficient in catering to the wants of those who are purchasers of your produce.

THE SECRET REBATE PROBLEM.

Over in New York wholesale grocers are having trouble with secret rebates and the practice is strongly condemned by the New York Journal of Commerce. An act such as the Secret Commissions Act, would evidently be very acceptable to those who have to put up with the unfairness caused by giving secret rebates.

The Journal of Commerce says under the heading "Rebating is Dangerous" :

> One of the propositions which causes the wholesaler about as much trouble as any other is that of the practice on the part of the traveling salesman of giving rebates from his pocket. It is a two-edged sword, which hits both at the house and at the salesman. Besides the direct money involved it often places the employer in a position where the employe does something that causes much embarrassment in more ways than one.
> Too often the salesman is anxious to make a record of selling a large amount of goods and sends in his orders at regular prices, but digs down in his pocket and hands back to the buyer enough to make up the difference in the figures between what he should get and what the buyer is willing to pay.

The Markets—Predicted Sugar Advance Materializes

Refined Went Up 10 Cents Towards End of Last Week—Market Still Firm—Firm Market in all Nuts—Good Demand For Syrups and Molasses for Christmas Trade.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—10c higher.

Large Prunes—Practically none.

Grenoble Walnuts—Scarce.

Canned Goods—Firm and advancing.

Montreal, Nov. 18, 1909.

Sugar went up 10c last week, just too late for our issue. This rise has been looked for during the past few weeks by local dealers, owing to the state of the raw market, which has been showing almost continual advances. There seems to be no immediate prospect of a return to former conditions, in fact, trade is brisk at the increase, as many fear there is a still further advance not far off.

China teas are scarce, with a probable rise not far away. Japans also show firmness, but no immediate advance is looked for.

Local trade in coffee is brisk, in spite of this year having the record for the largest visible supply.

Spices throughout are firm at present quotations, but peppers, nutmegs and ginger show the most decided strength. Futures of pepper are reported as being held at a 10 per cent. advance over present quotations.

Higher grade sultanas than usual are on the market, and are quoted at 10c. large size prunes are almost exhausted, with an upward trend in price. First tide shipments of dates are reported on the water, via London. Figs are having a large sale and apricots and peaches are higher and somewhat scarce.

Grenoble walnuts are practically all gone. The general situation has been somewhat weakened by the arrival of the S. S. Jacona, with the second shipment of fruits and nuts.

Corn syrups show a decided increase in popularity, and it is to be hoped people will continue to do them justice.

Exportation is going on with a rush, in order that the last shipments may be made before the close, which is due this week. Trade generally shows decided improvement, with better prices the rule.

SUGAR — Sugar advanced 10c last week. Such an advance has been looked for by dealers for some time past, as the raw market has showed a steady and increasing strength. From present indications there will be no immediate return to former conditions. Trade is brisk at the new quotations, owing to a fear that the market may take a still further upward turn.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Syrups show a marked increase in sales during the past week. Heretofore trading has been rather light, and molasses have had the benefit of more than their fair share. From present indications they will in future have nearer an even percentage.

Molasses is having the usual increase in sale prior to the close of navigation. Prices remain steady.

TEA — Gunpowders, Pingsueys and Young Hysons are scarce and the market for these lines is steadily hardening. The season for China teas has been over for some time now and prospects are for higher prices before next season opens.

The Japan season never before came to such a sudden close. All grades of Japan teas show firmness, and advances are looked for in the future.

COFFEE—This year's visible supply of coffee establishes a new record, amounting to nearly seventeen and a half million bags, or about a half million more than the supply of 1907, the previous record year.

Local trade is brisk in spite of such large quantities being available, and prices are firm at last week's quotations.

No advance is expected until the first of the year.

SPICES—Spices are strong, though no advances are reported. Shipments from the East Indies have fallen off considerably during the past month and our visible supply shows a steady decrease. New York reports that futures are held at an advance on present quotations, so a future rise seems a certainty.

Nutmegs are firm, with gradually stiffening prices. Trading in cloves is somewhat light. Ginger is active.

DRIED FRUITS—Some Sultana raisins brought in this year are of a most exceptional quality, and bring from two to three cents more than the ordinary grades.

Large size prunes are practically gone. A few dealers still have supplies, but the majority are hoping there will be additional shipments or they will be left without altogether.

Figs are having a large sale. Apricots and peaches are higher and somewhat scarce.

First tide shipments of dates via London, are now on the water.

In general the market for Mediterranean goods remains steady and an active demand exists for stocks which have already arrived.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Rice and tapioca are very quite just at present, with the exception of Patna rice, for which there is a good demand. Improvement is looked for in the near future, owing to a gradual falling off in present supplies.

The Grocers' Review, of Manchester, Eng., gives an account of the reason for polishing rice with talc, also a defence of the process. The greatest benefit to the rice from polishing, is that it prevents the development of weevils and maggots, which are so dangerous to rice in the rough state. The percentage of talc left in the rice is so small that it makes little or no difference in its quality. Incidentally rice is much improved in appearance by the polishing.

EVAPORATED APPLES — Export shipments are now being rushed, as navigation practically closes this week. Should present warm weather continue it will stimulate the evaporated apple trade to a considerable extent.

Supplies are entirely sufficient to fill all demands to date, and prices have weakened slightly during the past week, owing to a somewhat larger supply than can readily be absorbed.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Advance of 10 cents.

Shelled Almonds and Walnuts—Higher.

Gallon Apples—Advanced.

Dried Fruits and Nuts—Good demand

Toronto, November 18, 1909.

The wholesale houses are very busy, orders are satisfactory and the outlook is bright and rosy for a good holiday trade. Some of the money paid out for wheat in the northwest is finding its way into their coffers.

Everybody is talking Christmas goods now and the business done in sugar, raisins, currants, figs, dates and nuts is putting to the background other articles. This trade has begun in earnest and retailers are now stocking up for a heavy turnover.

Sugar advanced during the week ten cents per cwt., due to the strong market in raws. This advance was anticipated as was mentioned in the issue of two weeks ago.

All nuts are firm, due to the advance in shelled almonds and walnuts caused by their scarcity.

Canned goods are firm, particularly peas and fruits. The demand for gallon apples from the Canadian Northwest and from the British market has been excellent and was the chief cause for their advance.

Collections are good, showing that the farmers are realizing on their grain and fruit crops.

SUGAR—On November 11 the price of sugar advanced 10 cents per cwt., due to the scarcity of raws and principally to the scarcity of European raw-beets. This advance was expected in view of the above mentioned market conditions and the new prices are firm. Raw Muscovado and crystals are from 25 to 30 cents per cwt. higher than they were six weeks ago. Many retailers make a practice of stocking a sack or two of these raw varieties for their Christmas trade for cakes, plum puddings, etc., and now should be the time to stock it.

NUTS—The new crop of nuts will be in this week and will soon be in the hands of the retailers for Christmas trade. Retailers should be sure to get new stock, if they pay the price for them. Shelled walnuts are selling to the jobber at from 5 to 6 cents more than a year ago and shelled almonds from 9 to 10 cents more. The crop shortage in France and Spain is the cause for this and it has the effect of strengthening up other lines.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—A decided firmness is shown by nearly all lines of canned goods, and some firms have already advanced their prices. Canners have already done so, and local men will be quick to take advantage of the situation.

TORONTO—The general tendency of the canned goods market is to firmer prices. Peas are scarce and high, with no chance of weakening. There are little tomatoes and corn moving. While the supply on hand is represented as considerable, yet this is a sort of a between season, with buyers, and consequently little is doing. Golden Wax canned beans are a scarce commodity. Fruits are high, particularly gallon apples, which recently advanced. This was due to the big demand from the Northwest, and also the excellent export call from the Liverpool and Glasgow markets, where prices are good. Some late sockeye and cohoe salmon is selling now, on account of the late deliveries. Wholesalers expected to get their supplies some time ago.

VANCOUVER MARKETS.

Vancouver, Nov. 17, 1909.

There is little difference in local markets. Selected eggs from the East are still to be had at 33c jobbing price, with a quotation or two at 34c as conditions may warrant. Local eggs are hardly in the reckoning and the eastern stock is greatly in demand, as with improved methods of packing and quick transportation they arrive in good condition, the selecteds being fit for boiling. Locals are paid for at 65c and 70c when they are obtainable, but with good easterns most buyers find this price somewhat high.

Spanish onions are on the market at $2.25 to $4. Grain and flour are the same in price, but feed wheat is $2 a ton cheaper, being now $38.

Almonds are high in price, and the outlook is that this nut, which is much in demand for Christmas trade, will retail at 50c instead of 40c per pound this season. Almonds have the best of the trade here, for years walnuts did not arrive in time to be of use. The walnuts from California are here before Christimas but the grenobles from France are generally about a week or two late.

HALIFAX MARKETS.

Halifax, Nov. 18,1909.

Business brisk and firm prices, briefly summarize the condition of the local grocery markets. Produce is now coming on the market in large quantities, and prices in these lines show an easier tendency. The exports of apples continue heavy, two steamers sailing from Halifax this week loaded to the hatches with fruit for the British market. The price of apples is a little easier, and the quality of the stock coming on the market now is improving. The crop of Gravensteins is pretty nearly exhausted, and the apples of this variety now on the market are ripening fast and will not keep much longer.

Bad weather of late has caused an easing off in arrivals of fish, and also has made it difficult to cure the later trips of the bankers. Last arrivals of the fleet are reported with from 500 to 600 quintals, and a United States banker has just reported at Sydney with 500,000 lbs., said to be the largest single fare ever taken. This shows that fish still continue abundant on the regular grounds, and it would have paid the bulk of the fleet to have made another trip after their summer catch was landed.

CALGARY MARKETS.

Calgary, Nov. 18, 1909.

It is not unlikely that potatoes will again next spring command a very high price. It is reported from Manitoba points that large quantities have been frozen in the ground. It appears during the long autumn season of fine weather the farmers had devoted all their time to threshing and fall plowing and had evidently neglected "potato digging" until a severe frost caught a lot of them. The Alberta crop was a good one, but not large enough to supply the heavy demand. B. C. potatoes, always popular in this market, are being brought in in large quantities; the price is yet reasonable, but dealers say it will advance sharply in the near future.

The market on California dried fruits continues firm. Apricots and peaches are steadly advancing. Advices from the coast indicate the crop nearly out of growers' hands.

Winnipeg, Nov. 18, 1909.

The long period of beautiful weather has come to an end with the pronounced appearance of Jack Frost. The open fall has meant much to the general trade of the west. Local stores have been visited freely by customers daily, and the past month's purchases have been very large. The consequence is that retailers' stocks are low and orders for immediate deliveries are quite heavy. The same is true of all parts of the west. Other cities have been blessed with, perhaps, the longest Indian summer weather in its history, and an apparent summer trade has been the result. Rural merchants were particularly fortunate, the roads being in excellent condition and everything was conducive to bring customers to the stores. The winter, which has apparently at last come, will give merchants an opportunity to stock up where they are weak and arrange for the supply of winter goods. The holiday goods are almost all in the retailers' hands, but they are not to be seen thus far. The Christmas trade is going to be enormous, since heavy stocks of high-class goods have been moving out in large quantities. The display features will no doubt, be excellent in fancy goods. During the week retailers were delivered their foreign dried fruits. The figs are said to be the most delicious that have ever appeared on the market and the displays in these alone are fine. Raisins are also in and the quality is good. The raisin market is likely to be much higher owing to the California corner. The tone of the market is upward and several important advances are reported this week. The demand keeps up well, and that really healthy economic condition prevails where the demand is greater than the supply.

SUGAR—The market has gone up again 10 cents. The manipulation on the N. Y. market has advanced the price. The trade here is good in all lines. The icing sugar trade has lately revived.

BUSINESS BRISK IN HAMILTON.

Northwest Orders Being Filled—Butter and Egg Market Still High—The Peddling By-Law.

Hamilton, November 18.—Business in grocery lines is brisk here. The wholesalers are completing their Northwest orders. The trade in that section has been heavy, and warehouse men have, in some houses, been compelled to work at night for some time. One firm had to double their staff to get caught up. Retailers also report trade better than for some time. Markets continue high, butter, eggs and poultry being as dear as at holiday times. Large quantities of grapes are still offering and if outside dealers are not supplied, they should order at once before it is too cold to ship.

The peddling and huckstering by-laws are still looming up largely before the Grocers' Association, and it is hoped that President Ald. Forth, who is likely to be re-elected, will bring some legislation before the council which will change the complexion of the present by-law.

W. Scanlon, Fergus, Ont., has sold to G. W. Jamieson.

Snowdon & Borland, manufacturers' agents, Montreal, have dissolved partnership, and in future the business of the firm will be carried on by J. Walter Snowdon, at 413 St. Paul St.

An Estimate of this Season's Bean Production

Crop in Western Ontario Stated to be Twenty Per Cent. Better Than in 1908—A Grand Total of 856,800 Bushels—Quality, Too, is Better—Importance of Beans as a Food.

Special correspondence.

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 16. — From an acreage slightly over 50,000, Canadian bean growers will this year harvest, according to the figures of N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co., 856,800 bushels of beans.

This comes pretty close to the estimate of 900,000 bushels which Mr. Stevens made earlier in the season, when the situation was more problematic than it is now.

From his boyhood on the farm, Mr. Stevens has been closely associated with the bean industry, graduating from the farm to the grain and milling business. He relates with pride that he had the honor of using the second-bean planting machine ever used in Canada. The first was brought to Kent by Collins Handy, Sr., now living at Highgate

In an interview with respect to this year's bean situation, Mr. Stevens said:

"The bean crop this year will be fully twenty per cent. better than that of last year. In addition, the beans will be of a better quality. The beans are in excellent condition and very few will run over two-pound pickers. My estimate is that there are 50,000 acres of pea beans in Ontario, in addition to a small acreage of other varieties. I calculate the yield as follows:

"Pea beans, 50,000 acres, at 17 bushels per acre—850,000 bushels.

"Yellow eyes, 200 acres, at 20 bus. per acre—4,000 bus.

"Marrows, 100 acres, at 18 bus. per acre—1,800 bus.

"Black turtle soups, 50 acres, at 20 bus. per acre—1,000 bus.

"This makes a total of 856,800 bus.

"Out of the 50,000 acres of beans grown in Ontario, all are in Kent and Elgin counties, with the exception of 10,000 acres. A number of years ago only the Townships of Harwich and Howard, in Kent, produced beans. Now they are being raised successfully anywhere south of a line drawn from Bowmanville to Sarnia.

"Canada has a production approximating 900,000 bushels. Practically all of these beans are consumed in Canada alone, and few, if any, are exported to foreign countries—that is, all are consumed except those required for the spring planting.

"Some of the early beans this year did not thresh over 10 bushels to the acre, while others have been reported threshing as high as 35 bushels.

"We will require to plant more beans each year in the future or we will have to import more from other countries. Our population is rapidly increasing as the days go by, and the people are becoming educated into the use of the product more and more every year.

"Yet, not one-half of the beans are consumed that should be; the bean is, in my opinion, the most nutritious and wholesome food that comes to the table, and if many of our citizens not blessed with too many dollars would eat beans, they could live better and not spend more than half the money.

E. G. De Coriolis, chemist, with the Edwardsburg Starch Co., Cardinal, Ont., is receiving congratulations these days in view of the arrival of the stork presenting him with a daughter.

The Business Situation on the Pacific Coast

New Vancouver Commission House—Ontario Apples go to British Columbia—New Fruit Cannery Proposed.— Preparations for the Herring Fishing.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 16.—Andrews & Nunn, of Vancouver, have sold their retail business and have opened offices at 140 Water Street, Vancouver, as manufacturers' agents and wholesale commission merchants. Both Mr. Andrews and Mr. Nunn have been connected with the grocery trade on the coast for the past 15 years. Both were formerly connected with the wholesale trade. Their new venture is, therefore, not a new experience for them. Mr. Andrews was a member of the executive of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association and also a member of executive of the Provincial Grocers.

With local apples at $2.25 per box wholesale, prices are higher than for some seasons past, consequent upon the partial crop this year. With an eye to business, the Vancouver Trading Company imported a carload of apples from Ontario, and they are selling well. These are disposed of at $6 per barrel, which is a much different price from that paid by many Ontario people here in the days when they used to duck for them on Hallowe'en. The retail price of any good table apple is three pounds for 25c. In the consignment from Ontario were spics, kings and gravensteins, the first variety being already sold out.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trade of Summerland, B.C., a town located in the southern part of the Okanagan district, the question of ways and means for a fruit cannery was raised, and after a lengthy discussion it was decided that the secretary should look into the matter and report. To arrive at fairly exact knowledge, a census will be taken of the fruit trees in the district and the probable production.

It was shown at a meeting of the Fruit Growers' Syndicate at Nelson last week that co-operation among the growers pays, and that the expenses for this season was only five per cent. On a larger quantity handled, this figure would likely have dropped to four per cent. It is expected that the membership will be much larger next year.

An Ontario man who will go into the fruit growing business in Kootenay is C. Hoggart, of Chatham, who has bought a ranch of fifteen acres at Creston.

Tae order has been issued that seine fishing is not to be allowed in Nanaimo harbor, although they may be used in Departure Bay. It means that there will be a chance for gill netters in Nanaimo harbor when the herring arrive at the latter end of next month. Big preparations are being made for the herring fishery, which is assuming larger proportions this year than ever. A cannery is being built at Nanaimo, and seine fishing in Departure Bay will enable a supply to be obtained at a fair rate. Japanese are largely interested in the herring fishery, though new companies are each year seeing the possibilities of this industry.

DISCUSSED SOCIAL EVENTS.

Toronto Retail Grocers' Association Will Make Merry This Winter.

Toronto, November 16.—An "At-Home" and dance has been decided upon as the variety of entertainment to be held by the Retail Grocers' Association which met in regular session on Monday night, November 15th. Although the exact date has not been arranged, it will take place some time in February. In addition to this the grocers intend holding some sort of banquet about the first of the year for members and their friends. This will be a meeting of business men to talk upon trade matters of the present day.

The Hall Committee for the At-Home is composed of David Bell, Bailey Snow and A. J. Conium, and the committee to consider the other proposal is made up of Fred Thorne, F. W. Johnston, and J. S. Bond.

The association also decided to enter two teams in the College Bowling League. They will be captained by Fred Thorne and J. C. Beaumont respectively.

During the discussion on the proposal to hold some kind of entertainment, J. S. Bond made a significant remark when he said: "We are too far away from the wholesalers; we would like to meet them and understand each other better for we have many things to tell them." The retailers have many complaints to make and it apparently is working towards a meeting between the two to come to some better agreements in trade matters.

The chair was occupied by Donald MacLean.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Hints to the Trade Supplied by Sellers.

A report comes from Fresno, California, U. S. A., that the California raisin crop has been cornered by L. F. Giffin & Co. Watt & Scott, Toronto, are the agents for the Giffin Co., and W. H. Escott represents them in Winnipeg.

Albert McLean, of the Canadian Cocoanut Co., Montreal, reports business as being especially brisk. McLean's white moist cocoanut is away oversold, the firm being three weeks behind in orders. Bakers' and confectioners' supplies are reported as moving particularly well, too.

A short time ago a letter was delivered at the office of the "Salada" Tea Co., 198 West Broadway, New York City, addressed "Ceylon Tea Co., America." This week a letter addressed, "Wholesale Tea Co., Toronto," was delivered at the Toronto office of the firm. This looks as if "Salada" was recognized as the leading tea firm in both Canada and the United States.

Quite of every-day use is the saying "grateful and comforting," and the phrase is always associated with the well-known brand of "Epp's Cocoa." As an article of diet nothing more wholesome and nourishing can be recommended than "Epp's." For giving strength to the system, for making good the daily waste that is going on and for supplying good food and drink at the same time, this particular cocoa is pre-eminent. It contains a remarkable percentage of cocoa-butter—a vitalizing substance. As a cold resister there is nothing so effective, and children thrive on "Epp's Cocoa."

CHEESE

Compare prices asked for cheese to-day with the prices asked for either lard or butter, and you must realize how cheap it is in comparison. It is also cheaper than at this time last year. We will not predict higher prices, but we recommend purchase of what stock you may require for your winter trade.

Serious Scarcity Reported in First-class Eggs

Montreal Dealers are Much Concerned—Receipts Rapidly Falling off—Storage Stock Already Being Drawn Upon — Hog Market Easier—Large Quantities of Poultry Coming in.

Much concern is being shown by Montreal egg dealers over the scarcity of first-class eggs. This is becoming more noticeable every day and shows this week both in an advance of prices one cent, and in the statistics on receipts. The price of new laid eggs is now 35c, of selects 29c, with other lines showing a corresponding advance. Receipts for the week showed a falling off of over 2,000 cases as compared with the corresponding week last year. The decrease has been continual of late, and is gradually growing more noticeable.

The result of this situation is that dealers are already drawing largely on stored stocks, which are seldom touched at this time. When cold weather sets in the full effect will be more evident, as supplies are bound to decrease with the coming of snow. Consumption is reported as being considerably greater this year, and this combined with a shortage in storage supplies, and a shortage in incoming stocks, will certainly result in a serious situation during the latter part of the winter season. Of course we can do without eggs, but no one doubts the fact that there is not a better, or more nutritious article of food than a good egg. It is certainly up to the farmers, from a business standpoint alone, to see that next year does not prove a repetition of the situation this fall.

The run of hogs during the last two weeks has been more liberal, but the prices have been fully maintained. Packers, however, claim that the price is too high for storing purposes, and can only be paid as long as the demand takes it as it becomes ready. While the large percentage is required for local consumption, there is also a good export demand for all the surplus. The market in England is firm.

The butter situation is quiet, too quiet altogether to suit large holders, and as one dealer expressed himself this morning, "I would rather be a seller than a buyer at present prices." The mild weather continuing, with fairly good pasture so late in the season has its effect on the market, which may be felt all winter. So far the local requirements were all supplied with fresh made butter and therefore the cold storage butter has scarcely yet been touched. By all appearances the winter make of butter will be normal and unless some outside point will open up for some of our butter, the chances are that we may see a slump before we see another crop of new grass butter. There is nothing in sight at present that would indicate higher prices. Every article of food has its limit and when butter reaches the point of 30c a lb., it has little room to go much higher. A large proportion of our people cannot afford to pay it, and they will have to do without it, and when the consumption drops off it will soon come to its proper level. Our cheese and butter market all summer has been sluggish. This is owing to the fact, which is now becoming apparent, that the markets for all dairy products were opened too high in the spring. Sueculators bought at dangerous prices, and in many cases could not turn over at a profit. To break the price which, however, was all summer a little too high for our regular customers in England, would have meant a loss on what had been bought before.

Experience has taught us that to get more for an article than it is worth is not always so much gained. With a fair margin for buyers always brings the best results in the end.

MONTREAL.

Live and dressed hogs are somewhat easier, owing to a considerable supp'y over present demands. Trade is somewhat dull, as usual, at this time of year, and no decided improvement is looked for until snow flies.

There are no changes in other lines of the provision market.

BUTTER—Continuous strengthening of the situation is going on. Dealers are still holding back to enable them to cope with the winter trade. Some dealers are now quoting 27c for creamery prints, though most of the quotations are the same as last week, 26½c.

Receipts for the week show a decrease of 1,248 packages from the corresponding week last year—5,422 packages as against 6,670 packages same week last year. For the season they are 352,786 packages as against 384,099 packages same season 1908, also showing a considerable decrease.

CHEESE — This week will probably mark the close of navigation, and for this reason cheese has been much more active than last week. Dealers are not anxious to pay winter freight rates.

Most of the factories are closed for the season and stocks are pretty well disposed of, or will be by the end of the week.

Receipts for the week show an increase, which, however, does not show the true situation. Last year much of the cheese that is now coming to Montreal for export was shipped from points down the river. Supplies are about the same as last year. The figures are for the week, 43,476 boxes as against 41,139 boxes same week last year. For the season they are 1,894,604 boxes, against 1,855,552 boxes same season 1908.

EGGS—Shortage of supplies is causing a serious condition in the egg market. For a number of weeks the supplies have been far short of last year's, and this week there is a loss of about 2,200 cases. This has caused not only an advance in price of 1c, but dealers have had to draw largely on their winter stocks to fill orders, and from present indications we will see high prices after cold weather sets in.

Receipts for the week are 1,536 cases, as against 3,717 cases same week last year. For the season they are 184,319 cases, as against 188,353 cases for the same season 1908. Eggs are being so much more generally used that the figures for the season, though showing a slight decrease, do not tell the whole story. Montreal is short of good eggs, and will probably continue so throughout the winter.

POULTRY — Activity in the poultry market is pronounced, owing, of course, to the season. Christmas trade is beginning to be felt, and inquiries for large lots of poultry have been numerous, some coming from the far western towns. Dealers expect a record-breaking year from present prospects.

Prices being paid for poultry are the same as last week, and supplies are not coming in any too freely. Country grocers will find a ready market for any poultry they can obtain.

HONEY—Strained clover is ½c higher, owing to a decided increase in demand. Supplies are fair, sufficient to hold the price comparatively steady. The general tone continues strong and a further advance would not be a surprise to local dealers. Farmers do not seem to be devoting as much time to bees as in former years, and a falling off of supplies from their present state would have considerable effect on prices.

PROVISIONS—The supply of hogs is a little more liberal, but the price has not been affected since last week.

The local demand for cured meats keeps well up to expectations, although, due to the season of the year, it has lost some of its keenness. On the whole the outlook is more hopeful and more satisfactory.

BUTTER—The supply of fresh made dairy butter has increased. This is partly owing to the recent mild weather and rather good pasture, and also to the fact that some of the cheese factories have closed down, and the milk is now made into butter.

CHEESE—The cheese market is dull and the prices are held at factory points, from 11½ to 11¾. This has been the ruling price all summer, with scarcely a change of half a cent. The local demand is fair, and there is an increase in the general turnover. Grocers should not forget that cheese is still much cheaper than meat, and they should point this out to their customers. Some grocers have increased their sales by recommending to their customers the grinding of it through their meat choppers. This will, by adding a little butter, practically give them a fancy cheese.

CONFERENCE ON FOOD STANDARDS.

Manufacturers of Meat Products Visit the Capital to Suggest Changes.

A delegation of Canadian pork packers from the Food Product Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association recently visited Ottawa to confer with Chief Analyst, A. McGill, of the Inland Revenue Department, regarding the proposed new Food Standards. Andrew Gunn, of Gunns Limited, when interviewed by The Grocer, stated that the conference was merely to talk over the standards as already drawn up and to give the manufacturers, who have had practical experience, an opportunity to suggest changes and additions. The meeting in Ottawa was, therefore, more to get information from practical men than for the pork-packers to find fault with the proposed standards, as they were drawn up. From the fact that some of the proposed standards were altogether impracticable, the Government realizes more and more the necessity of consulting the men who have had a practical knowledge of the manufacture of the goods.

Establishing food standards must be admitted to be a difficult problem, which requires time and the most careful investigation, and the information needed must come from practical men, as well as from chemists.

The delegates were well pleased with their visit, and feel satisfied that the department is anxious to do the best it can on this line for the people, without causing any unnecessary trouble to the manufacturers.

PEDDLING NUISANCE IN MONTREAL.

Montreal, Nov. 16, 1909.

The regular monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held in their offices, 270 St. Catherine St. East. Owing to the illness of a relative, the president, J. A. Dore, was unavoidably absent and his chair was occupied by the 1st vice-president, J. D. Boileau. Other officers present were, J. I. Lussier, 2nd vice-president; A. Sarrazin, secretary; A. Laniel, treasurer. About twenty members were in attendance.

A resolution was passed that the proper officers be authorized to communicate with the provincial government at Quebec, at least 30 days before the next session, asking for an amendment to the present peddling law, in order to prevent the selling to private houses by brewery peddlers, which is daily becoming of more alarming proportions.

Vice-president Boileau announced that the question of raising the Monutreal peddler's license from $50 to $200 was to come before the city council this month, and he advised all members, and any other grocers and butchers who would, to be present at this session if possible, as it was a matter of the utmost importance to every retailer that this change should be made.

The question of early closing next came up, and it was decided as a test of the law, to write the chief of police, in the name of the association, asking that he prosecute any who disobey the law to close at seven o'clock on Wednesday and Thursday nights. It is hoped something definite may be accomplished in this way, as at present the law is a dead letter.

Rolled Oats Market Stirred by the Speculators

Decline in Montreal and a Fall and Rise in Toronto — Flaked Wheat Advances on Account of High Raw Market—Flour at a Standstill this Week—The Wheat Market Sluggish.

The general wheat market is sluggish and somewhat perplexing. Millers are pretty well filled up and the flour market also is getting well supplied. Buying therefore is slow and dull. Lake elevators are also well loaded up at the close of navigation, and the wheat on the whole was well handled and is in good shape.

From present appearance a decline is more likely than a raise. Prices are regarded too high to lead to any degree of activity in trade. It is, however, a usual thing for the market to be dull so near the close of navigation.

Rolled oats dropped 10 cents during this week but recovered that again so far as the Toronto market is concerned. Wheat products are higher, due to the high prices of wheat.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Farmers still are waiting for colder weather and higher prices before they let go their wheat. There seems no doubt that the very large crops of this season will eventually give millers all the wheat they want, but so far supplies are rather scarce. Best winter wheat patents are particularly hard to obtain. Prices are unchanged.

ROLLED OATS—Competition among the dealers has lowered prices in all lines of rolled oats and oatmeal. It is only thought to be temporary to meet present conditions, and prices are expected to be back to their former level soon.

Trade is brisk and supplies are unusually good.

FEED.—Owing to the warm weather few have begun to lay in their winter stocks of feed, which has caused a dullness in the market. FLOUR—The local market is steady with no change in prices. Winter wheat is not any too plentiful. Farmers do not seem to be in a hurry to bring it out, even at $1.08 to $1.09 a bushel.

CEREALS—The high prices existing for wheat have caused manufacturers of wheat products to advance their prices. Last Friday an advance of 2c per bushel was made equal to a little more than 4 cents per barrel. That together with the advance of 1c per bushel on the 4th inst. put prices up altogether about 5½c per barrel. One Toronto manufacturer of flaked wheat quotes prices by the barrel (not more than 20 barrels) at $2.95 delivered to points in eastern Ontario.

During the week rolled oats declined 10 cents, due principally to the speculative interests, but since it has recovered. Grain is steady and receipts from local farmers are light. The quotations are:

BULK OYSTERS A PROFITABLE SIDE LINE.

St. John, Nov. 16.—Many St .John grocers are now handling oysters in bulk. This is an entirely new departure for the dealers who heretofore have only sold the bivalves in cans. The new method of carriers has brought about the change, for now oysters can be handled as easily as bulk pickles. Practically all the larger dealers have adopted the new plan, and they report that it is a very profitable side line.

Making Your Dollar Travel Faster

IF YOU, Brother Grocer, invest a certain amount of money in—say—baked beans, fireworks, flour or any other line which you handle, and then sell at an advance of one dollar, you have made a dollar gross.
If you use the same money for the purchase of similar goods and make five such deals in a year---haven't you cleared five dollars ?

If you have $2,000 in your flour business and are able to turn it over five times a year, you are on the same level as the man who has $20,000 and turns it over but once.
Isn't that the way YOU figure, Brother Grocer?

Flour once bought, you know, must be sold before the money can be reinvested---before you can bank any profit. If you have even a single dollar locked up in some slow-coach flour brand, go after it tooth and nail and get that dollar out, even if you get only 90 cents for it. FIVE ROSES keeps your money travelling, Brother Grocer, makes it earn something all the time.
Besides building a reputation for flour service, binding each customer to the "Quality Store."

Better have your money in a savings bank at 3 per cent. at the end of the year than in some musty flour sack or leaky barrel at nothing at all.
They say FIVE ROSES makes your dollar work faster and harder, and you don't have to wait until the end of the year to clip the coupons off the dividends.

• • • •

If a word to the wise is sufficient, Brother Grocer---What then?

Description of the Egg Plant and its Origin—Grown in Canada to a Considerable Extent—The Recipe for Préparing it — A Delicious Food.

EGG PLANT—Guinea squash, or as it is more commonly known, egg plant, originally was grown only in the East Indies. It has always been a great favorite with the natives of Syria and Greece, and also with the Jewish people. Of late other nations are beginning to appreciate its good qualities as a table accessory, and the demand is increasing by leaps and bounds. In Montreal alone, during the past year, over one thousand dozen were used and the use is proportionate in other sections of the country.

The original Canadian demand came naturally from the foreign element who have settled here, but as they are all being gradually absorbed by the Canadian nation, the liking has spread until now the consumers number many among the native born of our country.

Until lately the egg plant was grown only in tropical countries, but for the past few years, they have been grown in nearly all sections of the United States and Canada, particularly on Long Island and in southern Michigan, where local demand is large.

How Grown in Canada.

In Canada they are usually started under glass and transplanted into rich, deep loam, with a good exposure to the sunlight, only after all danger of frost is past.

The insect enemies are about the same as those which attack potatoes, and the remedies for which are well known. With care they can be grown to advantage in almost any part of the Dominion, and grocers would do well to see that they are grown in their own district. A ready sale will be found for them, once the people have been shown how to prepare them properly.

Makes Delicious Dish.

In case the question is put to a grocer, how do you use them? the following recipe is given:—

> Peel and cut into slices ¼ inch thick; put the sections on a heavy plate, with salt in between each layer. A second heavy plate on top of the pile makes a very effective press, with some heavy weight, such as an iron placed on top. Leave the vegetable in the press about twenty minutes. Pour off all the juice and wash each piece thoroughly. Fry in bread crumbs as you would oysters. This will be found a delicious dish, and what is better, will help sales.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SYRUP AND MOLASSS.

Explanation Given by Chemist on a Much Discussed Question.

The question has recently been asked, What is the difference between molasses and syrup? and not many have been found who can answer it. E. G. de Coriolis, chemist, with the Edwardsburg Starch Co., Cardinal, Ont., has supplied the following information regarding the difference:—"It is generally considered that molasses is a product of the raw sugar factory, and syrup of the refinery. In the manufacture of raw sugar from cane, after concentrating the juices and crystallizing out the sugar, the thick, dark residue that is left is called "molasses." This substance retains the aromatic substances present in the cane, hence its value. Syrup is the product of the refinery. The raw sugar is made into a thick liquid, and then passed over bone black and afterwards concentrated and cystallized out; the thick liquid remaining being the "syrup" of commerce. This substance, unlike molasses, has lost the original aroma and flavor of the cane, and taken up, often to a very objectionable degree, the bone flavor.

"To sum up then, we can say that "molasses" is the pure, original syrup from the cane, whereas "syrup" has undergone treatment, which has deprived it of the cane flavor."

CANADIAN TOBACCO BETTER.

Harry A. Conant, Windsor, Ont., United States consul, writes: The chairman of the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada was asked at Montreal if the report was correct that they had bought the Ontario tobacco crop. His answer was that tobacco grown in Canada today was superior to the American-grown leaf from the same type of seed, for the reason that the soil in the United States has been used for a number of years and the Canadian soil is practically virgin soil for tobacco-growing purposes, and therefore produces a better quality. The proof of this is that the consumption is constantly increasing. Furthermore, the protection given to Canadian-grown tobacco over imported leaf since the present Government has been in power has enabled the manufacturer to pay the farmer a good price for his product.

Grapes Rapidly Disappearing From the Market—Winter Apples Coming in Large Quantities—Potatoes a Shade Firmer—Some New 'Hot-house Tomatoes—Fish Trade Spoiled by Warm Weather.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS — Jamaica oranges and grape fruit have made their appearance in quantity on the market and find a ready sale, owing to the quality being somewhat better than usual. The oranges are quoted by the barrel, $4.50.

Valencia oranges are higher, also lemons and cocoanuts.

Almeria grapes are on the market at $5.50 per keg, and are pronounced of very good quality.

Larger quantities of winter apples have somewhat weakened prices and indications are that they will be even lower.

Malaga grapes are gone, as are most of the local varieties.

FISH—Warm weather during the past week has interfered a good deal with the sale of fresh and smoked fish, but happily the stocks are light. The green cod market has stiffened up a little on account of rumors that no fish should be expected from the north shore. Upon inquiry the trade found that supplies were ample to satisfy all demands so the price will probably not go higher than it is to-day.

Plenty of frozen fish are on the market and in transit from the Pacific coast and Manitoba Lakes, the latter to be on the market soon.

Trade is looking up generally on account of the near approach of Advent about the last of November.

GREEN FRUITS—Apples are the leading fruit on the market, and receive the best attention. That it pays the farmer to grow good fruit, and then pack them carefully is evident from the fact that some apples can be bought at $1 a barrel and others sell as high as $6. Extra choice, of the best varieties in one bushel boxes, sell for $2.25 to $3. The first car of California navel oranges arrived, but the late Valencia's and Floridas have the preference for immediate use. Almeria grapes are firm at $5.50 to $7 per keg. There are still considerable grapes, but they are getting stale and almost any offer would be accepted for them.

It is quite a surprise to see fresh picked tomatoes, hot house grown, at 25c a lb., showing that wonderful progress is being made in growing vegetables in hot houses, which will in a short time keep our markets supplied all the year round.

DEMANDING HIGHER PRICES.

At a meeting of farmers residing in the vicinity of Launching, P.E.I., the low price offering for potatoes was discussed and the following resolution was adopted last week :

"Whereas, potatoes cannot be grown for the price now offering, and whereas, present conditions will allow of an increase in price ; therefore resolved, that the farmers of Launching and vicinity hold their potatoes until they receive at least twenty-five cents."

The farmers claim that as there is only about half a crop, better prices should be obtained.

LIMA BEAN MARKET RIGGED.

J. K. Armsby, of Chicago, states that the lima bean market is being held up by speculators purchasing everything that comes in sight, without regard to the demand. The crop he says is an excellent one. Neither retailers nor jobbers are interested in selling and "there is a big difference between the trade being for or against an article as the syndicate will find out before they finish."

Mr. Armsby recommended hand-to mouth purchasing until the syndicate get ready to trade at prices within reason.

BIG TURNIP CROP OF P. E. I.

Frank Deedmeyer writes from Charlottetown that the 1909 crop of turnips and other roots in Prince Edward Island is estimated at 4,500,000 bushels, or about 20 per cent. of the production of all Canada. The home consumption of turnips is about one-half, the surplus being shipped to New Brunswick and Newfoundland, and if prices are high there in the spring, to Boston. Prices last year were 14 cents per bushel f.o.b. Charlottetown and Summerside. As hay and other feed stuffs are abundant this year, 12 cents is the expected price this fall.

No More Bad Bills

There's absolutely no excuse for a grocer to complain of bad bills. There's a way to hold the credit customer in check and avoid losses.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10 — No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

Talking to the Point

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS get right down to the point at issue. If you want something, say so in a few well-chosen words. Readers like that sort of straight-from-the-shoulder-talk, and that is the reason why condensed ads are so productive of the best kind of results.

CLASSIFIED WANT ADS are always noticed. They are read by wide-awake, intelligent grocers, who are on the look-out for favorable opportunities to fill their requirements.

TRY A CONDENSED AD IN THE CANADIAN GROCER.

A concrete example of one way in which The Canadian Grocer brings buyer and seller together

"Kindly send me sample copy of your paper. I am opening up a grocery store here and would like to have the names of the best houses before me."

You see in what light the retailer regards the firm who ask for his business through The Grocer. He classes them as the most progressive in their line—the houses out hard after business, appreciative when they get it, and always trying to give a little better service than anyone else.

A Great Selling Team

Buyers must be moved through several steps to be brought to the buying point.

¶ They must have their attention attracted to the article. They must have their interest in it awakened. They must be informed as to its nature, utility and merits. They must be convinced of its value. They must be moved to action to closing.

¶ Good salesmen and good trade-paper advertising make a great team to carry the buyer through these several stages to the buying point. Alone, the salesman is at a disadvantage.

Cox's Gelatine

Pure—absolutely pure, and hence certain to produce the most economic results for the cook. Powdered or Shredded as the cook prefers, but always fulfilling the most exacting requirements.

Candied or Drained, but in either case admitting of no argument as to their high quality. Made from specially imported fruit skins from which the essential oil has not been extracted. Lemon, Citron and Orange.

MR. GROCER,

Have you ever stopped to think over the question as to which of the most popular Package Teas gives you the best returns? Compare our prices against other package teas you are handling. We think you will soon see, with the popularity Blue Ribbon Tea has with the General Public to-day, that, if you are not handling our lines, it would be to your advantage to do so.

—of all the many brands now before the public—perhaps stands in higher favor than any other.

The reason is not far to seek. Every suggestion or contrivance that care, skill, science or sanitation can afford, has been embodied in the manufacture of these famous goods.

We intend to maintain at any cost our reputation for highest quality and unequalled purity, and we guarantee each can positively to contain no other fruit or vegetable but that which the label indicates. No preservative is either required or added in canning. Order from your jobber.

Your Success

is best attained by care in the selection of your stock of goods. The ability to choose between articles that move rapidly and those that hang fire as it were---that pile up "dead stock."

Now, you know what makes goods move quickly. Advertising---to create the initial demand. Quality---to make them repeat. More advertising---to convince additional consumers and to suggest new uses.

Pure Gold

(Trade Mark Registered)

are getting the advertising---you've seen the copy in the Canadian newspapers, magazines and street cars. You will continue to see it.

They have the quality---the purity, deliciousness and wholesomeness to bring repeat order after repeat order. This has been proved for years---before we even thought of advertising them.

Do You Carry the Pure Gold Line?

(Trade Mark Registered)

If not, it will pay you to do so---there's a profit for you.

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped from Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

Ever Handle Skates

Mr. Grocer?

Perhaps not lately, but you used to; not for profit but for exercise. If you happen to know a bright boy who likes skates, same as you did, and wants to know how to sell things, at the same time getting "over-time pay" for what he does, we will consider it a favor if you will show him this "ad."

If HE win the skates we will send YOU a nice leather card case, as a prize for picking a winner. It is also good practice to see if you can choose the right boy; should he make good he may be useful in your employ.

Here's what we will do for the boy (or anyone else).

Referring to a recent prize, Mr. W. G. Brown of Stratford, Ontario, writes: "I notice the fairness with which you treat the 'little chaps'." This is just what makes our prizes so popular. Nothing is too good for the boy who "can do the business."

ARE YOU BUYING CHEAP, TRASHY JAPAN AND CHINA GREEN TEA ? ? ?

No ! Perhaps you are though. Unknowingly. It is a fact that large quantities of trashy China and Japan Green tea, mixed with a small percentage of Ceylon and India greens is being offered as a pure Ceylon or India Green Tea. Are you the victim of this deception? If so, your green tea trade will suffer. Your only safeguard in buying tea—your only way to increase trade, is to sell

"SALADA"

GREEN TEA

Pure, uncolored Ceylon and India green tea, and that only, enters into its blend. The color of genuine green tea is entirely due to the rapid drying of the fresh leaf, and is an olive-green color—a shade lighter than black tea. The green teas of Japan and China are faced and glazed with artificial coloring matter, principally with a powdered mixture of gypsum and Prussian blue. They are very injurious to the health. "SALADA" Green Tea is absolutely pure, absolutely clean, machine made and noted the world over for its delicious and delicate flavor.

BE CONVINCED—A postal inquiry will bring samples and full particulars by return mail.

VALUE OF GOOD COPY

Personally, I believe "ads." in trade papers should be made so attractive, so interesting in some way that the merchant as he glances through the trade journal will stop and see what you have to say. The simple announcement that you are in business is not enough. I don't care how prominent a firm is, they should not get the idea they are so big that all they need to do is to reproduce their name on a page in a trade journal and say nothing more. They should do something to make the merchant curious; in fact, somewhat anxious to meet the travelling man you are sending out to represent you.

Why Cash Discounts to the Retailers were Dropped

Retailer Maintains That it is Unfair to Those Who Pay Their Debts Promptly—Manufacturers Say the Privilege Was Abused When Discounts Were Allowed—Wholesalers in Many Cases do Not Obtain Them From Manufacturers—They Also Claim Small Profits.

The question of the elimination by wholesalers of cash discounts on a great many grocery articles is causing considerable disturbance among the retail trade just now. The grocer who formerly received a cash-discount on almost everything he bought and paid for within the time limit claims that there is no encouragement now for him to pay his debts promptly. If he does he maintains that he is no better off than his competitor, who lets his accounts run for three or four months.

Bearing on this question, the following letter from a retailer signing himself "Yours for Discounts," will be read with interest:—

Editor Canadian Grocer,--

The question of discounts and its advantages to the retail grocer have been argued and discussed so often that the subject seems to have lost interest to the retailers of Canada. Now, that a law has been enacted and is in force, making the giver and receiver of secret rebates or secret discounts or gifts of any character liable to a heavy penalty, it seems to me an opportune time to bring this question to the front. I think every retail grocer in Canada should give this matter his most serious consideration. The dealer in a small way, say, having a turn-over of $10,000, by getting a discount of one per cent. saves $100 a year. This is actual saving, as few, if any, dealers take into consideration cash discounts, when making up cost of goods. Surely this amount, picked up as it were on the side, is good merchandising. Besides the money saved, the influence on a man's business and rating is worth as much more. Supposing a man of this stamp makes an offer on a lot of goods and the wholesaler refers to his financial man. The answer comes into the sample room: "Why that chap always takes his discounts." Surely such a reputation is worth working for.

In speaking to a number of grocers, individually, some of them made this statement: "When I go to my wholesaler to pay a month's indebtedness, he always throws me back three or four dollars, with a smile, and says, "That's for your promptness." Another man said: "I was determined to retain my discount, and so informed the traveler. He said don't make a fuss, and I will arrange it for you, on something that shows a profit, and I am perfectly satisfied that I am doing better than under the regular discount system."

These are examples of what some are doing. Does this satisfy the honest straightforward business man, who demands, and rightly so, to have just as good an opportunity to do business as any person else under similar conditions? I say decidedly no—but this is a matter we have to face, and why not at once. In the last year or two discounts have been abolished on nearly all lines that the grocer handles, in fact, you can about count all the articles on your fingers that remain under cash discounts. The question occurs, why did the manufacturers of starches, syrups, tobaccos, cereals and other goods, take this stand? It is to be assumed that they would like the good will of the men who are handing out their goods to the consumer, and one of their first considerations should be to secure the retail man as their personal friend. Now, Mr. Editor, I think this is a vital question, and one in which your paper might possibly work up some information, and if this article should catch the attention of any manufacturer, who has abolished cash discounts I would like him to give his reasons through your valued columns.

YOURS FOR DISCOUNTS.

Do Not Get Them.

It was about a couple of years ago since the cash discounts were dropped in the cases referred to, and in taking the step, wholesalers claim justification on various grounds.

The Canadian Grocer interviewed a number of them, as well as some manufacturers, on the question. One declared that the wholesale trade did not receive the discounts from the manufacturer, and therefore he did not think it should allow cash discounts to the retailer. He maintained that the man who at the present time did not pay his debts promptly was not on an equality with the one who paid cash, even if no cash discounts were allowed. The former was not only deprived of the discount, but he had to pay interest on overdue accounts, which sometimes amounted to considerable sums during the year. The position of the latter, he argued, as a buyer was much better, because he can often buy at better prices. A wholesaler, too, who has an overstock of a particular line of goods—the price of which has not been fixed to the retailer—and which he is in a position to sell cheaper than usual, will prefer to give the benefit to the grocer who pays him cash.

"I do not see any possibility," he said, "for the other fellow to compete with the cash-man, who always knows where he is at, who never has to pay interest on overdue accounts, and who is in a position to buy better; the grocer who conducts his business on a scientific basis is the one who is most to be admired."

Are Bound by Contract.

Other wholesale distributors said that the wholesale trade was bound by contract with many manufacturers, so that it could not give the preference of cash discounts on the products of those manufacturers to the retail trade. By the Contract Selling Plan with these manufacturers, no discounts for pre-payment are allowed, and as one wholesaler declared, "we're simply complying with instructions from manufacturers when we decline to give them."

"Do you allow the cash discount on all goods?" was asked.

"No, we do not; on many goods the percentage of profit is so small that we cannot afford it," was the reply.

Always Wanted Discounts.

A reason for the cutting out of cash discounts given by still another jobber was that retail grocers took too much of an advantage of them.

"If ten days was the limit on some article good men wanted the discount if they remitted in eleven, fifteen or twenty days; if 30 days was the limit they would want the discount in 60, and some even in 90 days. To hold our trade we would have to allow it, and yet it wasn't fair to us nor to the competitors of those retailers."

From Manufacturer's Standpoint.

A Canadian manufacturer of a staple grocery article stated that the chief reason why manufacturers had cut off the discount to the wholesaler was on account of the unfair advantage that the wholesaler took of them.

"No matter how long a time was necessary for the retailer to remit to him, in most cases he would allow the discount. Certain wholesale houses refused to do business on this plan and naturally they didn't sell much of our goods. In order to protect the few, we were forced to see that no discount was allowed to be given by any of them — that's why, I should say, they cannot allow the discount to the retail trade."

There are, of course, many goods on which the discounts are yet allowed. The most important probably is sugar. The discount is 1 per cent. off in 10 days, which is the usual one. In the case of vinegar the customary discount is 5 per cent. off in 30 days.

AN INSTRUCTIVE NUMBER.

The Daily Warder, Lindsay, contains the following notice of the Fall Number of The Canadian Grocer:

"Lindsay grocers have received their fall number of The Canadian Grocer and are very much pleased with it. It certainly is an excellent one and a credit to the publishers. The articles are numerous, not too long and are intensely interesting to the men in the trade, being very instructive. The hints to grocers are educating and in season. The ideas are new and the entire number is compiled in an interesting manner."

Some Plans for Hurrying Up the Christmas Trade

Difficulties Experienced by Grocers and Salesmen and How Best to Overcome Them — Methods for Making Householders Buy Earlier—What to do Next Month.

By Victor Lauriston.

There's not a grocer from one end of Canada to the other who doesn't contemplate the strain of the Christmas season with a nervous dread that is not entirely compensated for by the thought of the ultimate profits. There's not a grocer, either, who, if he could, would not gladly see the Christmas buying spread over a period a couple of weeks longer, or even more.

"But," is the ultimate conclusion of ninety per cent. of the grocers, "people won't buy till Christmas is right upon them. The Christmas rush will always be with us; there's no help for it."

And, though it means big business, the Christmas rush means, on the other hand, a good many things that are, temporarily at least, far from welcome to the merchant or the clerk.

The crowding of so much business into a couple of weeks, and the major part of it into the last week before Christmas, means a big strain for the merchant. It means an even bigger strain for the clerk.

It means, when all is said and done, dissatisfaction to the customer. Perhaps he can't find just what he wants; perhaps he can't have it delivered just at the precise moment; perhaps he does not buy many things he would buy because the merchant has run out of them and hasn't time to re-order. And, anyway, the customer has to wait in crowded stores, to lavish valuable time in awaiting his turn at the crowded counter.

It means, too, that often business costs more than it would at other times. Extra clerks must be hired. They are nearly always new hands at the business; and no grocer needs to be told that a new hand can't produce anything like the returns for his wages that will be coming from a clerk who knows the grocery business from canned goods and coffee clear through to cornmeal and cocoanuts.

And these are only a few of the incidental detriments to crowding too much business into too brief a space of time.

What About a Remedy?

Well, the grocer can't get along without the business. He must have that Christmas trade—that is, his share of it. If he can't get it in any other way, he must put up with the incidental drawbacks, nervous strain included. Nevertheless, he would still be glad to add two weeks to the forepart of the Christmas selling season if thereby he could lighten up the burden and rush at the finish.

And this is why the call has, for many years now, gone forth to the public with each recurring December: "Buy early and avoid the rush."

Despite the pessimistic statement quoted earlier, these annual appeals have beyond all doubt had a beneficial effect in stimulating early buying, though that effect is only just perceptible. Nevertheless, grocers who are accustomed to watch the trend of business carefully do state that people have bought earlier the past year than they did five or ten years ago. In this fact there is hope. There is encouragement, too, for the grocer who is willing to supplement that one appeal by other measures designed to encourage early buying on the part of the public.

For the matter does not rest entirely with the public. In fact, if earlier Christmas buying is to come, it is up to the merchant, and not the public to bring this desirable state of things about.

If the public are to buy early, the merchant must be prepared to sell early. This means putting in his stock earlier—a matter not so easy for the grocer, possibly, as for dealers in other lines, but nevertheless by no means out of question in the comparatively cool weather of November and December.

Some Ways to go About it.

Uniform action among the merchants of a town will produce better results, probably, than if an effort is confined to an individual merchant. For one thing, the utilization of the combined advertising resources of a hundred merchants will inevitably result in a stronger appeal to the public than if one man alone raises his voice. Hence, it would be worth while for the merchants to get together, map out an "Early Christmas Buying" campaign, and then pull all together to stimulate early buying on the part of the customer.

But, while the individual merchant's "Early Buying" campaign may not have such far reaching effects, it is bound to redound to his individual benefit, if properly carried out.

The first thing for him is to decide just when he would like his Christmas season to begin. Does he want three, four or five weeks instead of the customary two? When he has settled this question in his mind and knows how soon he would like to start the trade moving, he should next figure on starting his campaign a week or ten days ahead. For it takes time for arguments to sink in.

And from the time he starts he should talk Christmas, Christmas, Christmas. He should begin to map out his line of argument in the comparatively quiet days of November, and should fire his first gun by the first of December—if not earlier.

A good idea is to interview the local newspapers—if the merchant is an advertiser this will come particularly easy—and point out the wisdom of booming the early shopping movement. The newspaper will unless it is run by a cordwood stick, readily help to the extent of one or more prominent articles or editorials along that line. And the influence is bound to be widespread. One such article in a single Western Ontario newspaper was last year quoted from from one end of Ontario to the other.

Ordertaking in Advance.

Every merchant has two classes of customers — the regular buyers and the transients. He has the people who give him all or a large part of their family trade, and who would not dream of going elsewhere. Then he has, too, the people who buy from him one day, from Jones the next, from Brown some other time—who have no fixed business affiliations.

It is with the first named class of people that the merchant can accomplish most. And here it is that a mailing list of regular customers—which every merchant has on his books, if not elsewhere — should prove its value. The known customer the merchant can address through a logical, businesslike circular letter on the subject of early shopping in the Christmas season. And in this letter the humanitarian argument—that of kindness to the clerk—doesn't even need to be introduced. There are plenty of others without it.

For the Early Buyer.

The Christmas stock is just in—the early buyer gets the first choice, and undoubtedly that is the best choice, because there is a larger stock to choose from. The early buyer buys when the store is not so busy. His wants can be attended to without a tiresome wait. In other words: "Come early and avoid the rush."

The early buyer runs no risk of having to trot all over town on Christmas Eve in the seach for Christmas goods, only to find that the lines desired are not to be had for love or money. The stereotyped phrase, "We are all sold out," will not greet the early buyer at every counter.

The Christmas cake or Christmas pudding improves with age—any experienced housekeeper will say so. Why not point out to buyers that they can ensure a better Christmas cake by buying the ingredients when the task takes the minimum of time, trouble and worry?

In short, the merchant, if he puts himself in the buyer's place, will be able to dig up so many convincing arguments that one circular letter won't be able to hold them.

Or, if the customer doesn't want the gods at the moment, she at least has a pretty fair notion as to what she will want in a couple of weeks time. Let her send in her order now, for delivery later. This will save her possible disappointment. She will be sure of getting her goods just when she wants them.

Taking advance orders for delivery later in the season is not as good as taking orders for immediate delivery—but it does save the salespeople a great deal of wear and tear, and it saves the deliveryman some too. Much can be done along this line with the regular patrons of a business house.

Dealing With the Transient.

The transient customer is harder to educate along the line of early Christmas shopping. He may buy his Christmas stuff in half a dozen stores. But a judicious and early use of newspaper advertising and Christmas window displays will help bring in his business earlier than if he were left entirely to his own resources.

Most merchants during the Christmas season double their advertising space. The results from advertising—that is, the best and most telling results—are not immediate. Rather, they are cumulative. It was not the first safety razor advertisement that sells the razors by the thousands to-day; it was the long series of advertisements, repeated day in and day-out through a long series of years.

And it is just the same with the merchant. If he wants by means of advertising to bring the early Christmas buyer his way, he must begin a few days before he expects to see the tide flow in. And, after that, he must keep it up till the finish. He should talk Christmas shopping right from the drop of the hat—and should clinch his talk by telling of his Christmas goods. To say "Buy early" carries only a vague meaning to the housewife. To say "Buy currants early" at once suggests something that sticks in her mind—particularly if driven home by the addition of a few brief but convincing reasons.

Simultaneously with the commencement of Christmas advertising should come the first Christmas window display. Many merchants devote much time before Christmas to an elaborate display occupying the window for just the last week of the season. These elaborate windows are all right in their place, but it is well to lead up to them with displays not so elaborate, taking less time, but which have, nevertheless, more than the sugestion of Christmas in them.

Neat show cards will help much to stimulate early buying. In them, as in his advertising, the merchant should "talk Christmas" briefly, but convincingly.

TRADE NOTES.

John Bowman is opening a new grocery and meat business in the Griffith Block, Welland, Ont.

The general store of Eugene Joubert, Williamstown, Ont., was last Friday, totally destroyed by fire.

E. Syer is opening a grocery store in Milton, Ont., in the premises recently occupied by Fleming & Durnan.

G. J. Jamieson, grocer, Richmond, Que., has sold to C. B. Caswell, of the same place. The latter took possession a few weeks ago, and will continue the business along similar lines to Mr. Jamieson.

Retailers Talk on the Merits of Cash and Credit

One Maintains That He Could Not Get Along Without Monthly Payment System—Cites a Case in Defence—The Other Tells Why He Favors the Cash Method.

Winnipeg, Nov. 23.—Two Winnipeg grocers indulged in a profitable conversation the other day on monthly payments, giving credit, and doing a cash business.

The first speaker said: "I am inclined to favor the monthly account system. If a customer whom you know to be good, comes into the store and makes a monthly payment proposition, stating that it is the most convenient for him, in the first place the grocer can scarcely refuse, and it is manifest that if he accedes to those terms he is almost sure of that trade month by month. The customer is practically bound to renew orders each month, and thereby the grocer has him always with him. Moreover if he does not agree to the credit system, the customer will invariably find some one that will, and it is a matter of endorsing the proposition or losing the customer."

It was evident that the merchant spoke from his own experience, and felt the security of his argument. He simply reiterated the policy of many grocers throughout the country. It was not strange, but natural that he should speak as he did.

Lost a Customer.

The second merchant said: "I do not agree with you that your policy assures you that you always have the customer. In my experience I have had customers who agreed to monthly accounts, and they either did not pay at all, monthly or only paid part of the account. Last summer a "monthly payment" customer ran an account for five months and then went for a vacation. When he returned, I sent a bill for $450, and he was grossly insulted. He paid his bill and left me entirely. I did not do him an injustice, I rather did him a favor, and that was my reward.

"And again, on a monthly account of $100 you do not make more than 20 per cent., whereas if that was cash, you could turn that cash over every day. It would be in the business, making more cash continually, and you would be able to pay cash for your stock, taking advantage of discounts, wherever they are given.

"The cash system also saves one labor, and consequently expense. If the credit system was in vogue a bookkeeper would have to be employed—more or less of an expert—depending upon the volume of the business. In the cash system the register does the work and all accounts are added up at the end of the month.

"The cash system is the only modern business method and the sooner we all work for it, and sacrifice for it, if need be, the better for our craft."

TRADE NOTES.

John Grass, of Ridgetown, Ont., is disposing of his grocery and crockery business, and intends retiring as soon as he can clear out his stock.

Mr. Echlin, who has been conducting the Teddy Bear Grocery on Lorne Ave., Chatham, has discontinued business, selling out his stock and turning over his customers to Jas. A. Mackness, grocer, of 68 St. Clair St. Mr. Echlin will take a position with Mr. Mackness.

D. J. O'Keeffe has disposed of the stock and goodwill of the Triangle Grocery at the corner of Thames St. and Grange Ave., Chatham, Ont., to Reg. Oldershaw. Mr. Oldershaw was formerly traveler for the McCormick Company, of London, and later for D. S. Perrin & Co., Limited. Mr. Oldershaw's first experience with the business was gained as clerk for John McCorvie, of Chatham.

WHY YOU SHOULD ENTER.

It is an undisputed fact that window displays and newspaper advertising are valuable in selling groceries. By using these two methods in getting business, therefore, grocers are not going out of their way. They are following along lines of least resistance to their own financial advantage.

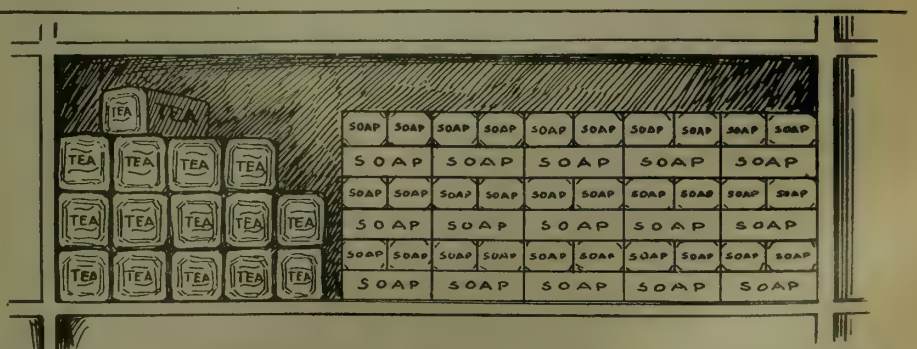
In dressing your Christmas window, take a little extra trouble, and make it the best you ever had. The Canadian Grocer, as has already been announced, is offering cash prizes for the best Canadian Christmas windows, photographs to be sent in not later than December 31st.

Following last year's precedent, window dressing contestants will be divided into two classes:

For the best selling window display shows in (1) a city over 10,000 population, and (2) in towns and villages under 10,000 population.

In the window display contest in each case there will be two prizes as follows: 1st, $7 in cash; 2nd, $3 in cash, making in all $20.

To enter the contest send a good, clear photo of one or more Christmas windows, with a description and the name of the person who arranged the display.



Most grocers use increased newspaper space during the Christmas season with a view to booming holiday trade. We want to get copies of these advertisements.

The advertisement submitted should be about Christmas goods sold through grocery stores. All that is necessary is to forward one or more clippings from your local paper to us with the name of the writer of the advertisement, and the name of the paper it was clipped from. There will be a prize of $5 cash given to the winner.

The award will be made by an advertising specialist and will be announced, with a reproduction of the prize ad., shortly after the close of the contest. All entries in each case should be mailed not later than December 31, to the Editor of The Canadian Grocer.

D. G. Whidden, of the Sweet Milk Condensing Co., Laurentides, Que., was in Montreal last week.

W. J. Wilson, representing S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, has returned from a trip to the Maritime Provinces.

THINGS THAT SHOULDN'T BE—Tea and Soap on the same Shelf in the Store. There would be More Reasons, of course, to keep bulk tea away from soap.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work.

How Knowledge of the Goods Sold Increased Sales of one Department From $25 to $200 Per Day — Advantage of the Salesman Who Knows His Business — The Kind of Material Needed by the Progressive Merchant.

The Canadian Grocer has always taken a firm stand against the stupid practice of rival grocers in cutting prices in order to gain trade, and the results of that advice are in evidence all over. Trade is being conducted on more improved methods with splendid results.

The Grocer has recently devoted considerable space to the advisability of securing a higher type of salesmen in our grocery stores.

Fifty per cent. of the salesmen are not worth having in a store at any price. They think all that is necessary is to be an ordinary slow, careless, ignorant waiter. They often known nothing whatever of the quality of goods they are selling, and they do not even think that it is necessary to know. The proprietors themselves even do not see much advantage in understanding the goods.

Let me give an example or two, which will show what it means to know something about the goods you sell. In a large store a competent man was placed in the cheese department, and chiefly on account of his knowledge of the different qualities and values of cheese and their tastes and flavors, he succeeded in raising the daily sales from $25 to $200.

This expert cheese man, in time, was succeeded by one who, although a good man, had not sufficient knowledge of the nature of cheese to talk intelligently about it, and the sales in three months' time dropped from $200 to $50.

Does it pay, therefore, to keep clerks who will not prepare themselves for the position? On this case one sold four times as much as the other. At first glance you will think that he is worth four times what the other man is, but this is far from the mark. The expense of running the store in the one case would be the same as in the other. Suppose for that department the expense would be say $5 per day, and the profit on the goods would be 25 per cent. The one would make $5 over cost, and the other would make $35; so that the one would be worth seven times as much as the other.

Get the Best Material.

Grocers will see the value of better salesmen, and if a clerk will not apply himself to the study of his work in order to measure up to the standard required to meet the demands of the times, then get rid of him and find better material. To compete with all sorts of competition, and gain a respectable business trade, ignorance must give way to intelligence; slothfulness to dilligence; slovenliness to neatness; dullness to cheerfulness, and old habits to up-to-date methods.

The entire retail trade is waking up, pure goods are taking the place of adulterated; cleanliness for filthiness; politeness for rudeness, and those who remain in the old rut will go on in it to their finish. The people are ready to give their support to the ordinary retail stores, and prefer to deal with them if they give them the right service.

An Old Montreal Store Doing a Splendid Business Yet.

FIFTY-THREE YEARS A GROCER.

Montreal Grocer Uses the Same Store for Over Half a Century.

The accompanying cut shows a very interesting old grocery store on the corner of Fullum and Notre Dame Streets, Montreal. This corner has been used by the present proprietor, Jules Rivet—who stands at the right, and whose photo we present herewith — for the past fifty-three years, as a grocery store. Originally it had a wooden front, but in 1875, some changes were made, the store enlarged, and the front became what it is now. Other than a few internal alterations no further changes have been made since then.

Jules Rivet, Jr., the figure in the doorway, has been with his father in the business continuously for the past thirty-five years, which is in itself quite a record. The principal items carried by Mr. Rivet are those of the regular family grocery, while in addition he deals in liquors, hay, and grain. During fifty-three years he has built up a steady family trade which amounts to about $30,000 per year—a very comfortable business. The interior of the store shows care and thought in the arrangement of goods. Everything has its place. Both Mr. Rivet and his son can go instantly to any desired article, and what is more, can tell exactly how much of it is on hand. That is something very few grocers have mastered—the art of knowing just what amount of each article they have in stock. It would pay many of them to establish some checking system with this end in view.

Mr. Rivet's customers are so long established that they are nearly all old friends. It is certainly the end toward which all progressive grocers should direct their energies, to make friends with their customers.

BAD INSURANCE LEGISLATION.

Business men are just becoming aware that certain clauses are being introduced into the Insurance Bill now before the Senate, whereby every business in Canada will be seriously affected sooner or later.

The instigators of the clauses referred to are chiefly the members of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association. This is an organization composed of companies controlling nearly nine-tenths of the business reported to the insurance department at Ottawa. By their vast organization, consisting of managers, directors and agents throughout the country, this association can move quickly and effectively, as will be appreciated by those familiar with the progress of the bill at the last session of Parliament.

At the last session of Parliament, the interests of the public were but hurriedly represented at the last moment, and but for the protest at the last moment, it is possible that the Bill might have become law. It passed the Commons, imposing a tax of 15 p.c. on the premiums paid to any insurance company which was not domiciled in Canada.

The intention of this tax was to force the owner of property to offer his business first of all to the local companies. Further restrictive clauses incorporated in the bill as passed by the Commons, placed the business man in the position of having to offer his business to the local companies first, and after refusal by them, to have to write to the superintendent of insurance for permission to try elsewhere.

The Insurance Bill was originally drawn up to protect the public against the insurance companies, and those who have already experienced the effect of the virtual combine in the insurance business, will look askance at any legislation which will build up and strengthen so strong an organization. Many associations, including the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and meetings of commercial and financial interests, have already passed strong resolutions, and have taken active measures to resist the Bill. The Montreal Produce Merchants' Association have passed a strong resolution against the proposed changes and are urging the dairy interests to take a similar stand.

Retail merchants throughout Cañada should look after their own interests in this matter and drop a card of protest to their representative in the House of Commons.

ARE GROCERS DRUGGISTS?

In view of the decision of Judge Morson in Toronto the other day to the effect that cigars are drugs, and therefore can be sold by druggists on Sunday without violating the law, does it follow that the grocer who sells cigars is a druggist?

If one of the courts decides that he is, does it follow that he be compelled to pass an examination, or be liable to prosecution by the Pharmaceutical Society?

The grocers are probably not troubling themselves over the matter or losing any sleep, but one cannot be sure these days what the law courts may attempt to prove.

In the meantime we advise the grocers to keep on selling cigars and making all the legitimate profit possible out of them they can.

PLANNING FOR CHRISTMAS.

Very soon the retail merchants will be up to their head and ears in the Christmas holiday trade.

While the financial condition of the country is a factor in determining the retailer's success, it is after all largely determined by the efforts the retail merchant puts forth himself.

By exercising intelligence and forethought he can prevent a great deal of regrettable "hind-thought" after the holiday trade is over and a small business crop has been reaped.

Everything from a needle to a "Dreadnought" is the result of forethought, having had an existence in the mind of someone before it was created.

The same thing is equally true of business affairs. The man who does not plan and work things out in his mind, cannot create a successful business any more than it is possible for dead matter to create life.

The time is most opportune for the retailer to give some thought to the holiday trade, in other words, to map out a plan of campaign. Windows must be dressed, the public advised, and a score or more of other things to be provided for. All this requires forethought.

As a preliminary a conference might be held with the clerks, the drivers and others, whose advice might be valuable. They should be notified a day or two before hand so that all concerned may come prepared with ideas.

Staff conferences create enthusiasm, as well as business-getting ideas.

NO CHEAP BROOMS.

The strong market in broom-corn referred to some weeks ago shows no tendency to weakening. In fact it is stronger. Manufacturers in the United States have found it necessary to purchase broom-corn from Italy and Austria to relieve the situation, and this costs 10 cents per pound on board ship at New York. United States corn is now worth about $235 per ton, which is just as cheap as the foreign product when duty and freight are paid.

There is little broom-corn in Kansas or Illinois, which states have always been the natural home for it; Oklahoma is the only one left, and the supply there is small and the quality not so good.

This situation indicates that there will be no reduction in broom prices until the new crop next autumn.

CONSIGMENT THE REMEDY.

Present conditions as regards importations from Greek and Mediterranean ports are very unsatisfactory, to say the least, to Montreal dealers. Goods are now sent already sold to the consignee.

Owing to a good deal of dishonesty on the part of the shippers, particularly natives of Greece and Spain, arrivals are not at all like the original sample in many cases. Some arrivals have even been so bad that they were only fit for the dump.

This condition of affairs is leading to a gradual falling off in the direct trade and dealers are buying through New York. Some of the men in Montreal, who are particularly interested in this matter, gave it as their opinion that either goods would have to be sent through on consignment only, in order to allow an examination, or our direct trade would gradually be absorbed by New York dealers, who are taking the responsibility for the grade on themselves. The general desire seems to be for the first remedy, as it means a better buying price, and would in every way be more beneficial to our own importers.

POINTERS—
Sugar—Firm.
Rio Coffee—1c higher.
Peppers—Firm and advancing.
Virginia Peanuts—Scarce.

Montreal, Nov. 25th, 1909.

A firm and advancing market in nearly all lines is the report; the only exceptions to this are syrups and molasses, beans and evaporated apples.

Sugar remains firm at the advance, the raw market, however, is showing a slight tendency to fall off. It is not sufficient to have any appreciable effect.

Coffees, particularly Rio and Santos, will probably be somewhat higher after the first of the year, and possibly even before that, as, in spite of the large crop reported, the amount allowed to be exported free will all have been used up early in January.

Teas are firm and scarce, with little prospect of an easier situation.

There is a very short visible supply of pepper on the market, and an advance in this line is looked for at almost any moment. Ginger is firmer. Other spices are having a good sale at present quotations.

Christmas demand for nuts and dried fruits is beginning to be largely felt, and dealers prophesy a record season.

Canned vegetables and lobsters are scarce and the general advice seems to be that supplies of these commodities should be laid in as soon as possible.

SUGAR—This week will see the close of navigation, and in view of this sales have been brisk. Prices are unchanged at the recent rise. Local refiners are somewhat curious as to whether the new refineries now being promoted will go much beyond the paper stage.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Both syrup and molasses sales have been rather disappointing lately, though the demand for molasses in small lots continues. Prices are unchanged, with a somewhat weaker tendency in both lines.

DRIED FRUITS—Christmas demand is beginning to be felt, and from indications this year will be one of the best for most of the popular lines. Many poor grades are reported as being on the market, sold as first-class. Dealers not too careful as to the morality of such a proceeding, are working off last year's stock as first grade. Dates are not any too plentiful and indications point to higher prices. Figs are reported scarce, and not sufficient to adequately supply the holiday trade. Currants and California seeded raisins are finding a ready sale at former quotations.

SPICES—Scarcity of peppers, particularly white, is becoming more marked every day, owing principally to the short visible supply. Dealers are looking for higher prices. NUTS—The first arrival of shelled walnuts came in on a practically bare market and were eagerly taken up. Brazils are very firm, with small stocks and a probable advance in sight. CANNED GOODS

Montreal.—We would advise grocers to fill their requirements of canned goods, particularly vegetables, early, as indications are that prices will be higher and firm, with a decided shortage of goods in the near future. Already in the primary markets prices are higher, not sufficiently as yet to affect the retailer.

TORONTO.—Generally speaking, canned goods are moving freely. The preference, of course, is for vegetables and fish, as fruits are poor sellers, with the possible exception of gallon apples, so soon after the preserving season. In vegetables, tomatoes and corn are attracting more notice than the others. There will not be enough peas to go around and wholesalers are now, in many cases, declining to sell only to regular customers.

Clover Leaf and Horseshoe canned salmon, are, so far as the Toronto market is concerned, somewhat similar to peas. There is a scarcity here and wholesalers are confining orders to customers. Wholesalers find that the Canadian consuming public are, as a general rule, purchasing only best grades of salmon, and although the prices are high in comparison to other years, it is still much cheaper than meat these days. They do not, however, think that salmon is being used in preference to meat on this account, as consumers usually just buy it when they want it. There is a report that pink salmon is very scarce on the coast, and it is stated by the representative of a large firm that there is not a jobber in the world who has a sufficient supply of fine salmon.

Prices on all canned goods are firm, with no tendency to weaken. The following prices are for best grades of the goods mentioned.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Dried Fruits—Heavy demand.
Sugar—Market strong.
Nuts—Good demand.
Evaporated Apples—Easier.

Toronto, November 25, 1909.

The wholesale trade on the whole is in a very healthy condition. The collections are very satisfactory. Old houses say that they never had their accounts so well paid up. Their orders for the Christmas trade exceed their expectations and the greatest trouble they have is in getting the goods. There is considerable trouble caused through delays on the railways. Goods that have been promised to the retailers two weeks ago have not arrived yet. Salmon especially is slow in arriving and is fully a month later than usual.

SUGAR—The market in sugar remains firm at the advance quoted a week ago. The new estimate for European beet added to our world's cane crop and United States beet crop, compared with last year, shows an increase in the total world's production of only 42,014 tons. This is not much considering the total productions and the increase in consumption which condition of affairs justifies in the eyes of authorities the prices quoted. The prospects of the immediate future are towards continued strength due in part to the fact that European speculators have come into sugar on this side the Atlantic. Beets in Europe show rather poor results so far as quality is concerned. Wholesalers report a good demand for sugar for Christmas trade, but of course sales will not be as large as during the fruit season. Considerable Muscavado, Barbados and Demerara raws are still being bought by retailers for the holiday trade as many consumers want them for manufacturing their Christmas dainties.

Winnipeg, Nov. 25, 1909.

Business has fallen off noticeably the past two weeks. November will not be as good a month as October was in either the wholesale or retail trade. The cause has been that specialties have been the bulk of the orders since last month. Large stocks of staples and produce were stocked and the future ordering is concentrated upon holiday lines. Travelers report the retail trade in good condition, however, since accounts are being met promptly and the turn-over generally is much in excess of last year, and future prospects much brighter.

The wholesale houses would like to be getting in more cash just now

Let the other fellow sell the 25c. Tea and establish a reputation for cheapness

A great many shrewd merchants have given up trying to buy tea to sell at 25c. They decided it was bad business to make dissatisfied customers by continuing to sell the very poor stuff that could be had now to retail at 25c., and have cut it out, and have been surprised at the readiness with which their customers paid a little higher price for better tea. It is easier to cut out 25c. tea than you think.

It is not safe to assume that your customers are satisfied because they are not complaining. They don't need to tell you if they don't like your tea; it's easier to try another store.

You know Red Rose Tea will make satisfied customers. Every package of Red Rose is worth the price, and every package you sell creates good-will and increases the value of your business. This is why it pays you to recommend

A BUYING POWER OF $210,000,000....

The merchants who read The Canadian Grocer every week represent a buying power conservatively estimated at $210,000,000. In their purchases they are always disposed to give the preference to Grocer advertisers. There are good reasons why this should be so.

Figure out for yourself if it is worth an advertiser's while to occupy this position of advantage, when, by the use of a half-page space, he is able to talk to 10 good buyers for every cent expended. In other words, every cent he spends gives him prestige with a buying power of $300,000.

since their expenses and bills for new goods are taxing them heavily. A local wholesale manager stated to-day that collections were only fair, but he said, "we would consider them good, were it not that we have to make heavy payments just now, and the retailers' payments are small as compared to ours."

The transportation question is again worrying wholesalers. Goods are being held up at Fort William owing to lack of cars to bring them further. The C.P.R. are so busily and anxiously engaged in removing the wheat that the wholesalers in the west think that they are not given proper consideration. Word has been received from Lake transporters that several car loads of goods have been unloaded at the head of the Great Lakes, and the time for their arrival here is long past due. Their goods are chiefly canned products from Ontario and foreign dried fruits. The closing of navigation has had the tendency to make prices firmer.

SUGAR—Last week's prices hold firm to-day. As a rule prices go up at the close of navigation. Wholesalers and commission men usually stock heavily in Port Arthur and Fort William in the fall and they rule the market for the remainder of the season. As a result, lower prices cannot be expected, but it is reasonable to expect a further advance.

VANCOUVER MARKETS.

Vancouver, Nov. 25, 1909.

A number of increases in prices are noted. Butter has gone up to 40 cents, an increase of five cents, for creamery, the retail price being 45c. Vancouver creamery holds to 35c. Eastern butter remains steady at from 27c to 29c for the best grades.

An advance of ten cents a hundred is quoted on sugar, bringing the price of standard granulated up to $5.60 per hundred. No increase has yet been made in the imported sugars, they being quoted at $5.25.

Standard brands of flour are down to $6.90, with cheaper grades at $6.60. Bakers, though, have made no reduction in the price of bread. The combination of bakers in Vancouver is very strong, and they say that there might be an increase in the price of wheat some time, and there is little use dropping the price only to raise it again. Moreover, the size of the loaf is very small, the retail price per loaf being 10c, or two for fifteen.

ST. JOHN MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 25, 1909.

Business with the jobbers has picked up considerably of late with retailers laying in supplies for the Christmas trade. Austrian and United Empire sugar has advanced 10 cents; beans are higher and some varieties of canned goods have been marked up. Butter, if anything, is a little easier, but eggs are high, and are likely to remain so. Turkeys are not over plentiful, and there is a feeling that they will be high for Christmas. Fowls are worth 50 to 90 cents a pair, and chickens, 60 cents to $1.

A new preparation known as "Scotch Cure" finnan haddies, has appeared on the market. It is a Nova Scotia product, and is selling at 10 cents a pound, wholesale. Present quotations are as follows:—

CONSIDERING ASSESSMENT ACT.

Some Objections Being Made To Present Business Tax.

Toronto, Nov. 24.—In the issue of The Canadian Grocer of May 7, 1909, reference was made at length to the change from the personal property manner of assessment in Ontario to the business assessment method. At the same time it was pointed out that a special committee was appointed by the Ontario legislature to consider objections to the Assessment Act, and report back to the legislature.

This special committee met on Tuesday of this week, and heard numerous proposals for changes, but no objections were forthcoming from retail grocers, and with the exception of coal men, few were aired by retail merchants.

All grocers, hardware merchants, plumbers, and dry goods merchants under the business assessment are assessed at 25 per cent. of the value of the premises occupied where the population of the municipality is over 50,000; 30 per cent. where it is over 10,000, and 35 per cent. if under 10,000. The business tax of wholesalers is 75 per cent., and manufacturers 60 per cent. Coal merchants are rated at 50 per cent. except in cities of over 100,000 population, where it is 30 per cent.

So far as the retail merchants are concerned, generally, the act is working better than its predecessor and the merchants oppose the proposal to return to the system of taxing on stock. Some amendments will likely be made at the next session of the legislature in cases where objections are reasonable enough to demand them.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Hints to Trade Supplied by Sellers.

Professor Frederick Sheldon, of Chicago, gave a very interesting address recently on the "Science of Business Building," to the heads of the various departments and travelers of Minto Bros. The subject was one that could not fail to interest business men and a very profitable hour was spent. A club for the study of business science has been in existence for some time with this established firm. Success to "Melagama" and Professor Sheldon.

The goodness of "Salada" Tea is being extensively advertised throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion. Large display advertising is being run in no less than 676 papers—business-producing copy that tells the consumer to "Buy 'Salada' at your grocer's." The trade will get the benefit of unusual sales resulting from this advertising. It will well repay every grocer to keep a good stock of "Salada" on hand and put it well to the front.

On another page in this issue Laporte, Martin & Co., the Montreal wholesale grocers, offer timely suggestions to the grocers regarding Christmas supplies. This is the time to order dried fruits, nuts, and other requisites, if stocks are not yet complete, and a firm that can guarantee prompt shipment is the one to deal with. Laporte, Martin & Co. are able to ship orders in most cases same day as received. Raisins, currants, prunes, dried peaches, pears, and apricots, nuts, peels, are all offered in the advertisement the firm has in this week. The wise grocer would do well to consult it before ordering.

CHEESE

Compare prices asked for cheese to-day with the prices asked for either lard or butter, and you must realize how cheap it is in comparison. It is also cheaper than at this time last year. We will not predict higher prices, but we recommend purchase of what stock you may require for your winter trade.

Eggs are Little Higher Than This Time Last Year

Inside Information Indicates Storage Stocks are Fairly Heavy—Same Old Conditions in Provision Market—Poor Prospects for Exporting Butter — Cheese Receipts at Montreal Above Last Year.

The provision market in all its phases is quiet and uninteresting. The long prevailing trouble of scarcity of hogs still exists. There is a fair export demand for bacon, but few of the packers can take advantage of it, for the reason that they cannot get more hogs than they require to fill their local orders. Even at the high prices for hogs, the farmers do not seem to tumble over each other to raise more. They even think with the high prices of grain, there is not the profit they would like to make.

The butter market is hardly what the dealers would like to see. The prospects of the English market are not very encouraging. One thing in favor of holders is the fact that the stock was bought several cents lower than last year, but butter quotations to-day are from 2 to 3c lower than last year at this date.

The season's make of cheese is about over, and a large quantity of it is still in the hands of dealers. Like butter, cheese has also been bought on an average of about ¾ to 1c a lb. below last year. As the Canadian cheese has the preference on the English markets, we can always rely on them for the bulk of our output. New Zealand is becoming a strong competitor, but they have not, so far, succeeded in producing an article to compare with ours in quality. While their cheese sells for 2 shillings less, it finds ready sale, and to that extent interferes with the market for our cheese. With from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000 worth of cheese on their hands, our dealers may well feel somewhat anxious about the various new influences that affect the markets.

The egg market is considered in good all-round shape. They are moving naturally, and meeting the expectations of the dealers. There is nothing of an exciting character in view now, and the stocks are considered sufficient to meet all requirements under ordinary weather conditions.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Demand is good for all lines, but supplies seem to be fully keeping pace. In fact, prices have fallen off in pork and bacon of all lines. The situation looks promising to local dealers.

The first snowfall of the season took place this week and with the coming of winter in earnest trade in pork and its products is sure to pick up.

BUTTER—Butter remains firm at last week's quotations. Sales are in small lots, as dealers are waiting for the higher prices expected later.

Receipts for the week show a falling off of less than 500 packages, which is somewhat expected, and is due, it is thought, to small dealers in the country shipping in some of the butter which has been heretofore held back. The figures for the week are, 5,936 packages, as against 6,418 packages for the same week last year. For the season they are 358,722 packages, as against 390,517 packages corresponding season, 1908, showing a falling off of 31,795 packages.

CHEESE—Few sales are reported this week, as dealers are holding for the winter trade and higher prices. Navigation is practically closed this week and further exports will have to be shipped partly by rail.

Receipts were rather large this week, 28,352 boxes, as against 24,648 boxes same week last year. For the season they are 1,922,956 boxes, as against 1,880,200 boxes corresponding season, 1908.

EGGS—Storage stocks are being reduced, owing to the exceedingly light receipts for this time of year. The situation seems to be worrying local men considerably.

Receipts for the week are 1,474 cases, as against 2,708 cases same week last year. For the season they are 185,793 cases, as against 191,061 cases corresponding season, 1908.

POULTRY—Receipts of poultry have been somewhat light so far, but with colder weather it is thought plenty will be forthcoming. The quality of the poultry this year has not been quite up to last year's standard, but this is probably owing to the farmers holding back their best grade for future delivery.

BUTTER—Fresh-made butter of good quality is in good demand, and prices are firm for this particular line. At this time of the year when the feed of cows is changed from pasture to dry feed, roots, etc., and the conditions of the dairy have to be changed from summer to winter facilities, there will always be a larger percentage of undesirable butter and this will have a depressing effect on the gen-

There is nothing in sight to give us any reason to believe that butter will be scarce this winter, and therefore, poor butter will be hard to sell and will naturally drop to lower points. CHEESE—With the trifling fluctuations in the various cheese markets, the local market is not affected in the least. The prices have ruled practically the same all summer, and if there are any deviations it is owing to differences in quality. If your customers complain about the high prices of meat, poultry, etc., recommend them to use more cheese.

EGGS—We need not be alarmed about the egg situation. Everything is quite normal and nothing unusual. That they are a little higher this year than last, is true, but there is no reason to think that they will go to a dollar a dozen, as some are inclined to think. November and December are the hardest months to get fresh laid eggs, and this is not that eggs are scarce, but these are the two months the hens, by reason of an ancient custom, are taking holidays to get their new dresses for the winter, and when they do this, to which they are certainly entitled, some begin to complain because the poor hen is taking a rest. Our packers have well attended to their business, and have a good supply of well-kept eggs on hand to carry us through the winter. Eggs are only about 1c a dozen higher than last year.

POULTRY—The receipts of poultry are lighter this week, although supply is quite equal to the present demand. This is only a few weeks from Christmas, and farmers are now preparing their birds for the holidays. AN OCTOGENARIAN MERCHANT.

Travelers who have been accustomed to call upon Michael Laing, general merchant and post master at Branchton, Ont., will regret to learn of his recent death, although he had reached the ripe old age of eighty-two. Thirty-one years ago he moved to Branchton from Galt. In the business world he was always looked upon as an upright man; he was kind-hearted and sympathetic, often to his own loss, and apart from his standing as a business man he will be missed from the community of Branchton. It is generally expected that his son, Norman S. Laing, who has been associated with him for fifteen years, will become his successor in the business.

World's Wheat Crop by Far the Best in History

Many Million Bushels Ahead of Last Year—Wheat and Flour Market, However, Remain Strong — Increased Demand for Cereeals With Advent of Colder Weather —Prices are Firming up.

The wheat situation, even with increased estimates of the crop, is still firm and strong. The world's output of wheat is estimated to be 283,688,000 bushels more than last year, or an increase of 9¼ per cent., and 15 per cent. more than in 1907. Canada shows an increase of 24 million bus. above previous years.

With this remarkable showing, it is surprising to see the bullish condition of the market. Already the Argentine crop is watched from day to day to assist speculations either one way or the other. If the situation could be viewed from a standpoint entirely free from speculation, the natural conclusion it would lead to would be lower prices. As this cannot be done, it remains to be seen how manipulators will succeed in their various efforts to make money for themselves at the expense of the consuming public.

The flour market shows no change in prices and oat products, although a little easier in some cases, are expected to firm up with the good demand consequent on colder weather.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Ontario flour is fully as scarce as last week, and yet the crop statistics show a large gain over last year's figures. The world's crop estimates show that this year will be the greatest the world has ever known. Exports have been very heavy from the United States and Canada during the past week, the heaviest since last December. Prices show no indications of weakening as yet, but dealers figure that, in view of the crop, there are lower prices in the near future.

ROLLED OATS—Quite a decided strengthening has occurred in the rolled oat market. Dealers say that prices are simply going back to normal, and this is due primarily to an increasing demand. Oatmeals are up 7½c, and rolled oats 20c per barrel. Trade continues good at the increase, due to the coming of the cold weather.

FEED—Mill feed is having quite a brisk sale at last week's quotations. No immediate changes are looked for, as present prices are considered about right, taking into consideration what is now on the market and the demand there is for it.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—Ontario wheat is still scarce, and it becomes a question to millers whether the yield in the province was not over-estimated. At the same time they also take into consideration the open weather, which the farmer takes advantage of in working on his land, instead of hauling out his wheat. As soon as it freezes up more liberal deliveries of wheat will be expected, and unless the demand strengthens, prices may make an easy drop. There is no change in the local flour market, and the demand is fair.

Edward H. S. Flood, Canadian trade commissioner to Barbadoes, arrived in St. John, N.B., November 20, on the steamer Oruro, and went to Ottawa on the 23rd, on departmental business. He expects to return to the island on the next steamer, about a week hence. As to conditions in Barbadoes, Mr. Flood said, business was fairly good. All through the islands the imports from Canada, notably in flour and fish, have largely increased.

COLLECTING BY DRAFT.

Hamilton Merchant Surprised That This is Not Common Practice.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—In conversing with a gentleman connected with one of our large manufacturing concerns, and who has lately returned from England, he made the remark that in the Old Country if one wanted to scare a delinquent merchant into prompt payment he had to just threaten him with issuing a draft on him.

Over there they consider it injures their credit at their bank if it becomes known that a draft has been passed on them. He further stated that the same opinion is held here in mercantile circles and that his own firm would not accept a draft on any condition.

Now, Mr. Editor, this is news to me, and no doubt to a great many others, and I would like you to favor us with the consensus of opinion of the business men of the country. Personally I consider it the nicest and easiest way to settle a bill—far better and safer than closing by cheque. However, on the quiet, if my banker thinks it wrong, why then I'll drop it like a hot potato, for he is my only protection.

Don't Have Too Many Doors to Your Store

IT'S an old story, but as good as new—
About Farmer Jones, who cut a hole through the barn door for the cat to saunter in and out, and then cut a smaller one for the kitten.
Reminds you forcibly of the man who supplies FIVE ROSES to his "high-class" trade and "near-good" stuff to the thin purse.

The hole that's big enough for the cat is ample for the kitten, Brother Grocer.
But the hole that's just big enough for the kitten doesn't let the big cat through.
Now, FIVE ROSES has made a habit of success.
Its quality is big enough to accommodate your best trade, while gradually winning over to higher quality and price the holder of the slim satchel.

• • • •

The tendency of the times is towards better quality and food purity.
We must either fall in line or go to the rear.
It's better to fall in line, Brother Grocer.
So do your business with a good leader, not a poor follower.
Be a FIVE ROSES enthusiast and watch results.

With FIVE ROSES, Brother Grocer, you always please every customer—rich or poor.
With cheap stuff, on the other hand, you have but one argument—a limited audience, which will inevitably desert you at the very first note from a bargain bugle.
Add to this, when you sell both kinds, every boost for one is a knock on the other.
And think that "the sweetness of low prices never equals the bitterness of poor quality."

Don't have two doors to your flour department, Brother Grocer.
The "quality" door is plenty big enough for all kinds of trade to come through both ways; but the "cheap stuff" opening bars out the good trade forever.
Make FIVE ROSES your one best flour, Brother Grocer.
Specialize on Satisfaction—it pays big.

Capital of $30 Foundation for Strong Business

Montrealer Shows That there is Money in Confectionery Properly Handled—How He Made a Study of His Business and of the People He Wished to Serve—A Prince for a Customer.

Eight years ago a young Englishman of 20 came to Montreal. Working for a farmer about ten miles out of the city for about seven months, he then obtained a post as secretary to a business man. In a short time he had saved $30 from his salary, and, with this as capital, he resigned his position and rented the store where his present business is located. The rental was $64 a month, and that all had to be made before the end of the month, or at least $34 of it.

The young man who made this inauspicious looking beginning was C. R. Bronsdon, proprietor of "Bronsdon's" confectionery business, St. James St., Montreal.

C. R. BRONSDON.

In the beginning Mr. Bronsdon knew nothing of candy making, and, according to his own statement, very little about business methods. His capital we have already stated. The candy was made on the stove, nights, the chocolate being prepared in an old saucepan.

The business paid from the start. As it grew and capital began to pile up, improved methods of manufacture, larger buying, and the general trade gained, began to tell in the profit column. A factory was started in which to-day everything sold by "Bronsdon's" is manufactured.

From being purely a confectioner at first, Mr. Bronsdon has for the past few years been developing a high-class catering trade. This has made such headway that, dusing the past year, all banquets in Montreal, given to titled visitors, have been handled by "Bronsdon's."

Noon-day lunches are an added line. The trade in this direction is growing daily, and Mr. Bronsdon is already figuring on larger premises to handle it.

Advertises a Special Daily.

The total trade done during 1908 by all branches, exceeded $32,000; and this year will certainly reach $40,000. This is all from lines of goods which yield a handsome margin, so it can readily be seen that the original $30 has developed somewhat in the seven years it has been growing.

As to what has contributed to his success, Mr. Bronsdon seems quite certain—work, combined with the grade of stock made and served by him. An advertising scheme has also proved very useful. This is the advertising in his window of a daily "special." The practice was begun when the business was only three weeks old and has been uninterruptedly continued since.

As to the grade of "Bronsdon's" candies, Mr. Bronsdon has letters from many notable people complimenting him on them, among them being one from Prince Louis of Battenburg, who was a customer when here.

The above story goes to show that there are good profits in confectionery if the department is rightly handled—if the grocer only applies himself enthusiastically to the work. Mr. Bronsdon made a success of his business because he was energetic in his work, because he made a study of the public's requirements and acted accordingly. Here is a lesson for all retailers.

Export Apple Demand Exceeding all Past Years

Season of 1907 Already Surpassed—California Navels and Florida Oranges Coming on the Market—Cucumbers Ruling in Vegetable Line—Some Hot House Tomatoes—Splendid Fish Demand.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Apples are having a brisk sale, particularly for export trade. The quantity exported for the week is 71,423 barrels, over double last year's for the same week, but not quite up to 1907. For the season there are 544,019 barrels, which is almost double 1908 figures, and nearly 3,000 barrels larger than 1907.

Oranges are selling well at last week's prices. Bananas are somewhat scarce, and are quoted higher by some dealers. The general range is about the same. Plums are off the market.

VEGETABLES — Green peppers and thyme are very scarce and high. It was somewhat unexpected, as dealers thought supplies would be ample to fill all demands, and keep prices about the same.

Home-grown cucumbers are off the market, but Bostons are on sale at $2 per dozen.

Government reports show that potatoes will have an unusually large yield this year, in spite of the drouth in some sections.

Turnips show a good general crop, somewhat better than last year.

FISH—The country is well supplied with all kinds of pickled and salt fish, and this trade is expected to quiet down until after New Year's. When colder weather sets in the demand will be almost exclusively for frozen fish. Already a number of orders have been booked for future delivery, and, as the Advent season is getting near, there will be a rush when suitable weather is at hand. Prices in general rule are firm and the demand is brisk, due, in a certain measure, to the high price of meat and game.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—There is nothing of special interest to report this week, although the quantities of fruit which passed through the hands of Toronto dealers are enormous. A large part of their apple trade, however, is not seen here, as they are shipped direct from the orchards to the English, as well as the Northwest markets. One firm has already handled about 75,000 barrels. The city is principally supplied with apples brought in by farmers and sold either to the consumers direct or to the fruit stores throughout the city. These as a rule are not of the best quality.

Oranges are as common on the market as apples and are daily in demand all the year. As soon as one country runs out of season another is ready to take its place. California supplies the largest percentage, and is seldom from the market. The favorite navel oranges are beginning to come in but the most satisfactory orange for the next month or so is the Florida orange.

Devices for Saving California and Florida Fruit Crops From Frost.

It has been customary in years past, says the Philadelphia Press, both in California and Flordia, to preserve the orange orchards against the blight of sudden frost, by the employment of heating pots or open stoves. The temperature has been raised in this way from two to three degrees, quite a sufficient increase in those climates to insure the safety of the threatened fruit.

The scope of this simple expedient has now been vastly extended. In fact, the entire crop of fruit this year in the Grand Valley of Colorado, valued at $3,000,000, was rescued from killing frost by the use of blazing oil in the orchards. These fruit ranches are extensive and highly valuable; their crops include peaches, apples, pears, plums, cherries and soft-shell almonds. Hitherto the harvest has been uncertain; Jack Frost a terrifying menace. The crop of 1909 was saved by means of some 300,000 smudge-pots of different types, which actually raised the temperature in the valley from eight to nine degrees over twenty-seven miles of territory. While the temperature outside the heated area dropped as low as twenty degrees, within the protected district it did not go below 29.5 degrees. It is estimated by a writer in the "Scientific American" that the cost for fuel the first year is about $50 per acre; the second year about $15 an acre.

CANADIAN OYSTERS DECREASING.

Due to the Recent Regulations — Canada the Best Market for United States Oysters.

Frank Deedmeyer, of Charlottetown, states that the production of oysters in the waters of Canada is limited almost exclusively to the two Province of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, the following being the details:—

The quantity of production is steadily decreasing. In 1903 the yield for the Dominion was 35,757 barrels; in 1907, 27,297 barrels. Twenty years ago Prince Edward Island furnished 30,000 barrels, and in 1908 only 8,736 barrels. This season for the Province of Prince Edward Island opened on the 1st of October; it will close with the advent of the frozen season. The total catch for the province during this fall is estimated at 5,500 barrels. Prices are from $7 to $10 per barrel, according to selections.

Nearly the whole production is shipped to the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, where it enters into competition with oysters from the United States. The steady decrease is attributed to the absence, until a short time ago, of all regulations. Laws now prescribe a season for oysters and safeguard the product in other ways. The exports of oysters from the United States to all countries in the fiscal year 1908, were valued at $663,832. Canada was the best market, taking $271,760 worth, and the United Kingdom, $203,604 worth.

MAKING OLD PRUNES LOOK FRESH.

Methods Used by Grocers in Brightening up Dried Fruit.

For freshening up old prunes the following recipes are given: Take a clean butter tub, place some boiling water in it and put the prunes into it, allowing them to remain in the water two or three minutes, at the end of which time they should be taken out and drained through a sieve. The water runs off freely, and the prunes have a very much more attractive appearance having incidentally been thoroughly cleaned by the process. This plan it is stated neither increases nor diminishes the weight of the prunes.

Some grocers place a little molasses in the hot water, just enough to sweeten it making the water about the color of weak tea. They think this makes the prunes still more attractive in appearance and a trifle sweeter than if molasses is not used. The prunes are not so pleasing to handle if made a little sticky by the addition of the molasses. Either process will make the fruit bright and attractive and often even prunes which have turned white will after being washed look like new ones.

RESULTS OF BREAKING LAWS.

The season's lobsters are now practically all in the hands of the city exporters, and, while definite figures are not yet available, the pack looks like reaching the region of 35,000 cases. The pack is clean and carefully processed this season; but the meat is small owing to the growing scarcity of the fish, and the unblushing breaches of the "size" law. The northern lobsters show as large a run of "meat" as ever; but, nature protects the northern grounds by late icebergs and stormy weather, and there will always be bigger fish on that section of the coast. The day of general close down will have to come.—St. John's Newfoundland Trade Review.

DISCOVERY IN PACKING CODFISH.

News comes from St. John's, Newfoundland, that a discovery has been made of a new method of putting up codfish, in which the Newfoundland Government is interesting itsef. In the new process, the fish are separately wrapped in a specially prepared paper, which is supposed to contain preservative qualities. The fish are then packed in ice in the ordinary way and are supposed, according to the inventor of the new preservative, to maintain their flavor and freshness for an indefinite period.

The inventor is a Norwegian, at present residing in St. John's.

HOTEL FOR TRAVELERS.

Few Canadian hotels cater to travelers for commercial houses to the same extent as does Walter Walby's house, the Hotel Cecil, in Ottawa. Here, primary consideration is given to the knight of the grip every time. Mr. Walby has had many years' experience in the hotel business, and realizes, as does every experienced man in a like position, that it is the commercial man who must be counted upon to most steadily support the house. Appreciating this fact, Mr. Walby cannot do too much to make traveling salesmen feel comfortable when they are stopping with him. The Hotel Cecil is modern in every respect, being but a short time completely finished. The dining-room is a feature of the house, the food being well chosen, varied, and cooked by chefs who have a reputation to uphold. The bedrooms are warm in the winter, well-ventilated, and consequently sanitary, and finished in modern style. Running water and electric lights are in every room. Rooms with a bath are obtainable by those desiring such. Taken all around, the hotel may be classed among the premier hostleries of the country, and the excellent patronage it is receiving testifies to the truth of the statement that it is.—Advt.

How Does Trade Paper Advertising Pay?

An Address Before the Technical Publicity Association of New York, by C. R. Lippman, Advertising Manager Genuine Bangor Slate Co.

It is safe to say that very few of us who have had experience with trade paper advertising are in a position to say in dollars and cents just how it does pay. It is so closely interwoven with the personal work of the sales department and sometimes also with general advertising, that it is an utter impossibility to mathematically apportion the results among the various factors.

The only directly tangible indications of trade paper advertising are inquiries produced. I venture to say that the experience of most trade paper advertisers bears me out in regard to the comparatively small number of inquiries received from trade paper advertising, except with firms that handle a large variety of goods and can vary their advertising with special offers.

The reason for this scantiness of replies is obvious. Most of the readers of a trade paper generally know of the firms in their line that advertise in the publication and in many cases are visited by their traveling representatives.

They are, therefore, not likely to respond to the advertising by direct inquiry, unless offered some adequate, special inducement. I have tested this out by offering from time to time some new advertising literature in our ads. The first reaction in the way of responses is quite liberal, but after a short time they dwindle off to almost nothing.

Nevertheless we have good reason to believe our trade paper advertising a good investment.

If you ask the average trade paper advertiser whether it pays, you will probably get the frank reply that he does not know. At least that is the answer I received from quite a few in the course of my investigations. Some of them put it this way: "The only reason that keeps me in the trade papers is because my competitors are in, and I certainly don't want to be overshadowed by them."

That the possibilities of efficient trade paper advertising are not realized by the majority of advertisers, is readily proven by running through the advertising pages of these papers; where good ads. form a decided minority. But even those poor ads. pay for the same reason that it pays a firm to be represented in a trade directory.

The average business man seldom stops to figure out just how it pays. As one of them put it to me, "You have to keep it up simply because you are afraid to drop it."

I don't wish to be understood as indorsing this attitude. On the contrary. I have tried to fathom the results of advertising in good trade papers.

Let us take a concrete example, say a good medium with 10,000 circulation. On the debit side we enter the advertising contract, say $500 for the year. Now what do we get on the credit side?

First: We get the directory value of our ads. That is, possible customers looking for sources of supply, will find our name at the right time. This is a particularly desirable feature in the case of newly established prospects, who have not yet come within range of our mailing list. Such potential customers are generally good acquisitions; for their use of the trade paper as a source of information proves them to be progressive and wide-awake. Thus, our ad. performs a valuable scouting service, for which we allow a credit of 20 per cent. of the advertising contract, or $100. It is certainly worth that much to us a year to keep a lookout in the mast head of our ship to show us new worlds, or rather new accounts to conquer.

Second: We can utilize the space in direct selling effort for localities beyond the reach of our salesmen. This is worth another 20 per cent. or $100 a year.

Third: We can utilize our trade paper advertising to influence the minds of our customers and prospects in our favor, preparatory to the salesman's visit, saving him considerable time in closing deals. Suppose that by reason of such preparatory work a traveler saves only one day a month, the resulting economy in salary and traveling expenses will certainly total up another $100 a year—to say nothing of the greater profit or the greater volume of sales the traveler can attain in the time gained. You will notice I have allowed here only 12 days saved at an outlay of $8 a day for salary and traveling expenses—certainly a mild estimate.

Fourth: No one will deny that a standing advertisement seen by customers or prospects whenever they look through the paper has decidedly a cumulative good-will value. That is, as the years roll by this advertisement will unconsciously preempt a space for our firm in the consciousness of the reader—and likely lead to sales. For this we will allow another $100.

Fifth: If the ads bring us, in a manner directly traceable, only one customer every other month—that is certaioly putting it low—we will credit it for that with the remaining $100. That is, we estimate that through this trade paper advertising, we have acquired six new accounts a year, at an average cost of about $17 each, for this advertising space. In general advertising this would of course, be a shocking figure. In trade advertising, it is mild, as I will show by the next example.

If you object to the above analysis as entirely too problematical, let me put it another way, and still prove my contention.

If this $500 advertising contract brings us only ten new customers a year, or increases our sales with the old customers in an equivalent proportion, this would be at an expense of $50 per new account. This is also profitable. Every new account is certainly worth $50 to the house. No one will question this, if we consider that the goodwill alone of a business with 1,000 regular customers on its books will certainly exceed $50,000 in value.

So you see, the odds are overwhelmingly in favor of trade paper advertising. Of course, this applies only to good mediums; for this field, like every other, has its sheep and its goats.

WARNING!

Crescent BM&Co. TRADE MARK. Brand

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

A TOUCH DOWN

FOOTBALL at this particular season of the year is attracting the attention of thousands of people. TOUCH DOWN is one of the terms spoken of in describing an important feature of the game.

Do you allow your customers to make Touch Downs with you?

Do they get into your debt for forty to fifty dollars when you did not intend to let them have more than fifteen or twenty dollars credit?

Do they ever dispute their accounts and make a touch on you for two or three dollars at time of settlement?

As Umpire and Referee the McCASKEY stands at the head of them all.

Your accounts are posted.

You place the limit.

McCASKEY stops the play at your limit mark.

There are no disputes—no foul plays.

The McCASKEY pleases the merchant and customer.

Bowmanville, 26th October, 1909

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of the 23rd inst. and also the receipt from the Express Company of the 5lbs. of Blue Ribbon Tea sent me for 60 ½lb. coupons, from your tea packages. I have to thank you for your promptness in delivery.

I have tried the tea sent, and find it equally good with the regular packages procured from the grocer. I mention this as some said the tea sent as a premium would not be as good as the regular package tea, but I have proved that it is equally good; in fact, I fancied it was better, but this may be imagination on my part.

Yours truly,

A System for Ascertaining Cost of Doing Business

Percentage May be Found by Determining the Weekly Sales and Weekly Expenses and Taking into Consideration the Cost of the Goods—Statement for the Year Should be Kept so that Average Percentage May be Obtained—An Important Matter to Look After.

Owing to the increase in the cost of doing business, and the proportionately smaller profits on goods in many cases, grocers are beginning to feel the necessity of a simple but accurate system of finding out and keeping an account of the cost of doing business. The Canadian Grocer has made enquiries among a number to find out whether any had a system that could be recommended, but did not find one who is keeping a weekly record of his business in a way to show the percentage of cost on his turn-over. The importance of an accurate knowledge of the expense of doing business, compared with the turn-over, cannot be overlooked. If this part of the business were better understood, it would in many cases waken up grocers to the fact that they were handling some goods considerably below cost.

The methods of some grocers of rushing into expense without counting the cost has been altogether too frequent, and the time has come when those who wish to survive among the fittest, must take more precautions as to what they are actually doing.

The difficulty of estimating the cost is not an easy matter. Such expense items as help, rent, light, heat, taxes and insurance, stand out as certainties, but there are innumerable other items which work their way in so that the amount of expense cannot be exactly ascertained. It is a safe policy, however, to watch the weekly or monthly turn-overs closely and govern the outlays accordingly.

As time goes on, other items may be added to the list of fixed expenses, and when the year is out and stock-taking takes place, the total cost of doing business may be fairly well estimated. Weekly or monthly, it may be ascertained what percentage of the turn-over is necessary to meet the current expenses, as shown by the accompanying illustration. Then, at the end of the year, the weeks or months may be examined individually, and as a whole, in order to get a concise view of the cost as against the profits.

Working Out a Plan.

In suggesting a definite plan, let us consider a business of $500 per week. The object is not to show the actual facts in figures in connection with any particular business, but to show how to obtain a system to estimate the percentage of cost of running the business. In a $500 per week business the expenses might run something as follows:

To rent per week	$15.00
To 1 salesman	12.00
To 1 saleslady	8.00
To 1 driver	9.00
To feed, 1 horse	3.00
To shoeing and repairs	1.00
To gas	1.50
To telephone	1.00
To ice and coal	1.50
To insurance	.21
To trade paper	.04
Total weekly expense	$52.25

This would show that the cost to handle $500 would be $52.25, or 10.45 per cent. on the turn-over or sum received. The profits on the goods, however, are based on the cost. As this is difficult to obtain on the daily sales, the nearest approach for practical purposes is to figure on the money received for goods sold. If the expense of selling $500 worth of goods is $52.25, it would figure out at about 13 per cent. on the cost, allowing say for 25 per cent. profits on the first cost. Of course, any other percentage of profit can be taken and the percentage of doing business obtained in the same way.

Keep Weekly Statement.

When this percentage is secured, the merchant has always something to work on. He knows his cost and can easily figure out what his selling price will be by adding on an amount equal to the expense of making the turn-over and what profit he expects to get.

By means of a statement, illustrated by the accompanying cut, close tab can be kept on the expense of doing business in comparison with the weekly sales.

There is some difference of opinion as to how the cash book should be kept, where a credit business is done. Some try to add the cash with what is charged that day, but this means a lot of work and more or less confusion. A better way seems not to count the credit sales until they are paid, and then count that money as cash sales on the day he money is received. The weekly sales are, of coure, the totals of the daily cash book for the week.

By keeping up this statement, it

Weekly Sales and Expenses During 1909.

Jan. 9	500. 00	52. 25	10. 45
Jan. 16	400. 00	51. 00	12. 75
Jan. 23	340. 00	52. 00	15. 3
Jan. 30	450. 00	53. 50	11 89

Weekly Statement, Showing a Simple System of Determining the Cost of Doing Business.

will show the sales of each week, as well as the total at the end of the year, together with the total expense and the average percentage.

This will become more interesting from year to year, as the business is growing. As this is a matter that will have a good effect on the general trade, if put into practice, it would be beneficial to know of systems other than the one here suggested, which are now in operation.

The death of Joseph H. King, better known as "Shad King Joe," of Newcastle, Del., will leave a vacant place in the fish trade of Canada and the United States. During 50 years of business, King shipped millions of fish to all parts of both countries, sometimes as many as 10,000 a day. Death occurred at 77 years of age, and was due to paralysis.

WHY YOU SHOULD ENTER.

It is an undisputed fact that window displays and newspaper advertising are valuable in selling groceries. By using these two methods in getting business, therefore, grocers are not going out of their way. They are following along lines of least resistance to their own financial advantage.

In dressing your Christmas window, take a little extra trouble, and make it the best you ever had. The Canadian Grocer, as has already been announced, is offering cash prizes for the best Canadian Christmas windows, photographs to be sent in not later than December 31st.

Following last year's precedent, window dressing contestants will be divided into two classes:

For the best selling window display shows in (1) a city over 10,000 population, and (2) in towns and villages under 10,000 population.

In the window display contest in each case there will be two prizes as follows: 1st, $7 in cash; 2nd, $3 in cash, making in all $20.

To enter the contest send a good, clear photo of one or more Christmas windows, with a description and the name of the person who arranged the display.

Most grocers use increased newspaper space during the Christmas season with a view to booming holiday trade. We want to get copies of these advertisements.

The advertisement submitted should be about Christmas goods sold through grocery stores. All that is necessary is to forward one or more clippings from your local paper to us with the name of the writer of the advertisement, and the name of the paper it was clipped from. There will be a prize of $5 cash given to the winner.

The award will be made by an advertising specialist and will be announced, with a reproduction of the prize ad., shortly after the close of the contest. All entries in each case should be mailed not later than December 31, to the Editor of The Canadian Grocer.

Saving Money by Careful and Judicious Buying

A Maritime Merchant Keeps Want List and Gets Salesmen's Assistance—Tends to Prevent Loading up with Slow Sellers Which Increase Outlay—Saves Time of Traveler and of Himself.

There is nothing in the retail store that will make or lose money to the merchant more rapidly than the buying system—it all depends upon whether there is a good or poor one in operation. There is every reason to believe that many of the failures in business are due to careless and slovenly methods in buying, and no one will doubt that the better the system is the greater amount of money will the merchant save.

In these days of progress, it is the business man with the scientific methods that survives the longest. There are a few yet who still cling to old ideas and who say: "Oh, I have no time to read and study those things; my father never used anything like that, and I don't think I'll start." But this class of merchant is assuredly wearing few. A critic of store methods who has watched the trend of retail merchandizing in Canadian stores during the past year, will tell you so. Ask yourself, "What improvements have I made this year, and have they profited me?" and you will agree that they have. On the other hand, you may not have improved your mehods, but run along in the same old rut. Is your business increasing as others are doing?

These are pertinent questions and should not be side-stepped.

Benefit of a Want List.

A merchant in one of the Maritime Provinces reports considerable success with his "want list." This is a list, which he keeps to show just what stocks are running short. Each of his salesmen and salesladies have a similar one, and every time an article is sold they take notice of the remaining quantity. If the stock is in small compass, the fact is jotted down on the want lists, and at night they are all turned into the proprietor, who does the buying. When the traveler comes around he has something definite to work from and doesn't lose any time running around the store to see what goods he has left.

How Money is Saved.

His method serves different purposes. It interests the clerks in the goods, because they assist in the buying; it saves both the merchant's and traveler's time; it shows what stocks need to be replenished and serves to prevent the duplication of already large stocks.

The latter is where the money is made. Every merchant is anxious to have a big turn-over with the smallest outlay possible, but if he places in large stocks of a couple of dozen lines, which are not good sellers, his outlay is going to be large. His turnover, of course, may be also large, being made up on other goods, but the less the outlay in comparison to the turn-over, the greater are the profits. This shows that carefulness in buying is something that must not be overlooked, because it means dollars and cents to the retailer, and it is the accumulation of these, together with a smooth and happy life, that everyone is looking forward to. Judgment is the thing that counts.

THE PLACARD CHANGED.

Amusing Incident of Former Days in Winnipeg Told by a Merchant.

J. A. McKercher, a Winnipeg merchant, tells of an amusing incident which occurred many years ago when the agitation for early closing hours was interesting Winnipeg grocers. He, in company with the late Mr. Bryson, then of Bryson & Stone, and later a wholesaler in Ottawa, drove about the city one afternoon for the purpose of distributing the cards duly printed, "On and after (a certain date) I promise to close at 6 o'clock, etc.," and with a view to getting as many merchants to sign them as possible. They stopped at a small store, managed by a representative of the Jewish race, whom they knew would not agree to any policy which would seriously hinder the realization of his ambitions to accumulate wealth. They entered, but the proprietor was not in. A small girl peered over the counter, and much to her amazement, the intruding 'urchins' proceeded to placard the entire store with the printed agreement cards. About twenty-five of the cards were posted or hung somewhere in the store, and soberly the boys disappeared. The proprietor signed the pledge afterwards, but not without mutilating the original reading. For weeks a card hung ouside the little store, upon which was printed crudely in English and Hebrew: "On and after (a certain date) I promise not to close this store at 6 o'clock."

The Preparation of a Preserve and Fruit Window

Montreal Grocer Shows One Simply Arranged, but Effective in Selling—His Windows are Regularly Changed—Suggestion for Taking a Photograph.

In November and early December, when there is considerable interest displayed by the consumer in new-pack fruits and vegetables, as well as in the later fresh fruits, a window such as that recently dressed by Wm. Currie, Montreal, is of particular interest. As will be observed from the accompanying photograph, Mr. Currie has prepared an artistic yet simple window.

The background is formed by three pyramids of canned goods, peas, tomatoes and corn being shown. The four pyramids of preserves which are on a smaller scale and placed a little differently add to the effect, although the pyramids on either side of the main ones would have been more artistic, if they had been finished off by the placing of another jar on top of each. Another suggestion which might be offered is the removal of the jars of preserves along the front of the window, which give a scattered effect to the whole. The baskets of late fruit displayed is a good idea, although the effect would have been better had they been placed in a slanting position in order to more clearly show the contents. On the whole the window is a good selling one.

Mr. Currie is one of those progressive grocers who believes in having his window changed regularly, and some particularly nice displays are found in his shop front in the course of the year.

A suggestion might be made here which other grocers could adopt, and that is, when having a photograjh taken in the evening as this one was, they should have lights in the window or reflecting into the window, turned off, so as to ensure a perfect photograph being taken by flashlight.

A Montreal Window that Produced Good Selling Results.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WINDOWS.

By Geo. Nicholson.

Never dress the window for any purpose other than as a means of advertising your goods.

Don't forget that the windows, like newspaper advertising, is intended to bring results.

Don't stick to one style of trimming. Branch out. "Variety is the spice of life."

Don't wait until Saturday to wash your windows.

Don't forget that dirty windows shut out trade as well as light.

Don't put in freak displays that have no connection with your business.

Don't neglect to have neat, attractice show cards.

Don't forget the keynote of a good display is simplicity.

Don't overcrowd your windows.

Don't overlook the seasonableness of all displays.

Don't have one of your clerks washing windows or sweeping the walk after business has started.

Don't show too many different kinds of goods at once.

Don't fail to "hook-up" your window displays with your advertising. They should pull together.

HAVE A BOARD OF TRADE.

For some time the business men of Rossburn, Manitoba, have felt the urgent need of organizing a Board of Trade in that place. At a meeting held for that purpose, at which many retail merchants were present, the following officers were elected:

President, Mr. Burnie; vice-president, Geo. Watson; secretary, B. H. McKee. Committees were appointed as follows: Messrs. Peckoff, H. W. Johnston and D. Hough; finance, Messrs. Burnie, H. R. Ross and Geo. Watson; publicity, Dr. Evans, H. W. Johnston and B. H. McKee. W. A. Anderson was appointed correspondent.

THE D. C. T. A. BANQUET.

The annual meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association will be held in the ladies' ordinary of the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. There may not be as much to be done this year as heretofore, owing to the fact that officers were elected at the general meeting held a short time ago. A date has been set for the annual banquet, which will be held in the new banquet hall of the Windsor, December 20th.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

How to Answer the Telephone—The Use of Tact in Listening to Complaints Over the Phone—Carefulness in Taking an Order—Never be Under an Obligation to Any Customer.

By H. B. Thomas.

The advance of the times has brought with it a widespread use of the telephone in the business arena. So far as the merchant's position is concerned, he does a great deal of his trade by telephone, and naturally he should be an adept at taking orders and talking to customers in the proper manner, and he should teach his salesmen to do the same.

A lot depends on the facility and correctness with which a salesman takes an order. If customers are to be retained they should be handled with tact, and particularly when they are sending in their orders by phone message.

Usually when a salesman answers the phone he says, "Hello?" This might easily be changed to good advantage in saving time. Instead of the "Hello?" query, try, "This is Mr. Kennedy of Brown's grocery." The party at the other end of the line has nothing to do but tell who she is and go on ordering. She does not have to ask, "Is that Mr. Brown's store?" and "Who's speaking?" with the possible chance of the clerk having to say over the names two or three times.

Don't Lose Your Head.

Many a clerk loses a customer to the store and sometimes his job as well, by losing his temper when someone registers a "kick" over the phone. That's the very time when he should endeavor to remember to "keep his head." Getting angry, too, is almost sure to lose the customer, even if you are not in the wrong.

The diplomatic method would be to treat her with all the tact you can possibly muster. If she says her account is wrong, tell her that you will take the matter up with the bookkeeper and have it corrected. It is always best to assume that you are wrong, unless you know positively that you are not, as this shows a willingness on your part to straighten out the matter.

The Value of Tact.

If a kick is made about an undelivered parcel, do not say that it left the store and you are sure it must have been delivered. Better make it, "I am sorry, Mrs. K—, and I shall immediately look it up and let you know right away; we always try to make no mistakes, and regret that this has occurred."

Then, if it should turn out that the deliveryman left the parcel at the rear door with the maid, and that she forgot to speak of it, the purchaser will be under an obligation to you.

That is where salesmen score. Never allow a customer to get even with you. Always keep a little ahead by your kindness and service, so that you have no hesitation in meeting any customer who enters the store. When you are under an obligation to others you are at a decided disadvantage.

In telephoning, talk to a customer as you would if she was standing before you, and, above all, avoid mistakes in taking and filling orders.

POINTERS FOR SALESMEN.

A voice well cultivated is an important factor in a salesman's equipment.

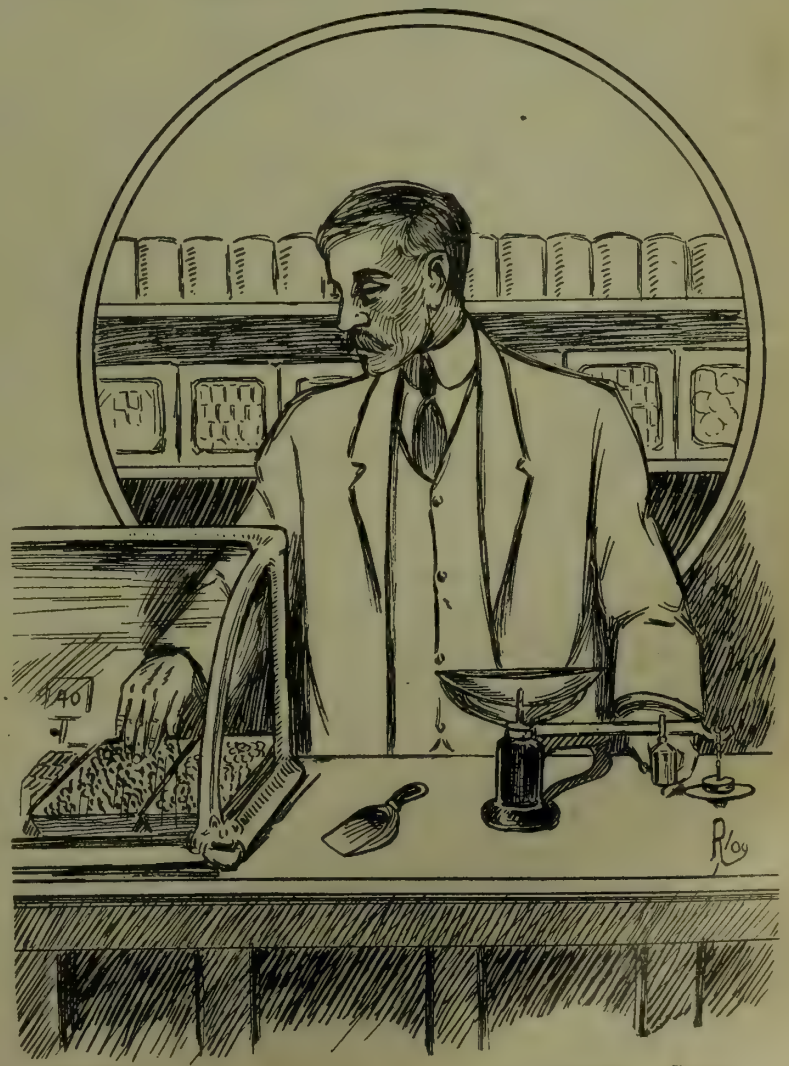
A salesman should train his memory to remember names and faces.

A vivid imagination, properly portrayed, is a winner in making a deal.

Never try to impress upon a customer that you or your house is better that he is.

A salesman should always be careful to see that the buyer does not switch him from the main line of his argument when he is working up to the closing of the deal.

Never lose time in discussing with the house their faults, but study carefully your advantages; it is more easy to criticize than to commend; no man or company is perfect.



If a salesman will consider all points which come up in his vocation from the other fellow's point of view, he will find it helpful.

Too many salesmen look upon their success or failure as luck. This is not true; it depends upon their natural and developed qualities, coupled with hard, conscientious work.

A salesman who is tactful enough to compliment a buyer, seldom makes a mistake in doing so, but be careful and not overdo it.

The personality of a salesman wins or loses him as many orders as the quality or prices of his goods.

THINGS THAT SHOULDN'T BE.

A Grocer Handling Candy With the Hand Instead of With a Scoop.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Montreal Grocers Have Unique Idea for Opening the Door—The Winning of a Good Customer—London Price Cutters Losing Money on Dried Fruits—A Charge System that Worked Successfully—Western Merchants Have Automobile Delivery.

A Method for Convenience.

Ormstown, Que., December 1.—A. Bastien, a progressive Ormstown grocer, has evolved a handy method of placing goods in connection with his window displays. Supposing he has a display of canned goods in the window. Just under the back of the window are shelves, on which is placed his reserve stock of those lines. Thus a customer seeing the display, can be served with those goods without going to the back of the store. This quickens the service to a marked degree by precluding the necessity for going to the back of the store for the most frequently called for lines.

How a Good Customer Was Won.

Vancouver, B.C., December 1.—Grocers, like dry goods merchants, should keep in touch with the styles. If there is something new on the market, they should know what it is, and if it is not in stock, they should be able to get it at a moment's notice if called for. This was emphasized by a grocer the other day who said: "I got a new customer a short time ago, simply by keeping my eyes open, and he is a good one, too. And the transfer was over a very simple matter. I make a point of visiting the wholesale establishments at least three times a week, and if business is slack, I always go there to look around. I take in them all, like the departments of a fair for grocers, and one day saw the new dates arrive. My regular dealer's consignment was delayed, in fact, it was a week or two late. My opposition dealt at the same place, and he got no dates while I ordered from another wholesaler. A man came into my store and got a pound or two, remarking that my competitor had none, which seemed strange since they were on the market. He called up for some by telephone and had been told that it would be a week before any were in, repeating the words of the wholesaler. He saw mine next day, and observed that it was funny that one man could have them and another not. I told him how I got them, and he evidently thinks mine is the store to call at, for he is assured of getting at least what is on the market."

Price Cutters Lose Money.

London, Ont., December 1.—There is a merry war in progress among a number of city grocers in regard to the prices of raisins. A short time ago a grocer came out with an offer of four pounds of raisins for a quarter. Next day a member of the association, whom it is said, did not consult the other members, came out with five pounds for a quarter. Many of the other grocers who belong to the association refuse to make any changes in their prices, but others have followed the lead, it is said, and are cutting prices also. The result is that a few grocers are selling raisins at a price that leaves them absolutely no profit, and besides they have incurred the censure of other members of the association, who claim that the better way to have dealt with the matter would have been for all the grocers to have had the one old price and sold only high-grade goods, instead of trying to sell cheap grades of raisins at starvation prices.

Looking for Better Methods.

Pictou, N.S., December 1.—In order to keep his coal-oil away from the other goods in the delivery wagon, a Pictou grocer has placed an oil tank underneath the box. He has a tap in this and whenever coal-oil is ordered it is poured in the tank at the store.

While this system of delivering coal-oil is the best that he has yest devised, it is not altogether satisfactory to him and he is anxious to hear from others who have a better method.

Another matter upon which he would like ideas is the delivery of goods. For instance, a customer comes into the store and wants a certain article delivered to the south end of the town in time for dinner and another wants something delivered to the north end at the same time.

He said his method of getting over the difficulty was the use of a time-table for delivering goods in certain districts at specified times. This plan had worked fairly well but not to his entire satisfaction.

Extra Help for Christmas.

Lindsay, Ont., December 1.—The near approach of Christmas reminds the grocer that he must look around for extra help during the busy season. There is no business that stands to make larger profits during the Christmas season than the grocery business, at least this was the opinion one Lindsay grocer gave to your representative. Already the windows have assumed their "Christmassy" appearance and have contained the necessities or ingredients that go to make the delicious pudding for the 25th of the following month. Extra help has already been engaged and the advertisements of the grocers tell the citizens that they are prepared to cater to their wants.

A Successful Door Hint.

Montreal, December 1.—Many grocers here are using a little business help which is not any too well known and yet is so simple and effective that any storekeeper can instal it. That is a weighted rope which is attached to the top of the door and brought through a series of hooks around behind the counter. A slight pull on the rope and the door opens. It looks almost like magic to a customer who sees the door opened in this way for the first time and it always pleases them.

Live Things in the Window.

Peterboro, November 24.—White & Gillespie, Peterboro grocers, recently devoted a window to a display which may or may not meet the approval of critics in this art. At any rate it attracted attention. Walter Fitzgerald, who prepared, it secured a number of pigeons and rabbits and arranged just a showing of them with appropriate setting. It drew the attention of old and young, particularly the latter. More than one mother who had brought her little boy or girl to market on the Saturday of that week had to allow the little one's curiosity to be satisfied and to explain what kind of birds and "doggies" they were. The result was that they could hardly drag the little tots away from the window. It is not absurd to state that the little one took great delight in telling "daddy" about it that night and the store received an "ad." in more ways than one.

How a Charged System Worked.

St. John's, Que., December 1.—R. Goold, a grocer of this place, has had in use for some years a charge system that is proving satisfactory. With each parcel is sent out a bill. In making out the bill it is written with a carbon sheet beneath on a counter book so that a duplicate charge is made. The customer receives the original.

The customer has been educated to keep these bills so as to check her account at the end of the month. In rendering statements, only the date and amount is given, similar to statements sent out by the wholesale trade, as:

November 1	$ 20
November 5	1.00
Total.	$1.20

If the customer is charged with anything that she has not a bill for, the date and amount enables the duplicate to be obtained, and any error traced and rectified quickly.

Have an Auto Delivery.

Kamloops, B.C., December 1.—Stevens & Allan, of Kamloops, B.C., may easily come under the category of "the progressive grocers of Canada." Within the last few weeks they have introduced to the little town of Kamloops, one of the International Auto Wagons which they use for delivering goods. It is but rarely one sees an automobile delivering goods for grocers, even in the larger cities. The more surprising is it, therefore, to see one running about the streets of a town with a population of about 3,000. It speaks well for the town of Kamloops and for Messrs. Stevens & Allan, when it is found to be a paying innovation.

The business of this firm is growing rapidly. At the present time they have five assistants, besides the two members of the firm, who are to be found every day behind the counter or in their office.

During the six years they have been in business their record has been one of constant growth. Their present front store measures 25 by 80 feet. They are, however, increasing this to 110 feet. They carry a heavy stock. "The success of the firm has been," says Mr. Stevens, "through carrying goods of only the best quality. I maintain a fair price and do not believe in cutting prices as do many grocers, and I have always found that as we supply 'good goods,' the customers stay with us. We like to be progressive, and any new thing that will improve our business, or our methods of business, we are always glad to adopt. In this respect I find The Grocer very useful. I have read it for some time now. It is a good paper."

Business Education Needed.

Three Rivers, Que., Nov. 30.—Discussing the value of business education a grocer of Three Rivers says:—"How many retailers have had a business education? By that is meant a course of some kind on how to take all items of cost into consideration, what is good advertising; how to keep or examine books properly, and the general management of the store. It is not necessary to go to a school for these pieces of information. Read good literature on the subject, talk to fellow merchants, who have made successes, and study trade journals.

"By means of the latter you can always keep up with the latest ideas drawn from the experience of the most successful men in their particular line of business, in the country. It pays."

"Economy Grocery" Opened

Chatham, Nov. 30—T. Primeau & Co., who recently opened the "Economy Grocery" in the premises at the corner of St. Clair Street and Grand Avenue, formerly occupied by Richard Reaume, are introducing a few simple but novel devices, which give their place of business an exceptionally attractive appearance for a "corner" grocery. The store front has been repainted and an atmosphere of cleanliness pervades the whole place, which is enhanced by simple but attractive window displays. Small but neat hand made show cards, each bearing an attractive "catch phrase" plainly written in two colors, are used in the windows to an extent unusual even in larger stores. The familiar blackboard used by so many groceries to advertise "specials" to the passerby, takes on a new form. Instead of impeding sidewalk traffic it is fastened to the corner of the building some feet above the ground. Two boards are used, one facing on St. Clair Street and the other on Grand Avenue, each bearing a few timely hints to shoppers; while an attractive feature is that the boards are well out of the reach of vagrant dogs.

The store is featuring a few "specials" from time to time, a starter being 8 boxes of matches for 25c. The firm comprise Thos. Primeau, formerly associated with the dry goods business of this city, and his brother, W. F. Primeau, who recently moved here from Dover South.

Cleaning up Before Christmas.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 30.—Now that fly time is over and Christmas is approaching, grocers should see that their fixtures are given a thorough cleaning. In one of the larger stores visited two of the clerks were busily engaged removing goods from the shelves and giving all the woodwork a vigorous scrubbing. Before the goods were replaced in the shelves, they also were carefully wiped, and the change was quite noticeable. After the dust and flies of the summer season every grocery needs a thorough overhauling to keep it looking bright and clean.

System in Arranging Stock.

Sherbrooke, Que., Nov. 30.—"Careless stock arrangement is sure to cost you money in the end; something is misplaced, and you cannot find it just when it is needed to make a sale, or it becomes lost for so long that it spoils. It may also lead to your laying in a new supply, thinking you are short of that particular line.

"The least evil of careless placing is the inconvenience caused. Customers soon tire of a store where they have to wait till an article is found. Clerks should be taught that everything has its place, and must be returned there after showing it to a prospective customer. It is just as easy to be systematic as slovenly."

The above are the ideas of a Sherbrooke merchant, who has had experience with losses through stock arrangement, but who applied himself so that now he has a practically perfect system in watching it.

How Improvements Were Made.

Belmont, Man., Nov. 30.—With the advances of the times, merchants are paying more attention to store appearance. This is in evidence here, as well as in other places, as the store of McIntyre & Castell, to which improvements have just been made, indicates.

An extra thirty feet have been added to the length of the original building, making a total length of seventy-five feet and the whole has been ceiled with white metallic ceiling. Modern bin fixtures, finished in solid oak veneer with glass fronts which insure the keeping of all groceries in absolute cleanliness, at the same time displaying the contents of each compartment, have been installed and add greatly to the attractiveness of this department. The dry goods department has been remodelled and is well stocked with a well arranged assortment of dress goods, staples, furs, etc., while two silent showcases do splendid work in displaying fancy neckwear, novelties, and ornaments. Six dust proof wardrobes, each with a capacity for fifty suits brings the men's clothing department up to the minute. This is the latest fixture for clothing, and provides each suit with a hanger of its own, keeps it in perfect shape, and free from dust.

A shoe settee of oak veneer has been added to the shoe department and spring counter stools have been provided for the comfort of the customers. The whole building has been fitted up with steam heating aparatus, and lighted throughout with the Hanson gasoline lighting system, and there only remains the putting in of the plate glass windows to complete a work that has cost a considerable amount of thought, time and outlay, but has brought results that must be gratifying, not only to the enterprising men behind it all, but to all who are possessed of that splendid quality, of citizenship known as "town pride."

Two Good Ideas From St. John Grocer.

St. John, Nov. 30.—In sending out calendars every year to his customers, one of the retail grocers here does not follow the usual custom of having his name printed on the front, but invariably has it inscribed on the back. He claims this is a better advertisement for him than disfiguring the picture on the front. He has a demand every year for more than he can supply as he always selects something attractive and not being marred by an "ad." they are much sought after. These calendars are so much prized and admired that the people who get them usually talk about "Porter's pretty calendar without any advertising on it," and he gets more advertising than he otherwise would.

The same dealer in sending out orders always marks them with a printed slip bearing his name, address and telephone number and with a space for marking the number of packages in the order. This latter feature enables the teamster to know just how many parcels he should have for that customer, and the name on the slip serves as a reminder to the customer of the grocer from whom the goods were purchased.

Optimism cannot be bought with money. It is as free as the air we breathe. The poor often possess it in greater measure than the rich.

Wants Government Aid for Merchants' Associations

"Country Store-keeper." Thinks This Should Be Granted in View of What is Being Done For the Farmers, Florists, Etc.— Importance of the Mission of the Merchant — How He Has Helped to Build up the Country.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—The retail merchants all over the province have been watching with a great deal of interest and satisfaction the valuable help that has been, and is still being given to the farmer, at the expense of the general public. The farmers, beekeepers, dairymen, florists, etc., have received great benefits, and are reaping rich harvests through the assistance they receive from the various efforts on the part of our Government.

Of this movement the retail merchants have always been strong and cheerful supporters, and have never refused to assist, by contribution or otherwise, in every way possible to improve and better the conditions of the agriculturists. All the agricultural societies are receiving annual grants from the Government to aid them in doing their work more advantageously and in making more money, to which the retailers have never objected. The Farmers' Institutes are supported, lecturers supplied, and all for their direct benefit, and paid from the public chests. Commissions are appointed to go to European countries to investigate methods of dairying, hog raising, etc., entirely in the interest of the farmer, and all paid out of the public treasury, yet the retailer has never made a kick.

The Horticultural Exhibition recently held in St. Lawrence Arena, in Toronto, gets a free annual grant of several thousand dollars from the Government, besides the free use of the building, with a liberal grant from the city, and all for a good time and for the benefit of the agriculturist—to enable him to make more money. Now, we as retailers would not withhold a single thing, nor would we pluck one leaf to rob them of any of these privileges; but let me speak a word for the more unfortunate merchant, who begins to feel that he, too, needs help and considerations, and that his long-suffering generosity has not been properly appreciated nor fairly reciprocated.

What the Merchant Has Done.

The retail merchant has always followed the early settlers, and has done his full share with the farmers in overcoming the hardships of pioneer life. Instead of taking up land, he settled on a few acres and immediately used his influence and money to establish and build up a village. He accommodated the settlers with the things they needed, and very often waited for his money, at great inconvenience to himself, until they were able to pay. As the settlers improved their land, he increased his stock, and enlarged his premises, and encouraged the growth of the town, which added to the comfort and convenience of the people. The villages and towns had as much to do in bringing about the happy conditions of our country as the farmers themselves, and unless the villages and towns receive their natural and just support, the whole industrial fabric will suffer.

While we have cheerfully submitted to all the assistance the farmers received, I think it is time for us to speak when farmers' clubs are organized and aided by the Government for the purpose of buying direct, with a view of cutting out the retailers' profits.

They seem to forget that for their convenience the retail stores cannot be dispensed with, and must remain, in the best interests of the country.

It is a deplorable fact that the tendency of our people is to rush to the cities, but what else can be expected if the towns are not supported? What would a country be like, with a few overcrowded cities and no towns? And yet we are unconsciously drifting that way. When the country was suffering for want of improved methods and better knowledge of the science of farming, the Government wisely stepped in and as a result the farmers are now prosperous, but the danger seems to be that the importance of our towns in their relation to agricultural advantages is overlooked.

Through the fact that too many people have been induced, through consistent and increasing advertising, to deal in one place, land values in Toronto have gone up to three and five million dollars an acre. Is it not evident that in proportion as these values advance, town properties all over the country must suffer, and that, if the towns suffer, it will also affect the farming lands? In the United States there are farming sections almost deserted, and the farms entirely neglected. The young people have gone to the cities, and the old people would sell out for less than the buildings are worth, and the whole trouble has been caused by the large centres drawing the trade away from their country towns.

Government Assistance.

This is sure to happen in Canada also unless something is done to keep the trade in the local towns, and this can only be done through properly organized educatioual campaigns. Merchants and farmers should work together for their mutual benefit. They should understand the whole situation. There is nothing to hide. The cause of all our troubles is suspicion and ignorance. Farmers' Institutes should be attended by merchants, and merchants' associations by farmers, and both should be supported by the Government. If the trade conditions can be properly regulated, and economically carried out, every branch of our industrial system will get its proper share, the country will develop naturally, and the people will be comfortable, contented and happy.

COUNTRY STOREKEEPER.

SALT PREVENTS FIRE SPREADING.

Treleaven & Campbell, Winnipeg grocers, were troubled seriously last week by a fire that visited their premises. It was caused by a defective furnace, and when once loose in the basement the flames shot up the elevator shaft in their characteristic haste. The damage was slight, perhaps three hundred dollars will cover the loss, but the delay in the business caused a greater loss. Barrels of salt, which were placed near the furnace, prevented the fire spreading more rapidly.

THE NAME SINKS IN.

Perhaps no fact has been more thoroughly proven than the fact that the name of a well-advertised article records itself on the mind unconsciously, whether the reader will or no. When an advertiser talks up his goods to an audience composed of the people who are destined to handle them, his name becomes as familiar to the trade as are the names of certain soaps and pills to the public generally. The traveler carrying samples of goods well advertised in the trade press has an easier and more profitable time than the man selling unknown goods.

An era of prosperity is just now passing over Newfoundland, according to P. T. McGrath, editor of The St. John's, Newfoundland, who is this week visiting in Halifax.

"Since the Morris Government came into power Newfoundland has been making big advances," says Mr. MacGrath. "The development of our main resource, the fisheries, is being carried on, and in addition to advanced methods of curing and packing fish, an active endeavor to widen our markets and so increase our prices is being made."

A report comes from Fort William, Ont., to the effect that merchandise is going west this year in quantities never equalled in the past. Recently there were unloaded from steamers into one freight shed, 750 crates or 40,000 tins of one brand of condensed milk. About 100 boxes of laundry soap, also passed through during a few days, and the quantity of hardware en route for the west is enormous.

CASH DISCOUNTS AGAIN.

Hamilton Grocers Think They Still Should be Allowed the Cash Buyer.

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 2.—The retailers here are much interested in the matter of cash discounts, and the communication and comments which appeared in last week's issue of The Grocer on the question has caused considerable talk. The consensus of opinion among the retail trade is that the cash buyer should receive some recognition.

There is just a little lull in the retail business here. This enables the grocer to prepare for the rush that is to follow. The mild weather has apparently made the people forget the early approach of Christmas. All business concerns here are booming the "Shop early" question, and it is having its effect. Good old wintry days would now brace everybody up and make them fear that the time is short for holiday preparations. Wholesalers are pushed to the limit to fill orders and it looks as if stocks would be well cleaned up for year-end inventories.

The municipal elections are again in sight. Ald. Forth, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, is out for re-election. He has made a good start and the trade generally would like to see him re-elected.

ADVANCE OF TEA PRICES.

Packet tea men report that the extraordinary price that Green Ceylons are fetching now has placed them in much the same position as they were previously to their taking the 25c tea off the market, for Green Ceylon teas have gone up in price fully 4c to 5c per pound this year. This with the advance in Blacks, makes the packet tea business a difficult one, they claim.

Last Monday a two-inch standpipe burst on the third floor of the N. K. Fairbanks Co. warehouse, Ann and Wellington Streets, Montreal. For a while the water had its own way and by the time the street main was turned off, over a foot of water had been deposited on all three floors, with about three feet in the basement. It is not expected that the damage will be heavy, as very little perishable goods were in storage. The cause is not known, but it is thought that the cold snap recently froze the water in the pipe and cracked it. When it thawed again the force of the water did the rest.

Canners' Amalgamation

The independent Canadian canners have again the matter of amalgamation under discussion, but up to the present nothing definite, so far as can be learned, has been arrived at.

In discussing the situation with The Canadian Grocer a wholesaler closely in touch with the independent canners stated that he did not think the amalgamation would be effected.

He said that although it apparently was the wish of most of the individual canners to see the amalgamation, the trouble lay in making the terms satisfactory. For instance it was understood, he said, that the promoters of the proposition desired the canners to take stock in the new concern to the value of their manufacturing plants and properties, but that they wanted to sell outright. If the amalgamation was put through this difficulty would have to be overcome.

DEFECT TO BE REMEDIED.

Samples sent to Canada by West India firms for exhibition purposes, have to pay duty if left in this country, or primarily go to their destination in bond, be exhibited in bond, and then must be returned to the West Indies.

Considering the efforts now being made to establish better trade relations between the two colonies, this is one of the first and simplest evils to be remedied. Comparatively few exporters are willing to send us samples of their goods under such conditions, and there would certainly be a large increase in case the restriction were removed, allowing samples to be distributed at our national fairs.

Our customs department should have the power to grant free entry to goods coming here for exhibition purposes only, if trade is to be systematically encouraged. At present it is one of the little sore points with the West India merchant, and is a practically useless precaution. We need their goods and they need ours, yet very little has been accomplished toward bringing the merchants of the two colonies close to each other.

The Royal Commission will undoubtedly do a great deal toward obtaining the desired result, but it is certainly the duty of our own government to make any reasonable concession, particularly in so small a matter as this, if it will, in the end, benefit the whole country. The West Indies are so placed geographically, that they should be one of our best customers, and exchanges of produce should be almost as simple and frequent as they now are between the provinces of our own Dominion. It is sincerely to be hoped that this will be the final outcome of the present agitation and general awakening of interest in the matter of better trade with our Island neighbors.

COCOANUTS VERY SCARCE.

Many reasons for the present scarcity of cocoanuts have been brought forward. The general opinion is that there are many elements to account for the situation. At any rate cocoanuts are so hard to obtain that a Montreal manufacturer could only give a customer 15 lbs. in place of the barrel he wanted.

The recent severe hurricane in Jamaica has had considerable influence on the situation. Much of the crop in that island was damaged or destroyed and as a great part of our Canadian supplies come from that district, a decided shortage is the result. Further information regarding this commodity will be forthcoming soon, which should throw additional light on the situation.

BLUE-MOLDED BUTTER.

The following letter from a writer in the capital of Newfoundland adds force to what The Canadian Grocer pointed out in its editorial article in the issue of October 15th:

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I have before me your fall number, and a splendid issue it is. The item "Carelessness the Cause," particularly arrested my attention, as it refers to a matter that was brought forcibly before me within the past few days.

The quality of Canadian butter shipped to Newfoundland of late, is far behind what was shipped us formerly; in fact to-day, the large buyers will not purchase round lots of Canadian butter, but import Australian and Argentine butters.

One importer told me last week, that formerly they purchased as much as 1,000 tubs (about 70 lbs. each) at a time and had it shipped from Montreal as required; to-day they are not buying a pound of Canadian butter and this, when their requirements are much larger than ever. This buyer states, that the Canadian butter has been coming down in very bad condition, in many cases blue-mold running through many of the packages.

It seems a disgrace to Canada, that such should be the case and that this market should be forced to get supplies from Australia and Argentine.

J.A. MACNAB.

St. John's, Newfoundland, Nov. 23.

The Grocer was not aware that Newfoundland was purchasing supplies of butter from countries other than Canada until the receipt of Mr. Macnab's letter. We stated that New Zealand had become a strong competitor of Canada in supplying the British market even under less advantageous shipping facilities, all on account of the carelessness in the making, packing and storing of it and Mr. Macnab's letter substantiates our statements.

Blue-mold is caused through improper methods of packing the butter, as well as the wrong selection of a storage place. If butter is not solidly packed the air getting around it causes it to blue-mold, and of course if it is allowed to stand in too warm a place, the same results naturally follow.

More care must be taken in the production of Canadian butter if it is to hold an enviable position in the markets of Newfoundland, as well as in Great Britain. Canada must not remain idle and see her markets fade away in some of her most important products.

A COMMENDABLE WORK.

The work accomplished by the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, is indeed commendable. This is a provincial charitable institution which is being of much assistance to the poor people of Ontario and deserves the aid that it receives.

Last year there were 1,155 patients from all over the province and of these 65 per cent. were children of poor parents, who could not afford to pay. Since its organization the institution has treated 15,613 children, 11,550 of whom were unable to pay.

This gives a concise idea of what this large Provincial Charity is doing for the benefit of the poor.

A GOOD THING FOR CANADIAN SHIPPERS

It begins to look as if Canada is going to find the Tehuantepec route of practical service in the development of trade between the Pacific and the Atlantic Coasts.

Business men are only too well aware that freight rates on the transcontinental route militate to some extent against the development of trade between the business men of Eastern Canada and those on the Pacific Coast. To ship from Liverpool is cheaper than to ship from Montreal.

By a line of steamers co-operating with the little 193 mile line which runs across Mexico from Puerto to Salina Cruz we are in a fair way to solve the problem.

The first steamer to leave a Canadian Port to connect with the Mexican railway left in June last and carried a shipment of only 45 tons, the products of Canadian factories. The boat which left on November 15th, however, carried 1,500 tons. This substantial increase is encouraging.

Although the freight has to be transferred from the steamship to the railway at Puerto and from the railway to the steamship at Salina Cruz it can be carried from Montreal to Vancouver in 45 days.

This of course is much longer than by the Transcontinental Railway, but what is lost in time is more than made up by the decrease in the cost of freight. The saving is on the whole something like 40 p.c., while in some instances the rate has been cut in two. Although the rate so far obtained by Canadian shippers by the new route is scarcely as low as that enjoyed by shippers from Great Britain, it is certainly much more favorable than that of the all-rail routes.

There is a little hitch just at present, but which is only likely to be so temporarily, and that is the action of the railways running to Halifax and St. John. During the winter months the steamers connected with this route run from Halifax and St. John ; but so far the railways have refused to give shippers by this route the benefit of the export freight rate. This is serious. But fortunately we have in Canada a Board of Railway Commissioners, and as the matter is to be brought to their attention it is to be hoped that relief will be obtained shortly.

The railway which runs across Mexico from Puerto to Salina Cruz was built by British capitalists in co-operation with the Mexican Government, and is to-day under the joint ownership of these two interests. It is believed to be the first instance on record of a partnership being formed by a government and foreign capitalists to construct and operate a railway.

The traffic of the railway last year aggregated 650,000 tons. With European and American shippers patronizing the route as they now are a very large increase may be expected this year. Seven steamship lines, one of which is Canadian, are now operating in connection with the Pacific end of the railway.

A BUSINESS EXAMINATION.

The fact is well known that too many people enter the grocery business who have little or no knowledge about trade matters or business in general. Failure to make themselves useful as mechanics or even as laborers, they devote the front room of their already too small cottage to groceries. In many instances they go to the wall because they are unacquainted with the essentials of good business methods ; because of their eagerness to cut prices in order to get trade, forgetting to figure at all on the cost of running their stores.

Secretary J. A. Green of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States, makes a new proposal to prevent such individuals from entering the grocery field. He says that the time has now arrived when something must be done to check the inexperienced person from going into the grocery business. It should be compulsory, he maintains, to stand an examination as to fitness and experience before being allowed to embark in the business of dispensing food to the public.

A man thoroughly informed as to the expense, the perishable nature of many goods and the margin of profit necessary to conduct a successful business will not so readily risk his savings as the man with no experience and who to secure trade will dispose of goods on a small margin or no margin at all.

He is a firm believer in a law compelling examination as to fitness, knowledge of goods and in fact a general idea of the business.

CANADIAN GOODS LOSING IN ENGLAND.

At least three of our most profitable exports to England are losing their position as leaders in the market there, and it is not hard to find the causes. The three referred to are cheese, apples and butter.

As to the first, foreign competition is seeking a foothold and finding it, owing to a growing carelessness among certain Canadian factorymen, who seem to think that Englishmen must buy their cheese from Canada, no matter in what shape or condition it arrives. New Zealand is our most dangerous competitor at present. New Zealand cheese is nearly as good quality, on the average, as our own. Where they are gaining is through care in packing and grading. Holland is also gaining in the British cheese market, and will soon prove a factor to be reckoned with, owing to their proximity to England.

Danish butter is supreme in the British market at present. This is largely owing to the fact that it is all made under government supervision, and the stamp on it indicates exactly what grade of butter may be looked for in the package. This certainty does not by any means apply to Canadian butters. The packages are often carelessly put up. They are frequently graded wrong, and the general quality is not always nearly so dependable as the Danish.

Apples, too, often are being shipped across the ocean "stuffed," that is, with a centre of seconds, while both ends are of firsts. No one likes to be fooled in this way more than once, and a continuation of this practice can have only one end—a loss of a good section of our apple trade.

The situation is one which is exercising the minds of exporters conversant with it, and it is only by the co-operation of all concerned that any effective remedy can be devised.

USE PRICE TICKETS FREELY.

An important factor in making the holiday season trade a success is in preparing to handle customers as speedily as possible and have the goods sell themselves when they can be made do so. And to this end there is nothing betten than the liberal use of price tickets both in the window and on goods in the store.

Every store, of course, uses some price tickets, but few use them as liberally as they might. If pricing goods is a good policy for the five and ten cent stores, it ought to be equally profitable in grocery stores, into whose business the "syndicate" stores cut most freely.

The purpose of price tickets is to interest people in other goods than they had intended purchasing when they entered the store. And following this idea out it can safely be considered that until shoppers can tell the price of every small seasonable or household article without asking the price, enough price tickets have not been used.

Customers will invariably go to a counter where goods are displayed with a price on them. They see a sign, "Anything on this counter for ten cents," and immediately they want to see what they can get for ten cents. Often they will pick up articles and sell it to themselves without any effort on the salesman's part. It is the price card, mostly, which is responsible for the sale.

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA.

What the Kohl-Rabi is and How it is Prepared.

KOHL-RABI.—One of the latest Canadian acquisitions in vegetables is a product of Germany orginally, the Kohl-rabi. It is a peculiar vegetable in many ways, being a turnip with a cabbage flavor, and growing with the edible bulb above the ground. Another peculiar item in its appearance is the leaved outside to the bulb. This gives it somewhat the appearance of a pineapple, except that the leaves are soft, and the color is different.

The plant is very hardy, and can be grown out of doors in both Ontario and Quebec. So far it is little grown in this country, but those who have had the pleasure of eating it, prepared in the way described below, pronounce it one of the most delicious vegetable dishes they have ever eaten.

Insect enemies are about the same as on the cabbage, but are not nearly so destructive to Kohl-rabi.

Recipe for Preparing.

Cut off the leaves and peel. Boil until tender. Then slice in ¼-inch slices. Roll in egg and bread crumbs and fry. The result is a delicious food.

WANT CANADIAN AGENTS.

The last weekly report sent out by the Trade and Commerce Department of the Dominion Government contains a number of inquiries for Canadian agents. The names of the firms making these inquiries, with the addresses, can be obtained upon application to "The Inquiries Branch, the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa," or "The Secretary of the Board of Trade at Halifax, Winnipeg or Vancouver." The numbers should be quoted when requesting the following addresses:

No. 1762—A London firm of wholesale tea merchants and exporters is anxious to appoint Canadian agents.

No. 1765—A London firm wishes to get into touch with Canadian packers of canned salmon.

No. 1774—A Yorkshire company desires to hear of some firm in Canada which could take up the sale of their mustards of all descriptions.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

The Kent Company, Limited, Coristine building, Montreal, are sending out an attractive booklet, illustrating Nonpareil Corkboard Insulation, which has just been isued by the Armstrong Cork Company, Pittsburg, Pa. The booklet is unique in style, set up in plain, readable type, and is handsomely illustrated. It explains in detail the manufacture of the cardboard insulation and its uses.

POULIN'S NEW COLD STORAGE.

A large warehouse, equipped in modern fashion, has just been completed for P. Poulin & Co., Montreal. The building is stone and brick, 70x55 feet, and a five-storey structure, with a basement. There are eight insulated rooms, with a storage capacity of 50,000 cubic feet. There are two rooms, as well, for the storing of eggs.

AN OLD ONTARIO STORE

Sixty years ago the general store represented by the above cut was erected in Hartford, Ont., by T. Haskett. That was in 1849. It was rented for two years by A. Smith, then purchased by Robert Gaynor, and run by him until 1856, when he assigned to Jno. Brown, of Hamilton, Ont. In the same year it was bought by B. W. Thomas, who built up a very successful business. In 1864 B. W. Thomas was appointed postmaster at Hartford, and the post office is conducted in the same store to-day, which is now managed by his son, R. J. Thomas.

MADE MONEY FROM FORSIGHT.

A. P. Rogers, buyer, ad-writer and manager of the grocery, china and tinware department for the G. W. Robinson Co., of Hamilton, Ont., writes to The Grocer in reference to the article which appeared in the issue of Nov. 26th, under the heading, "Some Plans for Hurrying up the Christmas Trade."

"Strange as it may seem," he said, "I had been thinking along the same lines some time ago—with the object in view of hurrying up trade."

Mr. Rogers enclosed an ad. he had written to bring about the desired results and which had been written on exactly the same lines as suggested by our correspondent, Victor Lauriston. He says that it appeared in one of the Hamilton papers and was accompanied by extraordinary results—results that will go down into history as record breakers.

The moral for merchants is plain.

THE MEANEST MAN.

He went into a grocery store and asked the proprietor for a small bunch of matches. The small package was made up and the price, a nickel, handed to the merchant, when the customer asked if his purchase could be sent to his home. The merchant assented, and, calling a boy, handed him the parcel and a dime, saying: "Here, sonny; take this parcel to Mr. Blank's house."

"What!" exclaimed the customer, "are you going to give a boy a dime to take that parcel up?" "Why, certainly," said the merchant. "I would not think of asking him to go for nothing."

"Well," said the meanest man, "if you would just as soon give me my nickel back I will take it up myself, and you will save five cents."

STILL REMAINS A READER.

When a merchant continues to read a trade paper after he has given up the business, it is conclusive proof that it has proven its worth to him. This is just what has occurred in the following instance:

MACLEAN PUBLISHING CO:—I have sold my stock and leased my store 82 Wyandotte St., Windsor, Ont., to David Schwartz. I wish to have my Canadian Grocer to look over, for I owe a good part of my success in business to it. Please send my Canadian Grocer to

The Markets—Canned Peas and Corn Advanced

POINTERS—

Nutmegs—High in primary markets.

Currants—Scarce.

Coffee—Firm.

Canned Peas and Corn—5c and 10c higher.

Montreal, Dec. 2, 1909.

Raw sugars show signs of weakness, but this is thought to be only temporary, as reports from New York indicate a present shortage.

The storm in the West Indies recently did not do as much damage as was at first thought. The island of Jamaica has suffered perhaps more than others, and considerable damage to the banana crop is reported. Cuban sugar cane, however, received little harm.

One surprising feature of the large Christmas trade being done, is the increasing sale of corn syrups. People are beginning to appreciate more and more this table article.

Spices are firm and active, with a tendency toward higher prices in some lines.

Currants and dates are scarce. Nuts are reported as being below the average this year, particularly Grenoble walnuts.

The most striking feature of the week is the strength shown by canned vegetables, particularly peas and corn. Both show advances. This has been looked for, as canners had already advanced their prices. Gallon tomatoes are 30c higher, being now $3.

SUGAR—There is a very good demand for sugar at former quotations. It is principally due to Christmas necessities. The raw market has sagged somewhat of late but indications are that this is only temporary. A late New York letter reports somewhat of a raw sugar famine in prospect. If true, this should affect local conditions eventually.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Syrup sales of late show a material increase over last year, also over the previous week. Dealers are beginning to feel more confident as to this commodity. Sales for some time had been light and stocks were comparatively heavy. Molasses is firm and selling freely.

EVAPORATED APPLES— Few apples have been exported this year as compared with last year. The cause is not clearly understood, but it is thought the poor grade sent out last year may have had a good deal to do with it. Prices are steady, with a weaker tendency.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Peas and corn have gone up from 5c to 10c per dozen. This advance has been looked for by local dealers for some time past, owing to the crop shortage and increased demand. It is not thought that this price will hold long either. Prophecies are that another 5c will be added to peas shortly. Gallon tomatoes have gone up from $2.70 to $3. The whole market shows firmness, with a free sale of most lines.

TORONTO.—Canned vegetables and salmon are particularly strong just now, and some wholesalers are quoting advances on peas, corn, beans and some kinds of salmon. From present indications retailers who have not already secured their stocks of these had better do so. Peas are practically off the market so far as the canners are concerned, and are being quoted this week by most jobbers at $1.05, which means an advance of 5c from last week. There has been a short pack of corn also and the demand on this will be increased in view of the pea pack running low. Jobbers are busily engaged filling orders taken in July and August for future delivery. This work has been delayed on account of late shipments, particularly of salmon. Shipments of both salmon and vegetables have usually been in the jobbers' warehouses in October, yet some are just arriving now.

Of the fruits, Lombard plums are having a good sale, the others being quiet.

The whole canned goods market is firm, with not much chance for lower prices.

POINTERS—

Shelled Walnuts—Advance of 3c.

Canned Peas and Corn—Advance of 5 cents.

Orange Peel—Scarce.

Toronto, December 2, 1909.

The wholesale business, to use the words of one of the large dealers, is "all lovely." They, however, think that on account of the spring-like weather, people are apt to forget that we are within three weeks of Christmas, which may mean delay in buying and result in being overrushed just before the holidays. This may all the more be the case on account of the lateness of the arrival of the goods this year.

Prices are all firm with really nothing that has any appearance of a decline, with the exception of evaporated apples, which started too high. Valencia raisins are higher in the primary markets and although the prices have not advanced here, they could not be bought and sold at present prices. One wholesale house had an offer for 300 boxes from another at the same price the former is selling them in small quantities to the retail trade, but it was refused. Orange peel is scarce and sells at about 1½c a lb. higher. Shelled walnuts are also up about 3c a lb. While the wholesale men are doing well, the retailers should be sure to get something more than usual out of this prosperous season. They are entitled to a good profit and if they do not get it, they must blame themselves.

Canned goods are very strong this week, some jobbers quoting corn, peas and beans higher by 5 cents per dozen.

SUGAR—The passing of the week showed little change in the sugar market. It is yet quite firm but no change is anticipated in the near future. Although the beet raw market is strong, brokers do not consider it will have a tendency to advance prices. Wholesalers report that demand is only fair, but at the same time is just the usual Christmas call. It is little in comparison to that of two and three months ago when the fruit season was at its height.

TEA—Teas remain firm, although shipments from the primary markets exceed last year in quantity. Grocers should cultivate a demand for higher grades of tea, which would be an advantage in more ways than one. The lower grades have advanced in price and are to-day not as good value as higher grades, and do not give the retailer as good a profit. A good 40c tea will make 5 cups of tea for a cent, which is cheap enough for anybody to use, and will give satisfaction, whereas a cheap tea will cost almost the same and will not give the same satisfaction.

COFFEE—The market is quiet, and as coffee does not count as one of the specialties for the Christmas trade it receives little attention.

DRIED FRUITS—The first orders for dried fruit which were taken by travelers before the goods had arrived, are all delivered and repeat orders are coming in, which keep the wholesale trade active. All lines are firm, prices are well maintained, and in some cases prices will likely advance. Valencia raisins are decidedly firm in response to the report that they have advanced in the primary markets. Orange peel is also dearer owing to the light stock in hand. The quality of currants is not equal to last year and late purchasers are apt to get the worst. Canada has taken more currants this year than last, but Great Britain is short by a good many tons.

Winnipeg, Dec. 2, 1909.

The wholesale trade throughout the west is quiet for the present and the secret of this condition is, no doubt, attributed to circumstances which perhaps have never prevailed in this country before.

Newspapers have this fall been agitating among the farmers for heavier sales of wheat. It was evident that our grain producers could afford to hold their wheat in anticipation of higher prices. The result has been that there is not the quantity of money in circulation that there should be. In every line of business this condition has been felt and the banks have been annoyed for some time. Wholesalers report collections dull and they trace the reason to the fact that merchants have not got the money and customers are buying stintingly. Of course, retailers stocked up earlier in the season and for these stocks the money will sooner or later come. The difficulty would be more serious had the merchants not stocked well, in that case they would be without both cash and goods. It will be some days yet before the money will return to its proper sphere of circulation; should the farmer have sold his wheat at once to the elevators he would receive payment direct. In the event of having the grain shipped to Fort William, the return is much more tardy. The majority of wheat thus far sold has been shipped direct to Fort William and a very large percentage of the crop has not yet been marketed.

Wholesalers have no reason to be pessimistic, since the money is sure to come, and those whose credit is good will receive goods irrespective of the shortage of cash for the time being.

To make matters worse, the transportation question is annoying local wholesale houses. Cars are not available to bring goods in from Fort William. Goods were unloaded liberally at Fort William prior to the close of navigation. But seldom are these goods shipped by rail from that point to destination in the same shape as they leave the factory. A few days ago a local wholesale house had two cars of canned goods, unloaded at Fort William to be sent to Edmonton by rail. Only one car was available, and this was at once dispatched. Part of the other car lot was loaded into a car fairly filled with Winnipeg goods, and in that case the Edmonton stock was delayed at this point. It is not known when the remainder of these goods will be dispatched from Fort William. It is understood that the shippers' section of the Winnipeg Board of Trade is endeavoring to solve this vexing problem.

The market condition is quite unchanged this week. Foreign dried fruits are the heaviest selling, and prices are quite firm.

Specialties for the holiday season the being ordered, and already heavy Christmas stocks have been shipped to every part of the west.

Sugar—Navigation closed last Saturday, and the all-rail rates have made prices firmer. The market is reported strong everywhere on this continent, and buyers are laying in stocks, preparing for a possible advance. We quote the advanced prices of two weeks ago:

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—United States syrup speculators are making strenuous efforts to get into the Canadian market, but they have thus far been shut out. The southern market declined four scales last week, but the Canadian quotations remain unchanged. Molasses is moving well at this season, and the recent arrivals are said to be excellent in quality.

EVAPORATED APPLES — The market is easier and it is reasonable to expect a lower market. The price to-day ranges from 9½c to 10½c, depending on the quality.

MAPLE PRODUCTS—The prices are unchanged, but there is a possibility of an advance, owing to the incdeased popularity of the staple during the past few weeks. Last spring's stocks are in excellent condition.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS — These lines are all firm, notwithstanding the large supply of new goods. The crops were short in many lines and in the raisin market there was a corner, which tended to boost the prices. These facts, coupled with the great fact that all lines are popular in the west, owing to the shortage of fresh fruits, has the tendency to keep the market strong. Most of the supplies are in. At any rate there is no apparent shortage and no delays in shipments.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Dec. 2, 1909.

Malaga grapes are being quoted this year at $8 per barrel, the first now being in the wholesales, though the retail price is not yet settled. They will sell at 25c or 30c per pound. This quotation is higher than a year ago, when the price was $7.50. On that occasion, many of the wholesalers, or those who brought in large consignments, lost on these grapes, since they did not clear up before Christmas, and after that the demand fell off so much that goods had even to be thrown away. They sold for almost any price. So it is not probable that the $8 figure will be maintained throughout the season, for an effort will be made to get clear of stocks in good time.

New navel oranges are selling at $4, but even at this, the fruit is on the sour side, and cannot be classified as thoroughly first-class.

Apples go all the way from $1.50 to $2.50 per box, retailing mostly at $2.75 and $3. On account of the sharp frost of last week, potatoes have gone up $2 a ton, and are now quoted at $14. It is not thought that general injury was done to the supply, such as last winter, when the frost was sharp and continued. The ruling prices here are:

ST. JOHN MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 2, 1909.

Three steamers which sailed last week from this port to Havana, Cuba, took away 20,000 barrels of potatoes, worth $40,000 in the Havana market. J. C. Manzer, of Andover, who was in the city superintending the shipment of a large quantity of the tubers from his district, said, in commenting on the increased business with Cuba, that the Cuban market requires 450,000 barrels of potatoes a year, and the larger part of this quantity has been supplied by the United States. He said that although the rot injured the crop to a considerable extent this year, there are more potatoes in the St. John valley at the present time than there have ever been before at the same date. A conservative estimate would be 50,000 barrels.

The steamship Teodoro de Larranaga left Mauritius on October 18 for St. John with a full cargo of sugar. She is due here this week, and the cargo will be sent to Montreal by rail. The Robert Reford Co., to whom the steamer is consigned, state that other sugar boats will come here during the winter.

W. A. Smith, representing Lloyd & Scully, of Sault Ste. Marie, was in the city last week, and sold, through DeWitt Bros., of Fairville, three carloads of eggs at 26c a dozen. The eggs are to be shipped from Owen Sound to this city and are for the local market. It is seldom that St. John merchants have to go so far afield for their eggs.

In the local markets prices are comparatively unchanged from last week. American clear pork has advanced, butter is firmer. Quotations now are:

HALIFAX MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 2, 1909.

Halifax jobbers report business brisk in all lines of groceries. The fall trade is fully up to expectations, and a large amount of goods is being turned over. The commission men are rushed with orders for fruit and produce. A general scarcity of fresh-laid eggs is reported, and the price is high for the season of the year. The farmers have no difficulty in disposing of their stock as soon as it is marketed. While the wholesale price varies for new-laid stock, 32c is about the average, though some of the dealers at times get a slant, and buy a little lower. Case eggs are not any too plentiful, the receipts from Prince Edward Island this year being smaller than usual. This is due, it is said, to the fact that large quantities have been sent direct from the island to Winnipeg, and other cities in Western Canada. Case eggs are firm here at 28c.

The butter markets are practically unchanged. The price is steady for the best quality, of which there is only a fair supply on the market. There is lots of inferior butter on the market selling at a reasonable price, but the demand for this is only light. Some of it can be purchased for 20c. The best quality in large tubs is selling at about 25c.

Wentzell's Limited is the first firm in the Maritime Provinces to import a carload of British Columbia salmon by steamer from Vancouver via Mexico, thence by the Tehauntepec Railroad across Mexico, thence by the Elder-Dempster steamer to Halifax. The importation was made by this route to save freight, and it is considered to be a shrewd move on the part of the firm.

Pork and beef continue to advance, and higher prices are quoted this week on both. The continued advance is having a bad effect on sales, only those purchasing at present who require pork and beef for immediate use.

Business men of Odgensburg, N. Y., are combining in an attempt to weed out dead-beat customers. They propose to have a central bureau, into which each will turn his bad-pay list, thus enabling complete lists to be given all business men. This is something similar to the collection system now in vogue in Guelph and other cities and towns in Canada.

Grocers Should Not Sell Tea

unless they know by actual home test that it is good value for their customers' money. The tea you can buy to-day to retail at 25c. is too poor in quality to be anything else than dear in price. Would you care to drink the tea you are now selling for 25c.? The quality of this grade of tea has decreased in value about 5c. a pound in the last few years. How long do you suppose your customers will be satisfied with such tea? Just until you, or another live grocer, induces them to try a better grade. Why don't you do it?

Since we discontinued the 25c. tea the sales of Red Rose Tea have shown a most remarkable increase. Could there be better proof that people appreciate good tea and will willingly pay the small difference to get it? The very remarkable growth of Red Rose Tea in so short a time is the best proof possible of its high quality. That is why it pays you to recommend SCALE VERSUS MEASURE.

A Live Question Among Associations in the United States.

In the course of the state convention of the New Jersey Retail Merchants' Association (U.S.A.) the subject of selling all vegetables by the pound, instead of by measure, was discussed at length, and a resolution was passed indorsing the weighing system. It was decieded to urge legislation making the weight system compulsory, for it was the consensus of opinion that weighing was by far the fairest and mast satisfactory. All the members agreed that if vegetables were weighed, instead of measured, both the storekeeper and the consumer would get a fair deal, for scales are not so liable to be incorrect as measures, and there is less room for crookedness on the part of wholesaler and retailer. The convention strongly advocated the new plan, and will use all its influence to bring it about.

Columbus (Ohio) retail grocers will make a determined effort to secure the passage of a bill by the Legislature this winter, providing that groceries shall be sold by weight instead of by measure. Everything in the way of solid food, it is proposed, shall be sold by weight.

The Cleveland (O.) Retail Grocers' Association has instructed its legislative committee to formulate plans to secure legislation to prevent the use of trading stamps, requiring sale of goods by weight instead of by measure, enacting a quantity clause as part of the State Food law and enacting a "moving" ordinance requiring moving concerns to register removals of families.

The Causes for the Present High Prices of Lard

Hogs Being Sold Before They are as Fat as They Should Be—Cottonseed Oil Scarce—Increase in Supply of Fresh Butter—Good Demand for New Laid Eggs—Little Poultry Moving.

The provision market shows little change from last week, with the exception of lard, which is higher.

The receipts of hogs are still below what packers would like to see. The sharp advance in lard is owing to several causes. On account of the high price of feed, and the great demand for hogs, farmers are selling them before they are as fat as they ought to be, which, of course, affects the yield of lard. The cotton seed oil, which is largely used as a substitute for lard, is also very scarce, and worth nearly double what is used to be. These are the reasons why lard has gone up to 16c and 17c a lb.

The supply of fresh-made butter has increased, and as the inferior butter will be required for cooking in place of the expensive lard, it is not likely that the butter market will suffer much from the low price of poor butter. With the large quantity of creamery butter still on hand, without any active export demand, it is the general opinion that butter will do well if it will maintain the present prices.

The cheese market has a fairly good outlook, and as it has been bought a little lower than last year, there ought to be a margin for the dealer to work out with a small profit. New Zealand's prospects are for a larger supply than ever, but as their quality cannot so far compare with our cheese the Englishman will make a big demand for our product. Owing also to the good value of cheese, compared with other foods, the consumption through the winter will be large.

The poultry market is passing through the usual annual dullness which invariably takes place when we reach the point too near and too far from Christmas. The general feeling is that Christmas turkeys, as well as poultry in general, will be high.

The egg market is steady, with nothing startling in sight. With the high price for new-laid eggs it is likely that farmers are doing their best to get the hens to work, and if the weather keeps mild, they may soon be more plentiful.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Hams and bacons are ½c lower, owing to very light demand, combined with a somewhat large stock on hand. It is only a temporary condition of affairs, and prices will probably be back shortly. Other lines are fairly steady, with a fair demand.

BUTTER—Receipts of fresh-made are increasing, owing, it is thought, to the lower prices now prevailing for cream across the border. This has caused some of the exporters of cream to make it up here. PROVISIONS—The local demand for cured meats has slightly decreased, and prices are steady, with the exception of lard, which is higher and is now selling from 16c to 17½c per lb. according to quality and quantity. These stiff prices are owing not only to the scarcity and high price of hogs, but also to the unusually high price of cotton seed oil, which largely enters into the manufacture of lard compounds.

BUTTER—The receipts of fresh-made dairy butter are increasing, and of this a certain percentage is below the desired standard. This may have a depressing effect on the price, but as the lower grades of butter come in competition with lard, which is uncommonly high, and its substitute, cotton seed oil, nearly double its former value, the lower grades of butter may find ready sale at a fair price.

ANALYST TO BE APPOINTED.

Food Products' Section of the C. M. A. Going Into Question of Food Standards.

Toronto, Dec. 1.—The Food Products Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is actively engaged in considering the practical side of the proposed new Food Standards for Canada.

A meeting of this section was held on Monday afternoon last in the C. M. A. committee room, and the situation discussed. Chairman Jas. Litster of the Litster Pure Food Co., Toronto, presided. The others present were: H. D. Scully, secretary of the Food Products' Section of the C.M. A.; W. H. McLaren, of McLaren's Limited, Hamilton; F. F. Dalley, of the F. F. Dalley Co., Ltd., Hamilton; Wm. Gorman, of Gorman, Ekert & Co., London; S. W. Ewing, of S. H Ewing & Sons, Montreal; A. C. Leonard, Windsor; and C. C. Dalton, of Dalton Bros.; J. B. Hallworth and G. Scott, of White Swan Spices and Cereals; F. H. Howie, of J. J. McLaughlin & Co.; F. R. Smith, of the J. Hungerford Smith Co., and W. M. Sheriff, of the Imperial Extract Co., all of Toronto.

The meeting decided to secure an expert analyst to give advice on just what the Food Standards, as drawn up, meant in respect to spices, etc., and to compare this with the methods in present practice.

The committee left in charge of this was Jas. Litster, W. M. Sheriff and G. Scott. In the course of a couple of weeks another meeting will be called and the matter further advanced.

The manufacturers interested are keen on having the Food Standards drawn up in a manner that will be both strict and practical, and much interest is being exhibited in the whole question.

THE DEALERS BLAMED.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—We read with interest your paragraph, on page 31 of your current issue under the heading, "Consignment the Remedy."

Our experience, as agents for both Grecian and Spanish shippers, points to the fact that the Montreal dealers have, in a great many instances, only themselves to blame. They will frequently provide letters of credit for goods, thus paying in advance to shippers of whom they know little about, being attracted by low quotations—often passing old and established firms, from whom they could depend on getting reliable goods—for the sake of 3d. per cwt. or 5c per 100 lbs.

We had an instance of this ourselves this season, as regards the currant trade. We found that we were being underquoted by some shippers; and our principals in Greece assured us that the business could not be done at any lower figures than they had asked. We procured them a sample of Fine Filiatra Cleaned Currants, shipped by one of our competitors; and we forwarded it to them, without comment. This is the reply that we got from Patras, "Judging from the look of this sample, all we can say is that if it were shipped under a contract for Fine Filiatra Cleaned, the buyers of same cannot feel very happy with the out-turn, as it is simply very common Provincial, which actually explains the low prices offered by the competition, at the time, that prevented us from doing any business. Perhaps your buyers will now see that their interests would have been ever so much better served if they were to apply to us for their requirements, even if they had to pay a somewhat higher price."

"BROKER."

Montreal, Nov. 26, 1909.

SUGAR CONSUMPTION IN CANADA

The table given below shows the amount of sugar entered for home consumption in Canada during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1909, and also a comparative statement covering ten years showing the totals of sugars entered under the different tariffs. The latter, it will be observed, indicates an increase in ten years of about 58 per cent. The figures are compiled by Anderson & Powis, Toronto, from the official government returns:

EGGS—The egg market is steady, with nothing of a startling character in sight. The stock in store is reducing naturally, and satisfactorily, and yet it is supposed that the stock will be quite sufficient for all requirements. Farmers are, from year to year, making experiments how to get their hens to lay at the time when new-laid eggs are very scarce and high, and they are getting nearer the point every year. With this in view, we may expect more new-laid eggs during the winter, and the very high price predicted by some for fresh-laid eggs is not likely to materialize.

POULTRY—The poultry market is easier, and the demand is light. This is owing to the season of the year. It is too near and yet too far from Christmas. A good many people are now cutting out their poultry until Christmas, when they all expect to treat themselves to a good dinner with some kind or other. Some are making guesses how the prices will rule for the Christmas trade, and the feeling is that they will not vary much from the present prices. One thing, however, is a certain fact, and that is, that it will pay the farmer to put all the flesh on them he can, by extra good feeding.

WHAT IS A FRESH EGG?

The following definition on a fresh egg is going the rounds of the trade press:—"A fresh egg, to be eggact, is an egg whose eggselence is only eggseeded by its eggspressiveness, there being few eggstant; one recently brought into eggistence, and not egghumed from cold storage, one that does not eggsplode and eggshale eggstremely eggasperating and ineggsterminable odors, and eggsite eggspressive eggsclamation when the interior is eggposed for eggsamination and eggstration by any eggscision of the eggsterior. Fresh eggs are eggshibited on eggstraordinary occasions by the eggsclusive and eggstravagant. No egg is fresh as the eggsperienced and uneggsemplary retailer who, egged on by the eggsultant producer and commission man, eggsaggerates its freshness eggstemporaneously, and eggsacts an eggsorbitant price in eggschange therefor and afterwards eggspertly eggsplains and eggsonerates himself when eggsecrated by the eggspostulating customer."

A contract is to be signed in the near future for a line of direct steamers from St. John, N.B., to Cuba. The service is to be monthly and the Government is granting a subsidy of $25,000 towards the project.

Signs of Weakening Visible in the Flour Market

At Present, However, Prices are Firm—Farmers Slow in Marketing Their Grain—Cereals are Strong, Due to Same Cause.

The general feeling of the wheat and flour market is decidedly bearish. With all the effort on the part of manipulators to hold it up, or even to push it higher, the weight is beginning to be too heavy and signs of weakening are visible. Unfavorable weather reports from Argentine which gave them temporary support has again been lost, through favorable reports. With the immense crop on the northern hemisphere and now supplemented by a good crop on the other side of the equator, must convince the farmers that higher prices are at least uncertain, if at all possible, as well as weaken the bullish efforts on the part of speculators. The tendency therefore is in the direction of lower prices. Comparing, however, the food value of flour with other eatables, it must be admitted that flour and cereals in general are rather low in price. This, in itself, has some support of maintaining the present prices, on account of turning consumption in the direction of the cheapest food, but even this cannot well hold up the prices at present figures.

FLOUR—Local millers find some difficulty in procuring the necessary supply of winter wheat to fill their orders. Owing to this fact, they are paying $1.08 to $1.09 per bushel, which they think is too high. Farmers are still slow in marketing their wheat, and are looking for even more money. Prices of flour have not changed for some time.

FIGHT OVER TERMS OF SALE.

Cereal Company Cuts Two Large New York Jobbers off its List.

Much interest is being centred upon the recent action of the Toasted Corn Flakes Co., Battle Creek, Mich., in cutting off two large New York jobbing houses—Austin, Nichols & Co., and Francis H. Leggett & Co.—because it was claimed they disregarded the "terms of sale" of the cereal company.

At the outset, the Leggett Co. paid over $50 damages, but Austin, Nichols & Co. made affidavit that they had not cut the price. They neglected furnishing it, however, so long that the cerceal company cut them off, afterwards restoring them when the affidavit was forthcoming.

Just when things seemed to have been settled, the company found to their satisfaction that the salesmen of Austin, Nichols & Co. had been ordered not to push sales of their product. This caused them to be cut off again.

Francis H. Leggett & Co. were again cut off because they failed to make affidavit promptly that they had not cut prices in furnishing Austin, Nichols & Co. with the cereal product. There the situation rests.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF SPICES.

The Spice Mill gives the following list of the various kinds of the nine spices sold by retailers:—

Black Pepper.—Singapore, Alleppy, Acheen, Trung, Lampong, Tellicherry, E. I. Long.

White Pepper. — Siam, Penang, Singapore, Decorticated.

Cinnamon. — China, Cassia, Corintje, Batavia, Kwansi, Cassia Buds, Saigon, Ceylon.

Cloves.—Amboyna, Penang, Zanzibar.

Ginger.—(bleached and unbleached) — Jamaica, Race or Calcutta, African, Japan, Cochin, Calicut.

Allspice.—(Pimento) — Jamaica, Mexican.

Red Peppers.—Zanzibar, Madras-Bombay, Mombassa, Sierra Leone, Japan, Paprika.

Mace.—Singapore, Minado, Banda, Papua, Batavia, Penang, Bombay.

Nutmegs.—Singapore, Banda, Macassar, West Indian.

Two items which must not be confused are pimento and pimiento. The former, commonly called allspice, is the dried fruit or berries of the West Indian Eugenia Pimenta, used by nearly all housewives in cooking operations, whereas the latter is the Spanish name for capsicum. Capsicums, or chillie, are a market commodity, used principally as an addendum to mixed pickles. The name is derived from the Greek word meaning "to bite," and anyone who has tasted one of these pungent products will readily appreciate the reason for its nomenclature. A judicious use of pimiento is beneficial to persons of weak digestion, and tincture of capsicum is largely used in medicine.

Hatching New Trade from the Profits of Old

SHE wasn't a bit like her well-behaved broody neighbors, to whom a nestful of eggs is an utterly fascinating, and precious, and never-to-be-too-much-sat-upon object of loving devotion.

She was simply silly, was the Speckled Brown Hen.

She used to make an awful clutter over her periodical deposits, but once quiet and order again reigned supreme in the "hennery," didn't she lose all interest in her own product and stalk majestically away? She did. Hatch them! Not she. So they murdered the Speckled Brown Beauty with a Thanksgiving excuse.

* * * *

To be sure, Brother Grocer, how many flour sellers there are that stay up nights presiding at a "Ways and Means" committee, having in view the capture of that Elusive Individual—A New Customer.

Once she has stepped across their threshold, why should they bother about the Quality of FIVE ROSES necessary to "hatch" the fledgeling custom into full-blown, permanent patronage?

* * * *

Have you ever known such, Brother Grocer?

No, of course, not.

"It seems a habit," observed a recent visitor to America, "for "your shopkeepers to think more of securing new trade than "of developing what they already have."

* * * *

Far-sighted brethren who have adopted FIVE ROSES as their flour leader have noticed this—

Even while welcoming the new customer the old remains faithful.

Your successes with FIVE ROSES only make you more enthusiastic, while discovering new selling features, which are usually overlooked in a multiplicity of brands.

You talk confidently when selling FIVE ROSES—and get the order because you are backed up by a brand known throughout Canada.

Having the approval of the housewife, Brother Grocer, a twenty-one years' approval.

That is what FIVE ROSES can do for YOU, Brother Grocer. If you will let it.

It is doing it for thousands every day, your competitors maybe.

Perhaps you have often had the intention of handling FIVE ROSES.

It was a good intention.

But good intentions, like eggs, soon spoil unless hatched.

So "hatch" your first order TO-DAY, Brother Grocer.

Need of Organization Told by Barrie Merchants

Many Think Trade Conditions Would be Much Better if Such Existed—The Dead-beat Question to the Front—Advisability of Staying in the Store, Instead of Going Out for Orders Emphasized by a Grocer.

Staff Correspondence.

Barrie, Ont., Nov. 30.—If Barrie is not in every respect what it ought to be, the fault is not with its location, for few towns in Canada can boast of a more beautiful scenery and a better farming country to back it up. The stores, as a rule, are a credit to the town, and should be able to give the community the most satisfactory service. Good service, good goods, upright dealing is the keynote of successful merchandizing all over. More so than in many other towns, groceries are handled exclusively in grocery stores.

At this time of the year it is hardly fair to judge from appearance. The month of November is always a dull month, and the most of the merchants are getting ready to give their stores the Christmas appearance.

While some store windows in Barrie are tastefully dressed, others show lack of good judgment in displaying unseasonable goods. One window last week attracted considerable attention and caused some curiosity before onlookers caught the idea that a lot of hogs in a fenced-in field with beans around it, meant an advertisement for pork and beans. The card with, "Fed well are those who eat pork and beans," helped them to solve the difficulty.

Competition is keen, and each one takes his own way to fight for his share of the trade. The need of an organization is felt, but merchants are waiting for some one to take the initiative.

One merchant states he would be glad to pay 50c per week if an active association in the interests of the retail trade and of the town in general could be had.

"We are not united," remarked another, "and instead of getting trade for the town, the merchants themselves do not support each other and are sending their money away from the town. I like the attitude of The Canadian Grocer bearing on the importance of cultivating a friendly and united feeling in an effort to build up prosperous towns for the good and convenience of its surrounding neighborhood."

"I am absolutely opposed," remarked another grocer, "to all kinds of premiums or presents. There is nothing, to my mind, that lowers the standard of merchandizing so much as this foolish practice. This at once leads our customers to think that we are taking more than a fair profit from them, or we could not afford to give presents, and by giving them, we are only giving them back part of what we over-charged them; and they don't thank us for it. It is demoralizing and should be cut out," was his emphatic opinion.

Little Time to Talk.

One grocer called upon, who was quite a hustler, hurried about his store in a galloping fashion, without taking time to say "Good day." Admiring his speed for some time, the representative of The Grocer ventured to ask when he could have a few minutes conversation.

"At 12 o'clock to-night," was the answer, and with another jump he was at the other end of the store. Feeling that he must have mistaken a friendly call of The Canadian Grocer for some one else, his attention was called to the nature of the business, which at once had the effect of turning his "race-horse" speed to a friendly and pleasant chat. He reads and appreciates his trade paper.

"Before we separate," The Grocer remarked, "allow me to say that I have a great many good friends among the travelers, who are working hard and who have to call upon you; please do not compel them to wait till 12 o'clock at night."

Another grocer thought the principal trouble the trade has to contend with is selling on credit, which, he thinks, is the ruination of business, unless a system can be introduced to check the dead-beat.

"There is something here I dislike, and that is calling on the people for orders, instead of selling to them in our stores," remarked another grocer. "It is expensive and is really not storekeeping. If we could all agree to stop this we would be better off and the public would get even better service; it is an extra expense brought on us by ourselves, and we have to take the consequences until we unite to improve trade conditions."

INCREASE IN TEA CONSUMPTION.

Brooke, Bond & Co., Review the Tea Situation During Past Year.

Brooke, Bond & Co., London, Eng., have recently issued their annual circular covering the tea situation of the year, and the present condition of the market. The reputation of this firm makes the following extracts from their circular of value to readers:

Last year in our annual review of the history of the tea trade during the preceding twelve months, we said that consumption was steadily increasing throughout the world. This year we are glad to be able to state that the increase has on the whole been maintained, and that the prospects of those connected with tea are brighter than has sometimes been the case.

We have had the usual annual dislocation of business consequent on the anticipation of a change in the duty. This year the disturbance was more serious than in the two preceding years, as there was a very prevalent belief that the duty would be raised. Consequently, large quantities of tea were taken out of bond. Stocks went down 28,000,000 lbs. in eight weeks, a quite unprecedented fall. Naturally, after the budget had been introduced, dealers had as much tea in their hands as they wanted for some months, and duty payments were very small for some time. Now, eight months after the disturbance began, they are about normal.

Another difficulty with which the trade has had to cope is the persistent advertising by certain dealers of 1s 6d and 1s 9d tea, in some cases of 1s 4d, as "best." Very determined efforts have been made by grocers to show their customers that it is impossible that "best" tea, which costs in bond from 3s to 5s a pound, can be sold retail for less than half its wholesale price. These endeavors have met with some success and the demand for good tea is now fairly satisfactory.

The great development of the Russian trade in Indian tea is one of the features of the year. Russia is India's best customer, outside the United Kingdom, Australia being the second best. During 1908-9 Russia took 3,000,000 lbs. (about 20 per cent.) more Indian tea than during 1907-8.

In Canada we find that the tea-room habit has taken root, owing to the constant influx of persons from England and other countries where "five o'clock tea" is an institution.

In reference to the proposed reduction of the duty on tea into England the circular goes on to say:

What would be the result of a big reduction of the tea duty? It is difficult to answer this question, but our own opinion is that if the tea duty were removed entirely it would be some time before the consumer would reap the whole benefit. The immediate result of the abolition of the duty would probably be a jump upwards in consumption, and consequently in prices, as it was impossible for production in India and Ceylon to be increased otherwise than slowly. Thus, the immediate effect of the abolition of the duty would probably be to put the price of tea to the consumer on only a slightly lower level than it is at the present time.

HIGH LICENSE ON CIGARETTES.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—At the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association the by-law to raise the annual license fee on cigarettes to $15 a year was endorsed. The grocers were not in favor of the by-law including cut tobacco, but did approve of the inclusion of cigarette paper. This decision practically means that the sale of cigarettes will cease in grocery stores owing to the small profit upon them, and thus the sale will be confined to regular tobacconists.

Advent Season Brings a Heavy Demand for Fish

MONTREAL

GREEN FRUITS—Oranges are arriving in increasing quantities, and grades are reported as being fully up to former years. Six lines are now on the market.

Navigation is now closed, and as a result the apple market is somewhat easier. Alexanders are practically done. Russets are on in small quantities as yet. Shipments for the week were 37,187 barrels, as against 24,396 barrels same week last year. For the season they were 581,206 barrels, as against 351,455 barrels same season 1908.

Cocoanuts are very scarce and prices are firm.

VEGETABLES—Prices are in a somewhat unsettled condition at present. Since navigation closed and cold weather set in there is naturally a higher tendency for most lines. Celery is now 75-90c per dozen. Leeks, potatoes and most of our domestic vegetables are higher, with the three exceptions, tomatoes, string beans, and cucumbers, which show a slight weakening.

Trade is dull at present, with little improvement expected soon.

FISH—There has been quite an active trade done these past few weeks in pickled and frozen fish, as Advent starts the first of December. Luckily supplies were ample to fill all demands. Some lines are now showing weakness, particularly green cod, frozen haddock, and B. C. salmon. Prices on these are expected to go up soon.

Oysters are having a brisk sale.

In prepared and smoked fish, demand is good, with a tendency toward higher prices.

GREEN FRUITS — The apple trade is becoming sluggish on account of the large quantities of culls which are thrown on this market. These are picked out of the thousands of barrels which are exported, and which do not measure up to the standard. While these apples are not perfect, they are, however, good value at the prices they can be bought for present use. They are sold as low at $1.50 a barrel. Some choice pears at 65c a basket attracted much attention. California navel oranges are already taking the lead, although a little early in the season. They seem to be the favorite orange. They are particularly large this year, and of exceptionally good color and flavor. The sizes are running as large as 80 to a case, whereas the average best sellers run from 150 to 176. Bananas are scarce, the cause being attributed to the late severe storm.

VEGETABLES — The vegetable market, with the exception of potatoes, is inactive, in fact, there is little doing. The city is still supplied principally by farmers, who drive in and sell direct to the storekeepers. A quantity of lettuce and cucumbers arrived from the southern States recently. These sell only in small quantities and at high prices. Potatoes are steady and sell for 50c to 55c a bag by the carload on the track, and in small quantities delivered to stores at 60c to 65c a bag.

FISH—The fish market is active. The demand is keen with a rapidly growing increase in consumption. The supply of trout this year in cold storage is far below last year. The closed season is over and if the weather turns out favorable this shortage may be replenished. All other fish are in good supply. Smoked finnan haddie are a favorite fish in the city, and it takes loads to supply the demand. The new style of oyster package has practically put the old pail out of business. The people know now that they buy oysters, instead of ice water with a few oysters.

J. S. Larke, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Australia, says that no specific prohibition stands against the importation of potatoes from Canada provided that certain conditions are complied with. The following provisions are exacted by the Commonwealth Government with respect to the potatoes being received from countries against which a prohibitory order has not been issued:—

Any potatoes to be imported from any country must be accompanied by an official certificate, dated and signed by a responsible officer of a Government department of the country of origin, identifying the potatoes and specifying their quantity, and certifying as regards them: That they were grown in that country; that they were free from disease at the time of giving the certificate; that they were bagged in that country in clean new bags, having the name of the country plainly marked thereon; and that proper investigations have been made by expert officers as to existence in that country of the disease (Irish blight or late blight) caused by Phytophthora infestans, and that there is no reason to suspect the existence of that disease in the country, or that it has within the next preceding twelve months existed in the country; and

The chief quarantine officer is satisfied that there is no reason to doubt the correctness of the certificate. No relaxation of the prohibition can be allowed. It is considered that the explicit safeguards now specified with the minister's approval will adequately strengthen the hands of the chief quarantine officers, and also facilitate the importation of potatoes for any purpose from any clean country. If Canada can comply with these conditions the market offers a profitable opportunity. The demand may not be limited to this year.

Fruit Canning Inspector in British Columbia

Vancouver, Nov. 30.—C. S. McGillivray one of the two inspectors of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has been in British Columbia inspecting the fruit canning factories and incidentally gives an account of some of the features of his work. He says that there are about 250 fruit and vegetable canning factories in Canada, temporary and permanent, employing each from three hands to 500. Strictly speaking there are only three or four fruit spots in the country. One is the Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia. another is Eastern Ontario, the third is Western Ontario, and the last is British Columbia. Apples have made a fine showing in Nova Scotia this year. In Ontario, the crop has not been heavy, but has been of good quality. He saw some fine fruit in the Chilliwack, Okanagan and Kootenay Valleys. The visit to Kootenay was his first, and not only is he inspecting the new canneries, but his special mission is the finding out of actual conditions and the collection of data upon which to base future legislation. He spent the month of August in the Maritime Provinces, practically going from one blueberry cannery to another. These provinces have a considerable resource in wild berries, particularly New Brunswick, but he says they do not take full advantage of it. On the prairie, the making of pickles is a growing industry.

Fire partially destroyed the plant of the B. C. Milk Condensing Co., at New Westminster recently, the damage being estimated at $10,000, the value of the establishment being $25,000. Fredenhagen & Co., the owners and operators, will rebuild at once.

"Enterprise" Economy

An Enterprising grocer, who does things right, uses an "Enterprise" Electrically-Driven Coffee Mill.

The right way is also the cheapest way in the end. It always pays. Take the experience of the Philadelphia grocer who grinds 15,000 pounds of coffee a month with an "Enterprise" Mill electrically-driven at a cost for current of $3.00.

He bought the Mill as a great convenience—a time and labor saver, and an up-to-date attraction for his store. Its economy astonished him.

Look through our catalogue and you will find Mills of any capacity, any power required, for direct or alternating current. Your local power supply company will co-operate with advice and assistance.

The Mill illustrated here is No. 08712, fitted with ½ horse power motor for alternating current. Capacity of each iron hopper, 6 pounds of coffee. One Mill is fitted with grinders for granulating, the other for pulverizing. Granulates 2 pounds of coffee per minute, and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while mill is running. If you haven't the catalogue showing all our Mills, write for a copy to-day.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and it is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good customer by passing out an inferior stove polish, which is wrong more often than it is right. RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.

Taylor's Peels

Candied or Drained, but in either case admitting of no argument as to their high quality. Made from specially imported fruit from which the essential oil has not been extracted. Lemon, Citron and Orange.

The name "Griffin" on a package or can of dried or canned fruit is a symbol that points the way unerringly to the highest quality. In selecting, in growing, in caution in packing, the "Griffin" brand excels. Seeded or seedless Raisins, Prunes, Apricots, Pears—each is the best there is or can be.

The RIGHT and the WRONG WAY

Some people think they are doing things in the right way because they do not know that there is any other way.

Some people think their way is right because their fathers and grandfathers did the same as they are doing.

Some people have not stopped to think long enough to know that times have changed, and that what was all right in grandfather's day is not right at this time.

Your Money Back

When you put in a stock of Pure Gold Goods you are investing your money as surely and safely as if you put it in a savings bank. But the interest is greater. Your principal is subject to your call at a moment's notice because

If the goods are not satisfactory, or do not sell satisfactorily, they may be returned at our expense and your money will be refunded.

Please read the above again---

This is your assurance of safety---and a further assurance that the goods will more than give satisfaction. Because if the goods did not sell and stay sold our business would be confined to selling and then buying back our own goods. Hardly a profitable transaction.

Pure Gold Goods

have the quality that makes them quick sellers. Add to this the great big advertising campaign that is pushing the thing along. Add to this the fact that every package sold to the consumer sells two or more packages to the same consumer or a friend of hers. Now, can you prove yourself a better buyer than to put in goods that we guarantee will be live, quick moving stock? A guarantee that we back up with our money back offer. You can't lose---you can't help but win.

And remember—this means that in taking stock you can put in Pure Gold Goods at 100 cents on the dollar—a regular cash on hand asset.

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped from Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

Bowmanville, 26th October, 1909

Dear Sirs,

I beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of the 23rd inst. and also the receipt from the Express Company of the 5lbs. of Blue Ribbon Tea sent me for 60 ½lb. coupons, from your tea packages. I have to thank you for your promptness in delivery.

I have tried the tea sent, and find it equally good with the regular packages procured from the grocer. I mention this as some said the tea sent as a premium would not be as good as the regular package tea, but I have proved that it is equally good; in fact, I fancied it was better, but this may be imagination on my part.

Yours truly,

Wholesale Grocers and Importers, - - MONTREAL

An additional $1 worth of goods to each of Grocer's 7,000 readers:

If 7,000 of the best grocers in Canada held a meeting every week at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg or some other point, what would a manufacturer pay for the privilege of giving them a series of talks about his goods?

If this manufacturer was able to demonstrate the solid worth of his product, and show that it paid the dealers a fair profit, could he induce each one of them to buy an additional $1 worth of it in a year?

$1 worth of any manufacturer's goods would make a pretty small parcel. Yet multiply that quantity by the number of dealers and you find that it means $7,000.

There is only one way in which a manufacturer can address the 7,000 leading buyers of grocery lines every week. That is through The Canadian Grocer.

If he approaches his talks in this paper as carefully as if he were actually addressing a meeting of these buyers—says something worth while—do you mean to say that he could not make it worth many times what it costs?

A space this size costs $425 for 52 weeks, which means that a manufacturer using it could talk to about 10 good buyers for every cent expended. The value of the space to him would depend entirely upon what he said in it.

ALL TEA DETERIORATES WITH AGE

"SALADA" is as good as gold.

IF THIS CASE IS FORWARDED TO YOU AFTER

ship it back at once, as the tea is old, and should not have been retained by the wholesaler after the date mentioned.

We take the very greatest care to serve you with the finest tea possible, but all tea deteriorates with age. Therefore, even in our sealed lead packets we cannot guarantee "SALADA" to keep without declining in quality.

If you receive old tea into stock your customers will soon note its want of freshness, and this will have the same effect on your trade that stale goods always have.

The date of packing is stenciled on the lid of every box when it leaves our premises. Please consult it and see that your shipment is not more than three months old. If there is no stenciled date on the box, it must have been scraped off for a purpose.

Uses and Abuses of Due Bills for Handling Produce

Bowmanville Grocers Charge Other Merchants 10 per Cent. for Taking Care of Country Produce — Abuses Creeping in Make Regulations Necessary—Checks are Being Used Where They Were Never Intended.

Owing to abuses which have crept into the due bill or check system adopted by Bowmanville merchants in handling farmers' produce, steps are being considered by the Board of Trade of that town to restrict their use. In many ordinary mercantile transactions it appears that the checks or due bills were practically taking the place of currency. As the result of an arrangement with the grocers, exclusive stores which could not conveniently handle produce were the clearing houses for these checks on a ten per cent. discount basis.

In country towns, where there is no open market, the farmer disposes of much of his produce in exchange for goods, and the grocery or general store is usually his chief market. In many places, when the farmer's produce is of greater value than the amount he wishes to trade, the merchant gives him a due bill, instead of cash, for the balance. It is an optional matter with the farmer, but the due bill frequently represents a small percentage premium.

The due bills are generally in the form of a small aluminum check, which states its value on one side, and on the other, the name of the firm issuing it.

Grocer Charged 10 Per Cent.

In a large town such as Bowmanville, there are many exclusive merchants who have no facilities for handling produce. The boot and shoe man, dry goods merchant, clothier, jeweler and druggist, do not want to be bothered with it. An arrangement was made between Bowmanville grocers and the majority of other merchants, whereby the latter agreed to trade out the farmer's due bills at par and, at the end of the month cash them with the respective grocers who charged 10 per cent. discount for the accommodation afforded in taking all of the produce.

Here is how it worked out. A farmer taking butter to the grocer could either receive goods in exchange, cash or due bills representing 10 per cent. advance on regular price. When the cash price of butter is 20 cents, for example, the farmer would receive due bill for 22 cents. Each grocer issues his own due bills, and on the first of each month redeems those that belong to him, deducting in each case the amount of the grocery bill due by the dry goods man or other merchant receiving his checks. If, for example, the other merchant had any one grocer's due bills amounting to $100, and against this was a grocery bill amounting to $20, this would be deducted and the grocer would give cash for balance, less 10 per cent. discount.

The majority of farmers prefer due bills, and it meant something to Bowmanville. In one of the neighboring towns there is a better market for produce and hence, cash prices more attractive to the farmer. The due bills, therefore, have had some influence in holding the country trade for Bowmanville. There were those who claimed that the expense in connection with it, however, was not equally divided. When the farmer went to a clothing store, for instance, where prices were all marked in plain figures, he would plank down, say $20 in due bills for a suit of clothes. At current prices of produce, he was paying $18 for the suit and that amount in cash the merchant received when the grocer reclaimed his checks at the end of the month. One dry goods merchant states that he cashed upwards of $200 in due bills at the end of each month—equivalent to $240 a year in discounts.

Form of due bill or check given in exchange for produce in Bowmanville. They are issued by the grocer or other merchant handling produce, are accepted in payment for goods in stores not wishing to take produce, and are later redeemed by the issuers on a 10 per cent. discount basis.

An Abused System.

After a fair trial some dissatisfaction was found with the system. Abuses began to make their appearance. The original intention was to use the checks solely as a method of dealing with the produce problem, confining them to the merchants who issued them, and in no way to recognize it as a general substitute for currency. Inquiry along King Street, Bowmanville, shows that here and there merchants have been using them in trade with each other, and that they have got into the hands of people who were never entitled to the priviliges which they represented. It is even stated that the checks found their way into the receipts at the dime theatre and that one of the town physicians was tendered due bills for professional services. As the farmer is a close bargainer, a merchant now and then would find himself granting a slight discount and then accept due checks, representing a further reduction. One merchant stated that one or two of his town customers had complained that, while they had to pay cash, the farmer got a discount. He received little sympathy when he explained that while it was one of the problems of business for which he had to pay, the town stood to gain more than it lost.

Grocers Say They Lose.

The grocers have their own opinions in the matter. They state that in some cases, they lose more than 10 per cent. in handling the produce and that, all things being equal, the dry goods merchant and others have the better part of the bargain. Butter represents a considerable item, but they state that it would be decidedly invidious to discriminate on quality. The grocers admit that abuses have crept in, but that proper regulation is necessary. Some of them question the avisability of giving checks. There are farmers, they state, who buy their groceries in the country and trade out the checks in the other store of the town.

A dry goods merchant pointed to one advantage in the system. The checks he said were much more quick'y converted into cash than an account. Experience had taught him, he said, that when some farmers had any amount of cash on hand they hoarded it, banked it, and ran an account with the merchant. The check was preferred to cash on account of the premium and sometimes caused the farmer to buy where otherwise he would wait or do without. This dry goods man said he had no objection to the system provided that it was subject to strict regulations.

At the meeting of the Board of Trade, the majority stood out in favor of restrictions, which would confine the due bills entirely to the merchants who issued them. This is said to be the plan adopted in Oshawa.

Lessening Demand in Oshawa.

A grocer of that town writes The Canadian Grocer as follows:—"Our experience during the past year or two with due bills is that they are gradually being used less than formerly in Oshawa. This is caused, we think, by the demand being greater than the supply and by farmers preferring the cash. In our case, we pay them a cash price if they desire it, or an advance price if they exchange their produce for goods in our own store."

The Value of Convincing Talks in Advertising

Things That the Grocer Should Take Into Consideration When Preparing Copy—Comparisons Made Between Ads. and Suggestions for Improvements.

Every newspaper one picks up nowa-days contains several advertisements of retail grocers. Particularly is this the case when the Christmas holiday season is not far distant and newspapers issued in December usually carry a good many grocery ads.

If, therefore, you are advertising your goods, store and name, be sure to make the best possible use of the space you buy in the local paper. Judicious and careful handling of it with regard to the goods you desire most to sell and the writing of copy that will bring results are necessary. A great many grocers buy space, but use it so poorly that they do not receive the results anticipated. Much depends on the talk—it is what you say to the prospective buyer that brings her to the store.

Consider the advertisement of Forsyth Jr., Dartmouth, N.S. This is represented by a two-column cut showing the ad. reduced from a half newspaper page size. That is one good feature of it, for the greater the space the better can the store news be set forth.

REEKS & COMPANY
Corner Talbot and Elgin.

N. B.—Connecticut Seal Shipt Oysters.

No. 1 Reeks & Company—As This Ad. Appeared in the Newspaper, it Was 4½" x 3" in Dimensions.

The neat appearance of it is another commendable feature. It is symmetrical and not overdone by large display type. The phrasing, too, is interesting as illustrated by the lines: "Mary had a little Lamb, it's fleece was white as snow. These are two well known lines—so are Mott's Pure Breakfast Cocoa and Forsyth Jr's. Famous 30-Cent Tea." Apart from that every paragraph tells something that will be of benefit to the housewife. They tend to attract her to the store to get the goods they describe. Then there are prices attached to every article which makes the whole ad. all the more valuable. The phrase at the bottom: "The man who makes good his ads." is convincing and hence strengthens the impression made upon the reader. She is confident of getting just what is said she will receive.

Considerable difference will be observed between the Forsyth ad. and that of No. 1 Reeks & Company. The latter mentions a number of articles which the grocers have in stock, but does not say much about them. The buying public usually knows that a grocery store contains raisins, figs, grape fruit, etc., but it wants some reasons why it should purchase from a certain store. Therefore it is always best to so word advertisements that the reader will be seized with a desire to buy the articles described.

No. 2 Reeks & Company ad. is a suggestion on how No. 1 might be improved. The naming of prices to the consumer is always preferable, as experienced advertisers will say.

FORSYTH JR., THE MAN WHO MAKES GOOD HIS ADS.

STALE AND WORTHLESS ADS.

Necessity of Presenting Something Different to the Reader is Emphasized by Harry Theobald.

There are two branches of advertising used by grocers which require careful attention to effect the value they are supposed to bring. One is newspaper advertising the other is window dressing.

There is a similar feature to these two methods of calling the public's attention to your goods and that is variety or change. A prominent newspaper manager stated to a merchant a few days ago that it was desirable from the paper's standpoint that advertisements should be frequently changed. The eye of the average reader spots at a glance something that appeared in the issue of the preceding day and if an ad. is left for some time without any variation of the matter, it goes by unnoticed.

The newspaper manager knows the public he is catering to better than the advertiser, and the latter should be quick to appreciate that an ads.' value lies in its power of drawing the reader's attention. The manner in which the ad. is prepared is an important detail, but it is not in the same class as the fundamental principle that an ad. becomes stale and worthless when the same old words: "We carry an up-to-date line of ..ects." appears from day to day. This is a matter that the grocer who is using printer's ink should never overlook. Changing his window display is identical from its advertising value, and both are important methods used in a grocer's publicity methods.

No. 2 Reeks & Company Ad.—This is Just a Suggestion by the Ad. Critics on How No. 1 Might be Improved to Bring Better Results.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

How Village Merchants United to Kill Mail-Order Trade — Vancouver Merchant's Method in Selling off Old Goods — Attachment to Funnel Aids in Pouring Vinegar—A Geographical Dried Fruit and Sugar Window.

Killed Mail-Order Competition.

Perth, Ont., Dec. 8.—A traveler is responsible for the following:—Some time ago the merchants of the village of Eganville found that quite a lot of business that should rightly be theirs was going to Toronto's departmental stores "cash with order." The merchants being friendly, got together, considered the matter and secured a man to find out just who in their community were receiving their goods from Toronto. This gentleman got to work and a list of names was secured.

The merchants each received a copy of this list and had among themselves an understanding that when any person on the roll asked for credit, they should be refused and told that as departmental stores had been receiving their cash business they should ask them for credit.

It is claimed that results have justified the above action, that customers have come to see that the local merchants offer real advantages to local trade. They have given the matter some thought, and at present very little that can be bought at home is sent away for.

Stocking the Store Front.

Ormstown, Que., Dec. 3.—A valuable system is in use in the store of A. Bastien, to facilitate sales of any overstocked or perishable lines. According to Mr. Bastien all that is necessary is to have the front of the store stocked only with those goods, having those farthest forward which it is most desirable to sell first. He claims that any line of goods can be quickly disposed of in this way.

Selling off Old Goods.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 7.—"It's easy enough to keep busy when things are coming one's way," remarked a shop keeper to The Grocer, the other day, "but the point is to keep going on the dull days. These always come once in a while, and then it is that we take a look over the goods in the store, segregate old stock, and pick out something that might go as bargains. The old stock is 'played up,' that is put on display, either in the window for a short time, but generally on a table inside, and marked at a good clearing price. The other goods are first-class, and knowing our customers we ring up those on the telephone, who, we think, would be most interested, offering them at a very silght reduction. The line selected is a good one, but for some reason has been going slow, and the price quoted is not such as to kill profits, being just a little cheaper than ordinary. It may be argued that in this way customers are stocked up, but we find that we lose little, and moreover the customer, buying at a better price, uses more freely. It not only means, therefore, that business comes quicker, but it clears out a line that is apt to stand on the shelves. We find it pays to have a change to attract a customer's attention, when in the store, and there's nothing better than new goods."

Fills Vessel More Quickly.

Perth, Ont., Dec. 8.—A merchant has a simple and not costly device to assist him in pouring vinegar through a funnel into a vessel. He fastens a small strip of wood to the outside of the funnel, which keeps it from pressing to tightly against the neck of the vessel being filled. This allows the air to escape freely and the jar to be more quickly filled.

Children Should Receive Consideration

St. Johns, Que., Dec. 8.—"In my store children receive fully as much consideration as their parents," said R. Goold, one of the progressive local retailers. "I figure this way: If a child is given some inferior article, or is made to wait until everyone else is served, though they came in after she did, you are sure to hear from it sooner or later. In all probability you will hear that her mother is trading elsewhere."

A Clerk Who Studied Geography.

Peterboro, Ont., Dec. 8. — Peterboro grocers have been making a specialty of advertising dried fruit just now, and many creditable displays are to be found in different windows. with the coming of the mince-meat pie, and Christmas cake season, the demand for raisins, currants, peel, etc., reaches a maximum, and the grocers are not slow in taking advantage of that fact. Among the smaller stores, J. C. Tully, has a neat and attractive display and further uptown P. Connal & Son have a "fruit" window that is neat and tasty. A good idea has been struck by Walter Fitzgerald, who has in charge the windows of White & Gillespie. He has used a floor of raisins and currants and has outlined with lump sugar the boundary of Ontario, with Peterboro located by a small lump and a little banner, with the name of the city. An artistic show card has the words, "We lead the Province." The window is attractive and the design has been effected carefully, and in good taste.

Dealt Fairly With the Public.

Brockville, Ont., Dec. 8.—Allan Cameron, who two weeks ago sold his grocery stock and retired from mercantile life, closed a career of forty-five years behind the counter. thirty-five of which were spent in Brockville and ten in New York City. Mr. Cameron's first venture in Brockville was in the boot and shoe business on the corner of King and Buell Streets, which he sold to D. W. Downey. He was in the stand five years, when he returned to New York for a similar period. Coming back to Brockville he went into the store he has just vacated, remaining there twenty-six years. In all his dealings with the public Mr. Cameron enjoyed the respect of everyone.

Thirty-five Feet of Show Window.

Peterboro, Ont., Dec. 8.—The importance of window displays is realized by R. C. Braund, who during the past few weeks has torn out thirty-six feet of the wall on the north side of his store and has replaced the two small windows with one entire length of plate glass Five large plate glass windows were required, and the store now has as fine a show window as will be found in any of the largest stores in the centre of the city. The windows will be provided with a suitable background for the displaying of goods, and as Mr. Braund carries a heavy and varied stock, he felt that the advertising the window will afford will soon pay for itself. It is also attractive, and when suitably decorated will give the building an appearance that will prove a good drawing card. Suggestion to the passerby has always been one of Mr. Braund's favorite methods of reaching the people. Although situated away from the centre of the city, there is considerable traffic past his establishment, and previously he made a practice of using small bill boards on which he would announce a special sale of some particular line of goods. One day it would be sugar, another soap, and so on, and no one could hardly go by the store without noticing these advertisements. He will now have about thirty-five feet of show window in which he can have ample scope to display his goods.

Bell Bros. are opening the store in Elora, Ont., formerly occupied by Wm. Campbell.

E. F. Mitchell, who has been salesman for Geo. Burfoot on Bloor Street, Toronto, for over 10 years has opened a new grocery store at 1556 Queen Street West.

Manitoba Business Men Again Discuss Extra-Provincial Corporations Act—Provincial Government Awaiting Their Decision—Whole Matter Turned Over to Board of Trade.

Staff Correspondence.

Winnipeg, Dec. 8.—Following the verbal agreement between the committee, which had been dealing with the Extra Provincial Corporations Act, and the provincial government to the effect that the act would not be enforced until the government again heard from the committee, the solicitor engaged by the local business men began at once to draft a letter outlining the various grievances and suggesting changes in the legislation.

It was the purpose of the committee to have this letter forwarded on to the government as soon as they could have it sanctioned by the general body from which the committee was appointed. Accordingly a general meeting was called on November 30. Instead, however, of the body endorsing the letter, the men present plunged into a long and spirited discussion over the various clauses of the Act. This fact did not demonstrate that the letter, which was in reality the report of the committee, was not satisfactory, but it did demonstrate that there were a great number present who were not familiar with the Act and were not aware of its far-reaching effect.

The Real Opposition.

Those, however, who had familiarized themselves with the situation enlarged upon a phase of the Act which is a basis, perhaps, for the whole feeling of opposition. This was the system of taxation which the government, according to the Act, intended to bring into operation. The Act states clearly that the taxation would be according to the capital stock of the outside company. This would simply drive away the business which is at present being done by large capitalized companies.

As one speaker, who represents a London firm, capitalized at £20,000,000, said, it would be absurd that his company would continue to do business here for a few hundred dollars per year.

The fact also that the solicitor's letter presented by the committee did not deal with this matter, had the tendency to create a widespread interest in the matter of the basis of taxation.

R. H. Bryce, a dry goods commission merchant, spoke strongly in favor of a system of taxation according to the amount of business the company does in the province. Mr. Bryce, however, did not suggest any method by which the government could get at each company's list of sales in the province. In case this was done each company would have to submit an annual report stating definitely the volume of the business transacted, and this, few companies would care to do. In any case the government could easily be defrauded.

A Flat Rate Proposition.

J. B. Nicholson, a grocery commission merchant, brought forth another system as a basis of taxation. His proposal was a flat-rate scheme such as that in operation in British Columbia. Mr. Nicholson did not stipulate any amount, but he suggested that a tax of $150 yearly might satisfy all companies doing business within the province, and also the government, if the matter was urged upon them.

This was put into a form of a motion by Mr. Nicholson and finally seconded and carried, that the committee's letter be approved and the government approached regarding a flat rate system in addition to the contents of the letter. The meeting then adjourned.

In Hands of Board of Trade.

On December 3rd another general meeting of the Brokers' Association, the Grain Exchange, and the Board of Trade was held for the purpose of delegating a specified body to take up the matter of presenting the petitions passed at the previous meeting, to the Government. Chairman J. B. Nicholson suggested that the Board of Trade should be given the matter entirely as many members of that board were already interested in the question.

It was argued, however, that should the Board of Trade be given the matter to deal with they should not be limited to carry out the motion passed at the previous meeting, namely that the former committee's letter be approved and forwarded to the government.

It was carried unaminously that the Board of Trade be given charge of the whole matter and deal with the Act as it stands and that the letter and all previous suggestions serve that body as information only.

SELLING EXTRA GOODS.

London, Eng., Nov. 30.—(Staff Correspondence)—A new and convenient aid to selling has been devised by a London (England) retail grocer, who finds that his trade in Christmas fruits is benefited considerably as a result. He has made up a shallow box or tray, divided into numerous compartments about three inches square, every division containing a fair sample of each grade of raisins, currants, etc., he has on hand, as well as spices, peels, etc., commonly used in pudding, mince meat, etc. He is thus able to show a customer in a moment, without trouble, not only what she may have enquired for, but also the various other ingredients she is likely to need during the Christmas season.

This method would seem to be a great success as compared with the usual form of bringing forward a scoopfull of the fruit under inspection, and there is considerably less waste. Besides this, a comparison of values is made easier. Of course, the customer will have confidence in her retailer if she is willing to buy from sample. Altogether, the little plan works well and might profitably be applied in other lines of goods.

PERSONAL NOTES.

A. P. Tippet, Montreal, of A. P. Tippet & Co., was in Toronto during the week. While there he made a friendly visit to the office of The Canadian Grocer.

Archdale Wilson, Hamilton, Ont., manufacturer of fly-pads, accompanied by his family, intends spending the winter in the south of England. He expects to return to Hamilton before March 1st next.

J. Dunfee, who has successfully conducted a grocery business in Port Hope, Ont., for many years, has started out on the road for Eby, Blain, Limited, Toronto. His territory lies between Oshawa and Lindsay. Mr. Dunfee is succeeded in Port Hope by Harold E. Martin.

ANOTHER OLD STORE.

Although the above old store does not equal in age some of the others published, it is nevertheless pretty old when the time of settlement of the vicinity in which it is located is taken into consideration. The proprietors are The A. Ronald Co., Minesing, Ont., (Simcoe County). The photograph as here represented was taken of the store as it appeared when built in 1870 by the grandparents of A. Ronald, who came to Canada from Scotland five years before. The store has been in constant use ever since, and is now being operated by the third generation. It has been enlarged since then by an addition to the front and a warehouse for oils, also flour and feed at the side.

DRAWING UP FOOD STANDARDS.

It is not at all probable that the new Food Standards for Canada will all come into effect at any early date. Manufacturers would necessarily be much inconvenienced if this should occur, as many of them would lose heavily by the expense of labels and possible failure of filling orders for future delivery.

During the week several manufacturers have been in Ottawa consulting the Chief Analyst regarding the Food Standards. The department is busily engaged working on the standards, but they are taking them up section by section. At the present standards for the milk products are under the eye of the analyst, and these will in all probability be decided upon some time in January. Following them, wines and liquors will come up, and so on to the finish. It will be a year or more before all the standards are drawn up, and manufacturer will no doubt be given plenty of time to work off their labels and fulfill their contracts.

It must not be supposed that a new law has to be passed by the Canadian parliament. When standards have been decided upon, the authorities will be in a position to enforce the present law relating to food adulteration, etc., as they will then be in a position to know exactly when a food doesn't measure up to the requirements.

A Canadian daily newspaper announced the other day that the Food Standards would be ready by January, but this information was, of course, erroneous. Only one section of it is likely to be finished by that time.

The Inland Revenue Department appears to be moving cautiously. It realizes that there is a great deal of thin ice about and is keeping its eyes open. It is trying to avoid the experience of the United States, where the new pure food laws have created so much trouble among the trade.

The Department realizes that the questions involved should not be left wholly to the permanent officials for solution and consequently it has sought and obtained the co-operation of the men in the trade who are directly interested and competent to advise.

It does not follow that the Department will be wholly guided by what the manufacturers of food products may suggest, but it does indicate a disposition to secure the co-operation of practical men. Before the new regulations are put into force a draft will be submitted to those interested for further consideration and advice.

It is understood to be the intention of the Government only to deal at present with those food products which are not concerned with so-called poisonous ingredients, such as various kinds of preservatives. This was the rock which the authorities in the United States ran up against and naturally the Canadian Government desires to avoid a like experience.

It is to be hoped that the Department, in drawing up its new regulations, will not overlook the interests of the vast body of retailers throughout the country who are the distributers to the consumers of the various food products. They should be consulted.

NO AMALGAMATION YET.

There is as yet nothing definite in the independent canners' amalgamation proposition. The matter is still in abeyance and will be for two or three weeks at least.

Garnet P. Grant, Montreal, who is one of the chief promoters of the project, when asked by The Canadian Grocer this week what the situation was, stated that as yet there was nothing to report. He was going out west for a few weeks and until his return could not give any information, but anticipated something happening about the beginning of the year.

Further enquiries by The Grocer bear out what was stated last week. Some of the independents approached claim that the terms of amalgamation are not satisfactory to them. The idea of allowing the promoters to place values on their plants does not meet with their approval and as well they do not care to take stock in the new concern to the value of their establishments and properties and take chances on other management making the venture a paying success.

One canner said that he had been sent the proposed terms of amalgamation but that his firm had not even considered them because they were not at all satisfactory. This seems to be the general situation and unless matters take a different turn, an amalgamation is not the probable outcome of the present proposition.

PROPOSED VINEGAR MERGER.

During the past few days there has been great activity among Montreal vinegar men. Two meetings were held at the Windsor Hotel to discuss plans for the merger to which The Grocer has referred in a previous issue.

The first intention was to have purely a selling agreement among all the manufacturers, but some have proved hard to handle and the probability now is that only the larger concerns will be in the by them that there is at present not a different basis from what was originally intended. The plan and names of the concerns are still a seccret but will be published shortly.

The men who met in Montreal claim to represent almost half the vinegar production of this country. It is claimed by them that there is at present not a living margin in pure vinegar and that something of this kind must take place soon.

This is the fourth attempt to organize in the past twenty years. The other three were incomplete and not properly handled, so proved failures.

Ontario men interested in vinegar, maintain that the merger has been advanced to place the market, so far as Quebec is concerned, on a better basis, as price cutting had been prevalent there. Toronto jobbers are selling white wine vinegar to the retail trade at 23 cents per Imperial gallon and are fairly well satisfied, although their percentage of profit is not large.

The amalgamation is not likely to be completed for a couple of weeks, and if it is, the tendency will be to firm up prices.

GOOD NEWS FOR TRAVELERS.

Commercial travelers will no doubt be gratified at the announcement of Hon. Mr. Hanna, the Ontario Provincial Secretary, that hotels throughout that province are to be standardised.

If there is one thing which tends to make the life of the commercial traveler miserable it is the condition of many of the hotels in which he is compelled to live. Accommodation in many instances, scarcely deserves the name while sanitary conditions are often vile.

Mr. Hanna says that standardization will be complete by the end of the year and that hotel keepers who do not keep their houses up to the standard will be deprived of their license.

It is to be hoped that the Provincial Secretary will see that the instructions are carried out to the letter of the law. The task will be by no means easy, judging from the indifference which has often characterized hotel keepers in the past in regard to government regulations. The situation demands drastic treatment, and strong and prompt enforcement of the regulations. There must be no winking at infractions of the law. Unfortunately this has been the weakness in the past. It has not been the absence of regulations. It has been the weakness of officials. Possibly stronger regulations may produce stronger officials.

As Mr. Hanna is a man of forceful character we may confidently expect that he will put some of the same qualities into his inspectors.

Commercial travelers can themselves materially assist in the enforcement of the regulations by reporting to the Department any infraction thereof. Their health as well as their comfort demand they should do so.

ADULTERATED BUTTER.

Dr. J. J. McCarrey, chief of the food inspection department of Montreal, has just seized large quantities of adulterated butter. The adulteration consisted in adding sufficient milk to the butter to enable butter costing 24 cents per pound to be sold for 22 cents with a larger margin of profit.

Seven alleged guilty parties are known and there seems to be little doubt that many more are engaged in the business.

It has not as yet been discovered how the butter was obtained, but it is a well known fact that there are machines in the market which are advertised to make two pounds of butter from one pound of butter and a pint of milk.

The present law, passed in 1902 says that butter must contain not more than 16 per cent. of water. The butter seized contained as high as 35 per cent. Of course there was no harmful adulterant introduced so it seems likely that the grocers concerned will be let off with a warning and the seizure of the butter. Some of the wholesalers talk of taking the case up and investigating, but nothing as yet has been done.

CLASSIFY PROFITS AND LOSSES.

Failure to classify profits and losses according to the various departments of a retail business is often responsible for a smaller net balance at the end of the year than might otherwise be secured. Such a classification need not be very elaborate, but it should be carefully planned and accurately carried out.

An exchange instances the case of a general merchant who, in addition to a general line of grocery goods, is carrying more or less in the way of agricultural implements, housefurnishings, sporting goods, and a line of paints and varnishes. Unless he has adopted a system of properly departmentising his accounts, he cannot tell for the life of him what percentage of his profits has come from each of these kinds of goods. In fact, he may be actually losing money on one department and making an excellent percentage on another.

Merchants whose books are kept in such a way as to show the profits or losses from each branch of their business know what a satisfaction such figures are. If it is known that the hardware and paint department is proving profitable, for instance, the suggestion that it pays to push these goods is naturally followed by more sales and bigger profits another year. It may be that the merchant could make some sort of a rough guess at these profits without the figures; but there is much greater satisfaction and safety in knowledge.

It isn't necessary that a merchant should be an expert bookkeeper to departmentise his accounts. If he doesn't care to work out a system himself, a few dollars spent for a set of books especially planned for retail merchants' accounts would be an excellent expenditure; and the time required to keep these books, once a start is made, would probably prove to be little or no more than that formerly spent in puzzling over less up-to-date forms of accounts.

AGAINST INSURANCE LEGISLATION.

The Committee of Insurance Premium Payers of Canada, with John A. Gunn, Montreal, as honorary secretary and H. G. Meir as secretary, have issued a neat booklet on "The Insurance Act," setting forth among other things the claims of companies organized under the name of The All Canada Fire Insurance Federation and the views of the Premium Payers respecting the provisions of the Insurance Act as affecting their varied interests. This matter was referred to in The Grocer of Nov. 26th, when business men were urged to write their representative in the House of Commons requesting him to use his influence against the passing of the proposed legislation. It is to be hoped that many have done this, as the passing of such legislation will tend to the raising of fire insurance rates in Canada.

NO CHANCE FOR MAIL ORDERS.

If all merchants throughout the country used the same aggressive methods to keep the trade in their home towns and villages as does Thos. Mulcahy of Orillia, Ont., the large catalogue houses wouldn't have a great deal to do outside the places in which they are located.

Mr. Mulcahy issues regularly a large circular setting forth his general store news in detail and giving convincing talks. A copy of the latest issue has reached the office of The Canadian Grocer, and in it the proprietor has placed particular emphasis on the "shop early" idea so much in evidence around Christmas times.

The circular is headed: "The Big Store With The Big Christmas Stock," and the introductory paragraph reads as follows:

"Take time by the forelock—plan a few weeks ahead by turning your thoughts Christmasward. All is in readiness throughout every department of our big store. Never were we so well prepared for big Christmas selling. Never have we bought so largely and so well—buying which was planned and done months ago in the greatest marvets of Great Britain, Europe and Canada.

"Stocks and assortments are now at their best. Now is the Golden Time to Buy. Every line is complete, and the early buyers have the benefit of an immense variety to choose from of good, useful things which make very acceptable and practical gifts.

"Shop now and avoid the crush and hurry of the last week."

This talk is followed by four large pages setting forth goods and their prices and specific reasons why they will be suitable as Christmas gifts or for Christmas use. For instance, under the heading "Give the Boys Hockey Boots" it says: "No gift one can think of will please the boys more than a pair of hockey boots. We have a splendid assortment of the best makes."

Such advertising as this is what gives ideas to the readers. There is no doubt in the world that the Mulcahy store will dispose of a good many pairs of skates through that one little ad. in the circular and there are a hundred other similar suggestions which must bring sales.

No mail-order house can expect to do business in the face of such advertising, and the sooner merchants learn this the better will it be for the general trade of the country.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

The Value to Salesmen of Rem embering Names of Customers—Why it is Appreciated by Them—Flattery Goes a Long Way in Interesting Them in the Store in Which You are Employed.

By A. K. McRae.

Salesmen in the store should realize more than they do the advantages of remembering names of customers. This is a qualification that should be developed if not already an accomplishment, as it frequently is the means of gaining new customers.

For instance if a lady enters for the first time, the store in which you are an employe and requests you to send an article to her address, make it a point to remember that name and if possible the address. The next occasion, when she calls, she will recognize the interest you show and feel quite flattered. The probability is that you gain a new customer for the store and although you may not be aware of it at the time, you may later discover that she appreciated your thoughtfulness and service.

Most people feel flattered when they see their names appearing in the public newspaper—so long as no scandals, etc., are connected with them—and they always want to see them spelled correctly. This applies to customers coming into the store as well. They appreciate first of all the fact that you haven't forgotten their names, but they do not like it if you pronounce or spell them wrongly. A little care and attention to this matter will have beneficial results.

The "Just as Good" Phrase.

The salesman who familiarizes himself with the names of customers and greets them in a friendly but unobstrusive way will not go far wrong. Never ask a customer bluntly what his name is. Play no favorites. The salesman who drops one customer to take up another because the latter is one that he calls his own is not building a business for

Look the customer straight in the eye when you address him. Show him that he is your sole concern for the time being.

Be most careful about trying to persuade a customer to take something in place of that for which he inquires. A customer asking for something not in stock should never be told in so many words that there is a substitute "just as good." Cut out that phrase. Earnestly recommend as possibly acceptable whatever you think will satisfy, but leave the impression always that the customer better knows what he wants than you do.

The salesman who has the initiative to beat out a new path in the field of salesmanship is the man who will be the manager later.

Some salesmen will take suggestions from a customer more readily than from their employer. You should guard against this.

There is a sentiment in business, and the salesman who realizes this fact in impressing himself upon the buyer will always have an advantage over any competitor who does not.

A strong point to cultivate is to take real interest in the welfare of your customer and the place in which he is located.

If you are permitted to participate in the social life of a customer, don't overdo it.

Buyers are always laying pitfalls for the salesman. If you happen to catch on before you fall, don't make any point against him from it.

A salesman is often placed in a position where he is compelled to talk against time. Make this conversation as entertaining and instructive as possible, if you wish to retain the buyers confidence.

LICENSE FEE AT $200.

This is Likely to be Passed Against the Pedlar by Montreal City Council.

Montreal, Dec. 4.—The regular monthly meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association was held in their offices, 270 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Thursday evening, Dec. 2. Officers present were: J. A. Dore, president; J. D. Boileau, 1st vice-president; J. I. Lussier, 2nd vice-president; A. Laniel, treasurer, and A. Sarrazin, secretary. About 35 members attended.

Letters from four of the city hospitals were read asking for a subscription. Each was voted $10.

A report of the last picnic finances was read by the treasurer, showing that a net profit of about $423 was made. The report was heartily cheered by the members present.

The feature of the meeting came in the speech of the president, Mr. Dore, who referred to the fact that the by-law to raise the peddlars' license fee to $200 was to come before the city council on Monday night for the second reading. He said it was of vital importance to all members to be present at this reading, as upon it depended the final outcome of the whole matter. Furthermore the prospects were very bright for a successful ending, as a majority of the council had expressed themselves as favoring it.

Before the meeting a delegation from the pedlars' association had called on the R.G.A. officials to see if some amendments could not be inserted in the measure. No satisfaction was given them, however, as it seemed a certainty that the measure would go through as the grocers wished without any compromise.

It was decided to hold a euchre at the Auditorium on the 13th of January, for which the tickets were to be $1 each, with a limit of 600 tickets to be sold. Committees were appointed to look after this affair, the chairmen of which are as follows: J. A. Dore, chairman of the general committee; J. I. Lussier, chairman of the euchre committee; A. Laurendeau, chairman of the dance committee; A. Laniel, chairman of the banquet committee; J. D. Boileau, chairman of the reception committee; A. Sarrazin, chairman of the finance committee.

A treasurer's report was read as to how many of the members had already paid their dues. It showed that about 150 had paid under the new $5 rate, which was more than had paid at the same time last year under the old $2 rate. It is thought that there will be no more trouble than usual in collecting the remainder.

RAISING PEDLAR'S TAX.

Montreal, Dec 8.—(Special).—A by-law to raise the tax on street vendors from $50 to $200, passed its second reading before the city council Montreal, Monday afternoon, Dec. 6. It only lost a motion for the third reading by a few votes. There seems to be little doubt that it will pass when brought up again.

A circular was sent out to every member by the Retail Grocers' Association, asking all who could to be present at this council meeting. It was hoped that the effect of so many interested grocers would have considerable weight with the members of the council.

A letter from the pedlars' association was read offering to compromise at $100, but though a motion was brought up by Ald. Lesperance to this effect, it lost by a considerable majority. The final vote was 25 to 18 in favor of the by-law.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., have received from the first prize English dairies a shipment of the very finest English stiltons, well aged and matured, and of excellent quality for Christmas trade.

Snowdon & Ebbitt, Montreal, who have for many years looked after the interests of Rowat & Co., Glasgow, in Ontario and Quebec, for pickles and olives, will in future have charge of the sale of Paterson's Worcester Sauce, too. This line is now being manufactured by Rowat & Co., who purchased the recipe and good.will from the originators of the sauce.

The "Salada" Tea Co. have hit upon a novel and unique suggestion to the puzzled Christmas gift-giver. They offer (through advertisements appearing in the daily press throughout Ontario) to send 5, 10 or 20 pounds of "Salada" Tea in original cases, upon receipt of the price and the name of their grocer, express charges to be prepaid. As requests come in they will credit the account of the grocer whose name is given with the regular profit. They ask the co-operation of the trade in drawing the attention of their customers to this suggestion. They claim that not only will the gift be appreciated three times a day as long as it lasts by the recipient, but in some cases it will serve to take business away from the peddler.

The Markets—Canned Tomatoes Likely to Advance

POINTERS—
Sugar—firm.
Coffee—firm and rising.
Walnuts—very scarce.
Canned Vegetables—firm.

Montreal, Dec. 9, 1909.

Christmas trade is now in full swing, and all dealers report good volume of business. In fact from all reports this year will equal, if not surpass any recent year. Some few lines report a falling off, but the general feeling is firm, with a tendency toward higher prices.

Sugar is expected to remain firm for some time to come in spite of a lower market in New York for refined. Dealers say it is due to competition only, as raws are high, and rising.

Syrups are in better demand than has been looked for, as trade had been falling off for some time. Molasses have their usual good trade.

There promises to be a shortage of high grade teas in the near future, as retailers report their stocks insufficient, and wholesalers have little available for them. Consumption seems to be on the increase.

Walnuts are scarce and of poor grade this year, thus stimulating the demand for shelled goods.

Canned fruits are showing decided weakness, while on the other hand vegetables are firm with a higher tendency.

Reports generally are good, and the dealer who isn't making money had better look into the conditions existing in his own store to find the cause.

SUGAR—The sugar situation this week is one of considerable interest, owing to the varying conditions in different sections. In Winnipeg prices have been raised to correspond with the all-rail freight which now has to be paid. In New York prices are from 5 to 10 cents lower, because of competition, in spite of the fact that raws are on the up grade with little indication of a weakening. Here prices are firm at last quotations, with no immediate prospect of a change either way. If anything the tendency is for higher prices.

SPICES—All lines show decided firmness, particularly peppers and nutmeg. It is thought by dealers here that the government will not be in a position to take definite action regarding whole Food Standards inside of a year at the least. In case this is so, manufacturers will have time to dispose of present stocks and prepare for the new conditions, which will undoubtedly mean higher prices.

BEANS AND PEAS—Sales of beans have been heavy lately, and this in spite of continued firmness in price. Dealers pronounce the situation the best for some years. Peas have only had a fair sale, and show a little weakness. No changes in price have been reported as yet, however.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Eating apples are plentiful as yet and this has kept down the demand for the evaporated goods to a considerable extent. There are also some of the cheaper lines of fall goods in the market. Trade, therefore, has not come up to expectations. Prices are steady, and no advance is looked for until after New Year's at least.

DRIED FRUITS—Currants seem to be having a heavy trade for this time of year. It is usually pretty heavy just before Christmas, but this season seems to be better than the average. Figs are in good demand while dates seem to be somewhat dull. Other lines are brisk as usual at this time of year.

NUTS—Shelled walnuts are in great demand. This is probably owing to the generally poor quality of this year's crop. Under such conditions people would rather see what they are buying. Stocks do not seem to be large enough to fill a continued demand of present proportions. Reports from New York indicate a strong market there, with prospects of shortages particularly evident in all lines of walnuts. Prices are firm and unchanged.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—The feeling in canned vegetables is firm, with a leaning toward higher prices. In fruits the situation is very unsatisfactory. Demand is only mediocre, and seems to be falling off slightly. Several causes are assigned, but the most likely seems to be the failure of the working class to buy these goods. Last year prices on these lines were raised to such an extent, that dried fruits took the place of the canned, and it is now very hard to stimulate buying among people who have become accustomed to them for the higher priced canned goods.

Canned meats and lobsters are firm.

TORONTO.—There is no let up to the strength of the canned vegetable market this week. While prices do not show any appreciable advance to the retail trade there is every reason to believe that in the no distant future they will be raised again. Peas and corn, of course, are running short and everybody knows this. In the canned tomato market, however, there is much speculation. Some jobbers claim that at present there is no indication of a raise, but from the movements of canners, this is quite probable. The representative of one firm stated this week that his company had been approached by a competitor wanting to purchase 10,000 cases.

He declined to sell—or practically did, when he asked 90 cents—because he believes the market is going up to a dollar before the new pack next fall is available.

Fruits are only attracting a fair attention just now, but salmon and lobster are firm.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Canned Tomatoes—Probable advance.
Sugar—Firm but little demand.
Syrup and Molasses—Good sellers.
Evaporated Apples —Prices easier.

Toronto, December 9, 1909.

It is a remarkable fact that almost every article carried by a wholesale grocer is looking upwards, and while higher prices are likely to rule in many lines, there is nothing that threatens a loss. It may therefore be said that the wholesale trade could not possibly be in better shape. This may also be said to include the retailer who should share in this happy condition of affairs.

Against this nothing stands in the way more than stupid jealousy. Our country is in a prosperous condition and the retailers are entitled to a share of the good things that are going. What they must do is to learn to be fair to one another.

SUGAR — Although some New York refineries have shaded prices 10 points there has been no change in Canada and from present appearance none are in sight in the near future. Immediate raws are scarce and hard to obtain, but futures are easier and good crops are looked for. Demand is limited as a general rule to the weekly supply of wants as the Christmas trade in refined sugar is not large.

TEA—There is nothing special to report in the tea market. The firm feature is not quite so keen, yet the present prices are likely to remain unchanged. As the fact of tea being dearer is pretty well known by the people in general, this would be an opportune time to cultivate a taste for higher grades of tea. Cheap tea is always the dearest unless it is sold without a reasonable profit. Good tea brings back a customer, but poor tea will do the other thing.

Reliable reports from the British market state that India and Ceylon teas are close upon two cents higher than they were a year ago. This shows the firm condition of the primary markets.

COFFEE—There is a fair demand for coffee and orders are satisfactory. Selling green coffee is almost out of the question, with the exception of some German districts where the people still have their own roasting pans and hand coffee mills. These coffee mills are, as a rule, attached to the wall of the kitchen, and the grinding of the coffee in the morning is always an indication that if you overslept yourself it required a hustle to get ready for breakfast.

DRIED FRUITS—All kinds of dried fruits are decidedly firm with a strong upward tendency. Grocers who have supplies on hand should advance their prices, and make the profit to which they are justly entitled. The goods in almost all lines cannot be repeated at the same price. If the goods at any time drop after the retailer has bought them he is at once forced to cut out part, if not all, of his profit, but when they go up, he foolishly continues to sell at his old price. This is not fair to himself and decidedly wrong to his competitor.

Reductions—Evaporated apples, rolled oats, syrups, peanuts.

New Goods—Currants, walnuts.

Winnipeg, Dec. 9, 1909.

There is a general firmness in the market just now due to the closing of navigation and the heavy demand for immediate shipments in small lots in a large range of goods. As the holiday season approaches the specialty trade increases, and the wholesale houses take on active appearances, although the volume of goods moving in any one line may perhaps be lighter than at any other time of the year. The fact also that rural customers are freed from all agricultural obligations for several months once more, has tended to liven the retailers' trade throughout the country. It has often occurred in the west that merchants could not get in goods during the severe winter months, and precaution is taken at an opportune time to stock such staples as are continually in demand.

Collections have become better during the past few days and it is evident that returns for wheat are being made.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Halifax, Dec. 9, 1909.

The feature of the grocery markets this week is an advance of fifteen cents per barrel in all grades of flour. Otherwise the prices throughout the list are pretty steady. Produce continues to arrive in large quantities, and sales are heavy. Hogs are coming in more plentifully, but the price is firm. All the hogs marketed find a ready sale at ten cents per pound. Poultry is in good supply on the local market, and prices are a little lower than they were at this time last year. Butter is very firm and although there is a fairly good supply coming on the market, the price continues to show an upward tendency. The most of the butter is only fair quality, and the sales in consequence are not quick. Good winter butter is in demand, even at the high price.

All the retail grocers are now making good displays of dried fruits, but the sales so far are rather light. The unseasonable weather is keeping trade back to some extent. The roads are in a bad condition and as a result the travel from the outside districts is not very heavy.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Vancouver, Dec. 9, 1909.

This week marks an advance in Eastern eggs that has been anticipated. They are now quoted at 35 cents, running from 33 cents. There is also a higher price for locals, which retail at about 70 cents, according to the freshness. Butter, too, is up five cents, being now quoted at 40c, retailing at 45 cents. Even at this the quality is not up to standard, some of the generally reliable creameries supplying an article that is not near high-class.

Wilbur Smith, manager of the Crown Broom Works, of this city, has returned from the southern broom corn fields, and relates some interesting facts about present conditions in the trade. He states that the 1909 crop is practically all sold, having been bought standing in the fields. Many manufacturers, who did not foresee this are without stock. It is not a question of price, but of getting the corn, in face of an absolute shortage. The result is that there will be less variation in the price of brooms. Practically all the broom corn is raised in the States of Kansas, Oklahoma and Illinois. Two-thirds of the crop in Oklahoma and Kansas was destroyed by hot winds. It is now estimated that the total yield of the crop just harvested will be 15,000 to 20,000 tons. The normal consumption is between 45,000 and 50,000 tons. It has been figured that 16,000 tons of broom corn will produce 17,280,000 brooms; 16,000,000 families on this continent use brooms. The 1909 crop will thus give each family about 1 1-12 brooms for the year. Ordinarily, a small family will use three, so that there will be plenty of demand for any surplus stock that manufacturers may have on hand.

Simcoe General Delivery System Saves Money

How it Was Evolved and its Present Operation—Four Delivery Wagons in Use Where Formerly There Were Ten — Drivers Work on Schedule Time—Every Customer Has a Card in the House.

By Bruce Thompson.

The general parcel delivery system, after having been in operation in Simcoe for some two or more years, has proven to be satisfactory in every respect, taking into consideration both the merchant's and his customers' interests.

The merchants did not all join in this "union," as it were, at once, but probably one or two at a time, until to-day practically every merchant has done away with his own delivery system and has joined in the "union" by patronizing "Parcel Delivery."

Previous to having this system, there were to be seen about our town delivery wagons, numbering around nine or ten, and these for the one reason that most of the merchants had their own outfits for delivering. These wagons did the work for eleven stores, one of them doing the work for three, including a dry goods, liquor and a departmental store.

The Simcoe merchants began to feel that it was useless to have so many wagons over the same ground, so the present method for doing the work was considered.

In a short time a couple of them joined with the other three stores, which as stated had already been using this method, and at the same time another man become proprietor of the delivery business.

Following this change of ownership, another citizen started at the same work with his own new wagon, delivering for three of the grocers.

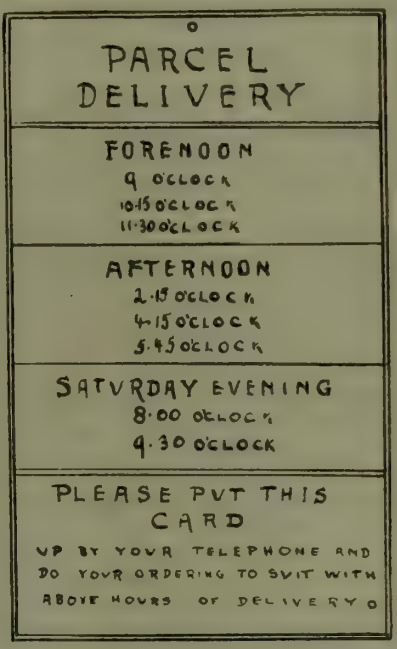
His business was purchased soon after, and since then it has been sold to still another, who is operating it to-day.

Such is the history of the growth and adoption of the "Parcel Delivery" in Simcoe.

The Working of the System.

The said business, to-day as owned by a business man of our town, consists of four wagons, and drivers for the same, while on extra busy days of busy seasons of the year assistance is given them, thus making five delivery outfits altogether.

With this number of wagons, etc., the work is being done for eleven stores, where before there were nine wagons doing the work for an equal number of business places.



This shows what has been accomplished by working together.

Simcoe merchants are glad to-day that they have this system in operation. The men employed for this work are (for they must be), steady, respectable and polite.

Remembering that they do the work of delivering to practically every home in Simcoe, it will no doubt be of interest to the reader to know how the work is divided.

The town is divided into four sections —one for each driver. Previously when there were three wagons doing the work, it was divided into three sections. The men work together and help one another, thus making their duties pleasant.

Like railroad trains, they have a time table, which they go by. The accompanying illustration respresents the second time table which has been printed, the first showing an hour service. It was then felt an unnecessary need for the driver to cover practically the same ground so many time each day, therefore, the present time-table was printed and it is satisfactory.

Makes Merchants More Prompt.

The merchant, when first accepting this system found a change in this respect, that he had to work on time as well as the drivers. Previously he could get his orders ready when he liked, but now he must have them ready at the hour of delivery.

The request at the bottom of the card explains itself. These cards have been placed in the homes of the customers of the various stores, and they have long since learned to govern themselves accordingly.

Needless to say, the merchants are saving time and money, and are free from all the worries that usually accompany the delivering of goods.

The population of Simcoe is about 8,000.

NEW COMPANIES.

The Niagara Land and Fruit Co., with head office at Toronto, is a new Ontario concern, organized for the purpose of conducting a canning and evaporating business; to grow, pack, buy and sell farm and orchard products, and to act as commission agents. The provisional directors are John A. Milne, John H. Hunter, Jr., and Wm. C. Tolton.

An Ontario charter has been granted to Banada Food Products, Ltd., with head office in Toronto, to manufacture and deal in all kinds of products of bananas, and to do the business of manufacturers in prepared foods of all kinds. Provisional directors are W. H. Reid, C. H. C. Leggott, Gordon Russell, Margaret Wilson and John C. McDonald.

The Gavin McIntosh Co., Toronto, has been given an Ontario charter, as general, wholesale and retail dealers in all kinds of provisions. The provisional directors are J. M. Ferguson, E. V. O'Sullivan, and J. A. McNevin.

Wesley Garbrocht, who has been a salesman for Jno. Sloan, Galt, Ont., has accepted a position with Hugh Walker.

The Vancouver representative of The Grocer writes:—It will not be long before new California strawberries find their way to Vancouver. They are already in Seattle. There is a bigger demand for them in that city, and consequently the few that are available do not offer opportunity for any to reach here.

LUCKY CHANGE OF MIND.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.—Kindly allow me a space in your valuable journal to say a few words. I appreciate the push and vim of your paper and if all our merchants would do likewise, there would be few hard times among them. I don't know how you can do so much for so little money. A few years ago I took The Canadian Grocer for one year and quit. A friend of mine asked me later if I was a subscriber and I told him no.

He wanted to send it but I refused: however it came and before six months was up I sent him his money.

A traveler the other day said to me: "Mr..... I appreciate your business."

I replied that I wanted no flattery and asked him to explain himself. "Ten years ago," he said, "I could take all you own away in a wheel-barrow and to-day your store is four times the size and you are complaining that you want more room."

I told him my success was due in a large measure to the influence of The Canadian Grocer.

No Alarm Necessary Over the Winter Egg Supply

Fresh Eggs are Scarce as May be Expected Now, But Storage Stocks are Large—Firmer Provision Market on Account of Hog Shortage This Week—Stored Butter Going Into Consumption—Poultry Attracting Attention.

The supply of hogs this week is shorter than last week and prices in consequence are firm and about 10c a hundred higher. There is no change in cured meats and the demand is good. Lard is high on account of too many lean hogs, and also on account of the unusually high price of cotton seed oil, which is largely used as a substitute.

The receipts of fresh made butter, are fair, but with a larger percentage of feed flavored butter, which is undesirable. This will now be displaced by the stored creamery butter, which has been well kept, and which turns out fine and is preferred to the fresh made stable fed article. With the high price of lard, and the cotton seed oil high, quick lunch patrons may hope to have some butter as shortening in their pies. The market is steady with very little export demand, at least, not at a price that will suit our dealers. Australian and New Zealand butter is affecting the high price of Danish butter.

The cheese market has some encouraging features about it in favor of the holders of cheese. The Canadian cheese has such a good reputation in England that a large part of our cheese is wanted there at our own price, quite irrespective of the prices of other makes, yet any difference in the price, has a tending to lead people to try cheaper cheese, and if they are at all suited will continue to use it.

The egg market is in good shape. The usual quantity of new laid eggs, that can be expected at this time of the year, are available, and the stock of storage eggs is considered equal to all likely requirements. On the whole the provision situation is in a healthy and fairly well balanced condition, with a fair outlook for the future.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Provisions are quiet this week, there being no changes in price, and sales being somewhat light. It is expected that next week will see some improvement. The weather so far has been too warm to stimulate trade in these lines.

BUTTER—Roll butter is scarce, and the price is very firm. Receipts of fresh made are increasing considerably, owing to the lower prices paid for exported cream on the other side, and the situation generally seems to be righting itself. The local market is steady but quiet. Large seizures of adulterated butter have been made by the health officer, Dr. McCarrey, here, as will be noticed elsewhere in this issue.

Receipts for the week are 5,883 packages as against 5,231 packages same week last year. For the season they are 370,497 packages as against 398,896 packages same season 1908, showing a decrease of 28,399 packages.

CHEESE—Dealers say that they are now becoming convinced that there is the smallest storage stock in Montreal that there has been for some years. This has produced a firmer feeling, though no changes in price have taken place as yet. There has been very little cable inquiry of late, though after the Christmas holidays, trade is expected to pick up. Receipts for the week are 10,036 boxes, as against 3,934 boxes same week last year, showing a decided increase. For the season they are 1,948,195 boxes as against 1,893,631 boxes same season 1908.

EGGS—There have been practically no receipts of new laids and other lines have been so small as to be almost negligible. As a consequence the stored stock has been drawn on heavily, and prices as a result are firm. Prospects are for higher prices in the near future.

Receipts for the week are 657 cases as against 1,036 cases same week last year. For the season they are 188,151 cases as against 192,434 cases same season 1908, both showing a decrease.

POULTRY—The local market is higher. This is probably due to the delay in the country in marketing, as the quantity coming forward this season is not by any means equal to former ones at this time. The quality of deliveries is fair, but the better grades are undoubtedly being held back in large quantities for the Christmas trade.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The local market shows little change from week to week. The supply of hogs is always less than the packers are prepared to handle. The market, therefore, is quiet, with a good steady local demand. Lard is firm and high on account of the scarcity of cotton seed oil which is largely used as a substitute.

BUTTER—There is nothing alarming from a consumer's standpoint in the butter situation. Open weather and late pastures made a great saving of the winter feed, which will be felt all winter in a good supply of butter. The stocks in storage are quite ample to meet all the requirements.

CHEESE—The local cheese market still remains dull, without anything in sight that will cause a change. Farmers seem to have such a control over the situation, that the chances of the speculator of a margin of a few cents a lb. are made impossible. This may look profitable from the farmer's point of view, but the dealer is an indispensable factor in the cheese industry, and if he is shut out from his share of the profits for a time, it will have to be balanced up at another time. It is, therefore, not sound business, unless the profits are fairly distributed. So far as the local market is concerned the profit is quite sufficient, but why should we pay more for our cheese at home, than is paid for the same cheese in other countries?

EGGS—People may talk, for they must have something to say, but do not allow yourself to be carried away with the idea that eggs will soar to a dollar a dozen. The stock of cold storage eggs on hand are considered quite sufficient to meet the winter requirements. The weather has been mild, and we are getting near the time when with good care, and at all favorable weather, hens will start to lay. So far as the winter is concerned, therefore, we may consider ourselves well provided for. There is one thing, however, that may be regarded with more seriousness by the farmers. With the high price of fowl and the high price of feed, a good many hens are killed which ought to be kept for layers. Whether this is carried on to such an extent that it will affect the production of eggs next summer, is not certain, but it is a matter that farmers might consider.

Fresh eggs	0 25	0 26
Strictly new laid	0 35	0 40

POULTRY—The poultry market is quiet, but is getting ready for the great holiday rush. As a large quantity of poultry is likely to pass through the hands of country grocers, they should give the farmers every possible assistance to make the most out of their poultry and at the same time give the best value to the consumers who will have to pay a high price for it. They should urge upon them the advantage of having them fat before they kill them, and they should be instructed to dress them properly for the market.

HONEY—The honey market remains unchanged with a fair demand.

" " 5 lb. pails	0 12	0 12½

WOULD THESE BE CHINA EGGS?

A remarkable feature in the cargo of the Empress, which arrived at Vancouver last week from Hong Kong, was 116 barrels of eggs, brought from China for shipment to the United States. It was stated to be an experimental shipment in an effort on the part of Shanghai dealers to work up a trade with Canada and the States along this line at this time of the year, particularly on the Coast, where eggs are high in price and fairly old in age. Chinese have a reputation for preserving eggs, even into the years of time, but whether the quality is preserved in shipments of this kind remains to be found out by actual test.

HOW TO PREPARE POULTRY.

Farmers should be urged by merchants to prepare their fowl better for the market. They should learn that it pays them to put all the meat on them they can, for that is what the consumers want and not merely bones. They should pen them up and starve them long enough to have their crops perfectly empty before they kill them. They should then be caught and killed immediately without causing them to become excited or heated. They will then bleed better, which will improve the meat.

They should be picked without scalding and this must be done immediately after they are killed, and be finished before they get cold. They should be laid out in nice shape to get thoroughly cold, but not frozen, before they are packed. They should be packed in boxes of not more than 100 lbs. if possible, and should be packed in layers, with paper between each

For the Christmas market they may be sent in any time now, but none should reach large centres later than Wednesday, Dec. 22. They should be clean, every particle of dirt or blood washed off and packed in a way that they keep their shape.

TRADE NOTES.

A Brockville grocer has summoned a farmer to appear at police court charged with selling him 103 bushels of bad potatoes.

F. H. Anson, superintendent of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Ltd., has left on a business trip to Europe.

At the annual meeting of the St. John, N.B., Board of Trade held on Monday, Theodore H. Estabrooks, was elected president. Mr. Estabrooks served two years as vice-president of the board.

Mr. Swift, of Swift & Co., the big Chicago packers, was in Toronto on Tuesday of this week. While it is stated that he was in Ontario with a view to consider the establishment of a factory nothing definite could be learned. There is considerable talk just now of Armour & Co. locating in Toronto, but the rumor cannot be confirmed.

GROCERS MEET ON SUNDAY.

Have Trouble in Overcoming the Damage to Their Trade Done by a Price-Cutter.

Toronto, Dec. 9.—The Hebrew grocers of Toronto have fallen in line with the Retail Merchants' Association, and are now a strong section of the Toronto branch, under the name of the Hebrew Division of the grocers section of the Toronto Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada. They also realize the necessity of organizing in order to defend their interests against unfair competition. These people have 182 grocery stores in the city, and a population of about 40,000, and their affiliation with the general merchants of the city is considered to be an advantage to the general trade.

They too, like the Gentiles, have their troubles among themselves. One firm, in the heart of their district, is cutting and slashing prices, and robs the others of their trade. They want this firm to be "decent," or they will in a body withdraw their patronage from the wholesale houses who now supply them all. They are also of the opinion that the manufacturer should regulate the price of his goods.

On Sunday night last, they held a meeting and talked over the situation. Forty-three were present and determination to correct matters marked the session. As an instance to show how strict they are, one of their number was stationed at the door to see that only those who had paid their fees were admitted.

Sunday with the Hebrew race is, of course, not a holy day, hence their meeting.

There is no stable profit where there is no lasting reputation.

That's a self-evident proposition—just as plain as "two and two make four."

Profits may flow in for a while, even when a merchant handles second rate goods.

But, shrewd grocers do not bother much about transient success.

They're out for the trade that stays—the trade worth while—the trade that pays.

And that trade can only be clinched by handling first-quality, high-grade goods.

That's why a vast majority of grocers prefer to handle

How Speculative Interests Move Wheat Market

Every Rumor Coming From Southern Hemisphere has its Influence—Not Much Depending on Supply and Demand—Flour Market Shows no Change.

So sensitive and touchy is the wheat situation that every little incident which might in the smallest degree affect the prices of wheat is taken advantage of. Even with the unprecedented crop of the northern hemisphere, the wheat-producing countries on the other side of the equator are watched and almost the daily variation of the weather causes a flutter, either one way or the other. A report of frost or rain is immediately responded to by such wild speculative markets as Chicago. Owing to these unnatural influences, which are entirely of the gambling spirit, and have nothing whatever to do with the more sensible feature of supply and demand, prices are a few cents up in Chicago, while in England wheat is at least 6 pence per quarter lower.

Russia is still pouring out its wheat as if it were trying to get it out and accept the present prices rather than take chances on future values. While the market fluctuates almost daily it seems almost impossible to move it away from the point it has held for some time. That there is far more wheat in the hands of the farmers, both in our country and the United States than last year is a well known fact, and whether some John Patten will this year again boost the price to the point looked for remains to be seen.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Sales are brisk at present. Wheat has not been moving as freely as it did last year at this time, but it was not needed by the millers, they having filled their requirements, or a large part of them, in the past two weeks. Trade in winter wheat patents is particularly brisk. Dealers look for a good trade from now on.

Prices are firm at last week's quotations.

ROLLED OATS—Oatmeal is beginning to find its winter popularity, and sales show quite an increase over both last week and the corresponding week last year.

Prices are firm in all lines, and sales are brisk. From now on a good trade in all lines is looked for.

FEED—Manitoba bran is in greatly increased demand for both local and export trade. Ontario bran is also in demand. Prices in all lines are steady. The cause of the demand is supposed to be the necessity for laying in winter stocks, and it is thought prices will not be more attractive than they are at present.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—There is no change whatever from last week in the local flour market. It has been rather a dull week. Receipts of wheat from farmers are a little more liberal, but they do not seem to be in a hurry to buy it out, having every confidence that wheat will, at least, hold its own.

CEREALS—Both wheat and oats are firm, but the prices are the same as last week. This being the case the manufactured goods, although in good demand, are quoted at the same figures as last week. With potatoes considerably below their relative value with other foods, the consumption of cereals may suffer to some extent on that account.

LARGE POTATO YIELD.

The government reports show the yield of potatoes of the whole of Canada to be 99,087,000 bushels, or 25,297,200 bushels more than last year. The price last year was about 20c a bag higher than this year. With cheap potatoes and bread moderate, some think we should be content even if turkeys are high and new laid eggs hard to reach. It is interesting to note that New Brunswick leads the maritime provines with a total yield of 12,247,000 bushels. Quebec province leads in the Dominion with an estimated production of 30,853,000 bushels.

SPEAKERS FOR BANQUET.

Representatives of the Federal and Provincial Governments, and of the Opposition in both houses, will be present at the annual banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, to be held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. Dec. 20. McGill and Laval universities, too, will be represented by speakers. Arrangements being concluded augur well for the success of the event. Tickets are selling in greater number than ever before. The executive hope that members, and travelers generally, will make a special effort to attend the affair. The new Red Room of the Windsor will be used.

The Dreadnaught of the Flour Seas

DEAR Merry England is getting competition these days that's simply fierce.
There's a bunch of outsiders "over there" casting languishing looks of envy on her trade and commerce.
Some have even displayed a desire to steal a bite now and then.
So England is busy—building Dreadnaughts.

To be sure, said many, Dreadnaughts digest a lot of the yellow metal. Why not build torpedo boats, submarines, and such?
Because Dreadnaughts as yet are the only successful factor to inspire certain parties with proper respect.
It isn't a question of expense, you see, but of "what we have we hold; what we haven't got, we're after."

* * * *

Well, thought we, the position of the Tight Little Isle is much like that of the tight (?) little merchant.
He's tight if he wants to, isn't he?
You've got keen competition, too—neighbors mighty anxious to annex your trade, present and prospective.
Business is a battle, Brother Grocer.
He wins who is best equipped.

* * * *

Now, there's FIVE ROSES.
A good flour, milled entirely from the heart of Red Manitoba Spring Wheat berries, the world's prime cereal.
Sure, it's the Dreadnaught among flour brands, Brother Grocer.
Because it fears no competition, and is most effective in protecting your trade.
The trade you have, it HOLDS; the trade you haven't got, it helps you to GET AFTER.

It isn't a matter of price.
It's results that count, Brother Grocer, when you need the business.
The housewife wants white, wholesome, palatable breadstuffs; she also covets flaky, crinkly pie crust with a flavor that is its own monopoly.
And she means to get it—if not from YOU, elsewhere.
But she gets it always, if you sell FIVE ROSES.
Why don't YOU?

Merchants Closing Out Mail Order Competition

The Grocers of Orillia do Not Allow Catalogue Houses to Get Much of a Foothold—Employ Aggressive Measures—Jealousy, However, Rules Among Them—Want of Organization Felt.

Special Correspondence.

Orillia, Ont., December 8.—The merchants here are principally the sons of pioneer merchants who saw the begining of this prosperous town, and who have been able to start their boys in business life, under more favorable conditions than they begin themselves.

The merchants derive a good deal of benefit from the tourists during the summer months and in that way have an advantage over towns not so favorably situated.

In Orillia a large portion of the groceries are handled in general stores. This causes a little friction between them and those who confine themselves strictly to groceries. Whether this is pleasant or otherwise, it seems to have the effect of stimulating business, for the stores on the whole are busy and are a credit to the town. Different in one respect at least from Barrie its neighbor, few of the merchants call around for orders at the houses. This saves them considerable expense they claim, and gives them time to keep their stores in good shape and more attractive to their customers.

All the best dealers in groceries are readers of The Canadian Grocer and some insist on their salesmen and salesladies reading it. They realize the need for men who can give the best possible service to the people. "Good service more than prices win the trade, and to keep up-to-date we look to The Grocer as a great help," remarked one grocer.

Watch Mail Order Houses.

"We cannot complain much about our citizens patronizing mail order houses," said another. "We do our best to give satisfaction, and I think our customers have convinced themselves that they cannot do better anywhere else."

"Too many of our country town merchants admit that the mail order houses are under-selling them, and instead of hustling themselves they sit down, look blue, neglect their business, and find fault with their neighbors. Wherever the merchants are united, work together for the interests of the town and try altogether to give good service to the people, they need not be much alarmed about encroachments from the large cities," was the opinion of one of the most active business men in Orillia.

"The merchants of this town, I am sorry to say," remarked another, "are too jealous of each other. There is never anything gained by it, but very often it leads to losses, and is always an injury to the town. We should have an asspciation and meet together to discuss matters of importance, and cultivate a friendly feeling."

In nearly every town one finds some old "back-numbers" who, as a rule, fell behind in the race and blame everybody but themselves. They get into a rut, and will not admit that it is necessary for them to get out, but vainly attempt to hold the people to their antiquated ideas. Such men are to be pitied. They will never mingle with their fellow retailers; they will not read their own trade paper, and consequently will not bring themselves in touch with up-to-date ideas and methods. They have scarcely a good word for anybody but a great deal of fault to find with many. Such men are no help to the general trade of the town; their conditions are misfortunes and they deserve the kindest consideration from those who are in happier circumstances.

If the merchants in towns could realize the value they could derive from each other through neighborly friendliness, and the assistance they could be to each other, they would not be without their regular meetings if for no other purpose than to see one another and find out what a lot of good fellows they were.

The motto, "Live and let live," would not exactly meet their views but rather, "Live and help others to live."

THE FOOD VALUE OF NUTS.

Scientists Claim Them to be Useful to the Human System.

Scientists have been studying the effect of animal food upon the human system, and some have come to the conclusion that many of the diseases to which man is heir come direct from eating animal food. A German scientist advances the theory that children fed upon meat become quarrelsome, ill-natured and disposed to fight, taking on animal instincts with the habit of an animal diet.

Scientfic investigation has opened our eyes to many evils of which our forbears never dreamed. The diseases of animals, which were little known, their effect upon the human system when taken into the stomach, and recent investigations into the quality of the work of health officials, conduce to make one a little chary of accepting meats exposed for sale on the public markets.

For these evils there is a remedy—the use of nuts, which are among the best and most wholesome food products known to science. They average from 50 to 70 per cent. fat, and from 15 to 33 per cent. proteids, therefore, if measured by their chemical food values, as a natural substitute for meats, they are superior, for no other reasons than their purity and cleanliness.

However, that which makes nuts such an excellent article of food is that their nutritive elements are almost perfectly proportioned, that is to say, a normal body requires so much water, proteids, carbohydrates, mineral salts and fat to sustain it healthfully each twenty-four hours, and in nuts these elements are found more correctly proportioned, according to the requirements of the body, than in any other article of food known to chemists.

They have done their part in the past, in that they furnished a great part of the food of primitive men, bringing them up from a barbarous people to a state of intelligent and intellectual manhood. —California Fruit Grower.

OFFERING MONEY PRIZES.

The newly incorporated Institute of Certified Grocers, London, Eng., has offered some splendid prizes for business examinations of grocers' assistants. The chief prize is one of £100 a year for ten years. The institute's first examination for the £100 income prize will be held in London next April. The subjects will be knowledge and valuation of commodities, principles of advertising, laws affecting the trade, methods of business, such as salesmanship, canvassing, stock-taking and practical tests in tea and coffee blending.

Robert Dowsley, 1488 Queen St. West, Toronto, has sold his business to Jaques & Donnelly, two young men, who expect even to outdo the splendid business carried on by their predecessor. To assist them in getting a good start they have secured the services of James Rae, who for years carried on the same store and is well acquainted in that part of the city.

Weakness in Apple Prices on the British Market

Shippers a Little Afraid of Losing Money—Fruit Market Generally Quiet, but a Big Trade is Expected Next Week—An Active Advent Fish Market.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—There is a decided scarcity of good late Valencias, which has resulted in an increased price, $5. Some inferior goods are on the market as low as $3.50, but desirable qualities are only to be had in limited quantities. Jamaica grape fruit is slightly higher, ranging from $3.50 to $4 per box. Other lines are steady, with trade slightly better than last week. Next week a large increase is looked for, as Christmas is only two weeks away.

VEGETABLES. — Trade has brightened up to a certain extent on account of the approach of Christmas. Supplies are somewhat limited, but sufficient are available to fill all demands so far. Dealers are hoping for increased trade next week, and are making preparations to meet it. Prices are firm, with a slight upward tendency in view of the expected increase in trade.

FISH.—Fish trade is active on account of Advent, and several lines already show traces of shortage. Consequently prices are advancing. Haddock is scarce, owing to stormy weather on the coast. Green cod also has advanced due to large demand and a limited visible supply.

Frozen fish sales are good, though mild weather is interfering to a certain extent.

In prepared and smoked fish demand is good and prices are maintained.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUIT.—The apple trade has not recovered from its sluggish condition of last week, and the reports from England are not very encouraging to those who have many thousands of barrels on the way to that market.

Snows are in better local demand than any others, and sell for $3.50 to $4 a barrel. Some of the lower grades of apples sell as low as $1 a barrel.

Although yet somewhat unripe and ahead of their time, the navel orange is seeking the lead. For present use, however, there are other varieties a little better. The fruit market is slow. It is a little too early for retailers to lay in their Christmas goods, but next week is expected to make up for all the dullness that exists this week, all domestic grapes are now off the market.

duced $10,000 worth of Northern Spies last year. Other equally good results are reported in other districts of the province. One cherry tree at Penticton produced eight hundred pounds of fruit, and another at Agassiz one thousand pounds. What would be the result of an acre of as many such trees as the soil is capable of feeding, can be imagined and calculated.

In Okanagan instances are reported of profits of from $500 to $600 per acre. At Kelowna, nine tons of pears and ten tons of prunes per acre are said not to be uncommon. Four acres of strawberries near Victoria returned the owner of the land $2,598 net. Another owner reported 12,556 pounds of berries on one and a half acres, which sold for over $1,200.

Nectarines, apricots, figs, almonds and several other of the less hardy fruits and nuts, have been tried with success. It is contended by those with experience that any fruit or vegetable which can be grown three hundred miles south of the International boundary line, can be produced in British Columbia.

This fruit industry can hardly be said to have commenced in British Columbia. It has just passed that point in the State of Washington where there are now over 100,000 acres planted out against barely 7,000 acres in 1901.

Vilandre Freres, Richmond, Que., have sold their grocery and feed departments to Mr. Roux.

R. H. Kenyon, who has conducted a general store business in Port Colborne, Ont., for the past three years, has disposed of his business to Mr. Ward, of Toronto, who takes possession about the 20th of this month.

A RETAILER'S COMPLAINT.

Editor Canadian Grocer—The recent article in The Grocer re price maintenance, is read with interest in this section. The placing of a certain retail price on an article by the manufacturer certainly has some advantages. The trouble is though, that in many cases the manufacturers do not enforce their rule.

I have in mind a certain brand of soap. When an invoice of this line is received you find printed upon it something to the effect that "by the acceptance of this bill of goods you agree not to sell the article below the recognized retail price."

This soap costs almost 4c. and its retail price is supposed to be 5c. In a great many cases (particularly by departmental stores) this article is cut to 6 bars for 25c., seemingly without objection from the manufacturer. The enforcement of this rule would mean a definite profit for all and would place the retailer on even ground with his departmental store rival.

Again, let us consider sugar. What a boon it would be to retailers if the sugar refineries bound us to selling sugar at a certain paying percentage over wholesale price. Not one grocer in a hundred sees any sense in selling sugar at cost but even in spite of this the sugar part of our business that counts for so much in the turnover on our credit books and so quickly pulls down bank balance—counts for almost nothing on the profit sheet.

Different Views Regarding Collecting by Draft

Retailers Recommend it Because They Can Better Watch Cash Discounts—One Does Not Think the Bank is the Only Protection—A Legalized Method.

From the following letters to The Canadian Grocer, it is evident that "Collecting by Draft" is considered in different lights. Two of the three communications from retail grocers, it will be observed, favor that method, the third being a plea for settling accounts by cheque. They are as follows:—

In Favor of The Draft.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I might say that in my own estimation that "Collecting by Draft" is far superior to the sending of cheques or other remitting forms.

My reasons for saying this are as follows:—1st, that it saves the chance of ever forgetting to remit; 2nd, that your wholesalers are accustomed to the usual terms you desire, and furthermore that if you are in the habit of taking discounts it enables you to do so without constantly thinking when you should send your cheque.

Of course, if a person is in the habit of running an open account with his wholesaler, it may be more convenient to mail a cheque, but I still think that the system of drafting is a much more up-to-date way of settling your wholesale account.

W. R. BROWNE.
Cherry Valley, Ont., Dec. 6, 1909.

Likes Post Office Order.

Editor Canadian Grocer:—I carefully read your article in The Grocer of Nov. 26th, and noticed what was said about "Collecting by Draft." I do not like the draft. I am post-master here and if thirty days are given, as they usually are, I simply issue a post office order. I think wholesale houses should not draw on such close dating. There is no bank here and when a draft is made, it must be accepted and mailed back to the bank; then it must be entered up, its maturity watched and the money mailed to the bank—all told, a whole lot of trouble when the one remittance will do. I for one do not like drafts.

M. GLEESON.
Greenwood, Ont., Dec. 6, 1909.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—We think "Collecting by Draft" the easiest and safest way for both the wholesaler and retailer and you will find that 90 per cent. of those opposed to the draft system are weak financially. It acts as a double check on discounts, the wholesaler deducting them before making draft, and the retailer checking same before acceptance. It is also a saving to retailers in stationery and postage.

While we do not favor the returning of drafts, the retailer is not compelled to accept them and may have same returned if incorrect or unable to pay. It is very convenient to wholesalers. A good many firms get them discounted at the bank, and if it were not for this might be financially embarrassed at times. We do not look upon the bank as "an only protection," but a custodian. Banks are paid for the use of money, or for their services and while they may help in rating a firm or individual, other information is usually received outside the bank. We do not know of any reason why it should injure a person's or firm's credit, as it is a legalized way of collecting accounts between seller and buyer.

No More Bad Bills

There's absolutely no excuse for a grocer to complain of bad bills. There's a way to hold the credit customer in check and avoid losses.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best of canned goods will result in the ordering of a good proportion of

Old Homestead Brand
Canned Fruit and Vegetables

Because this brand is second to none in point of quality.

The extra care given in the selection and handling of the raw material and the sanitary and up-to-date methods employed in the canning have placed in an enviable position.

It is goods like these that bring the 'repeats.' And these are the goods you ought to handle! How are your stocks?

Old Homestead Canning Co.

You can sell more flour in 1910

Every "slow" line is a bad debt. It ties up money and doesn't pay rent on the floor space it requires. The wisest plan is to close out such lines of flour even if a cut in price is necessary.

After you've cleared the floor of the "dead" lines of flour you'll have more room to carry a nice stock of PURITY flour.

PURITY

And PURITY flour deserves more of your floor space. It is a "lively" seller.

PURITY flour is a "lively" seller because home-bakers are every day proving it the most economical.

Western Canada Flour Mills Company, Limited

"More bread and better bread"

While the price of PURITY flour is higher per barrel the cost of using it is less than with average flour.

Average flour only gives the home-baker average results, whereas PURITY flour produces lighter, whiter, finer-flavored bread—and more of it to the barrel.

PURITY does this because it consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry. No low-grade hard wheat flour—no "soft" wheat flour—in PURITY.

FLOUR

Is it any wonder that PURITY flour makes "more bread and better bread?" Is it any wonder that experienced home-bakers prefer it and shrewd grocers recommend it?

You can sell more flour in 1910 than you have in 1909 if you devote more room and energy to PURITY flour.

Write us to-day.

Inferior Goods Discounted by the Canadian People

Retailers, Wholesalers and Manufacturers Testify to the Increasing Demand Upon Quality Goods—Different Conditions Claimed to be Existing in the United States—In Addition to Quality Retailers Should Watch Profits.

It is no mere dream to say that the people of Canada have been educated during recent years to purchasing foodstuffs with a quality reputation. The oldest wholesalers and retailers in the trade will tell you so. The cry is not so much nowadays, "How much can I get for this dollar?" as, "Can I get the very best?"

Speaking in general terms the Canadian people demand and are willing to pay for quality goods more so than are the people of the United States. This is attributed to the fact that there is so great a foreign population in the United States, composed of certain classes who are willing to accept almost any kind of food so long as it can be purchased for merely nothing.

In Canada it is, however, different. Our citizens are aware that good, substantial food is the cheapest in the long run, and everybody in the trade has realized it, or is realizing it now. The sturdiness of any race of people depends on the food they eat more than upon anything else. Good food is a necessary requirement to an army on the battlefield—so is it to the men who are instrumental in fighting the battles of the soil and in the business field.

The particular reason why farmers buy good food nowadays is because they can afford it. When the country was in the making it was different; but there are few farmers at present who are not anxious and able to buy the best that is going. They have been taught to cultivate their farms by using scientific methods, and hence they are producing bigger and better crops from the application of less labor. Canada is naturally, first of all, an agricutural country, and as all wealth, we are told, springs originally from the soil, the farmers of Canada have more produce to circulate and hence more money.

Cheapest in the End.

Apart from the fact that the Canadian people are buying the better classes of foods because they can afford it, there is the contention that the better classes are the cheapest in the long run.

To-day one will find hundreds of manufacturers who have discovered that there are permanent profits only in good goods. In introducing quality goods they may at first have had an uphill fight—in fact, it is generally the case.

"We introduced an article on the Canadian market some years ago," remarked a manufacturer recently, "and for seven years we continued to lose money—and we lost a lot of it, too.

"But we kept on advertising its quality until the tables turned and to-day our goods are known and appreciated from one end of Canada to the other. We are still pounding away at 'quality,' and we have little difficulty in selling our goods."

That is one instance in which good goods have worked their way to the top against much competition. But that is not the end of the story. Other companies selling inferior classes of goods have failed because their products were not wanted by the Canadian people.

"We are still selling our goods at better prices than our competitors; but we can obtain them without any difficulty, because buyers know they can depend on them," stated the manufacturer.

The wholesale trade also recognizes the value of handling the better classes of goods.

"The people of Canada," remarked a wholesaler the other day, "are buyers of the best goods and we are only spiteing ourselves when we sell to the retail trade inferior stuff at lower prices, in order to obtain their trade.

"I have had customers come into our warehouse and ask the price of vinegar. When I tell them they hesitate, and say they can buy it somewhere else for four or five cents a gallon cheaper.

"I say, 'Why, I could sell it to you at the same price, but it wouldn't be white wine vinegar; nor could I send it to you with a three-X guarantee. But if your trade wants inferior vinegar, why, I guess I could supply you.'

"Ten chances to one they buy the best vinegar, because they know their customers want it and that if they buy poor stuff they are going to lose trade.

"When an inferior quality is sold, that sale re-acts on everybody who had anything to do with the sale—the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer. We all lose, and therefare I maintain that the best goods are cheapest in the end, even if prices are a little higher.

"There are, of course, certain classes of the population who will not pay the price for the higher classed foodstuffs, but these are becoming scarcer in Canada. Over in the United States goods are sold which we wouldn't give away.

"Certainly, I would say that the general tendency is towards the purchase of only the better qualities of foods—foods with good reputations from the standpoint of purity."

Lessons Yet to Learn.

While the wholesaler is, no doubt, correct in what he says, there still remain unscrupulous manufacturers and dealers who pose as saints in making pure foods when they are far from it. This is the class that injures the honest man. While it is not probable that they will be permanent factors in the trade, yet they hang on sufficiently long and crop up so often that the retailer is frequently at a loss to know just where he is at.

Manufacturers, however, realize that the firms which grow to be great are those that produce the best article and that present it to the dealer and public in the best light.

Almost any retailer who understands his business properly and his customers, as well, will tell of the advantages of selling the better goods; and the consuming public are rapidly beginning to understand that they are the cheapest in the end. Fine tea may cost the consumer more than a poor tea, but he knows that it will last longer and give him better satisfaction. The time has come in Canada when the farmers' wives and the mechanics' wives vie with each other in the quality of the food they provide for their families, as well as in the manner in which it is set forth.

If, therefore, the Canadian people will buy the best goods, it stands to reason that the retailer must sell them or lose his trade. They are going where they can get the quality. Retailers should also take into consideration the question of profit and treat manufacturers accordingly.

"There is little sense in the retailer," remarked one of them, "being the slave of any manufacturer; profits should be divided in a fair proportion, because without the retailer the manufacturer could scarcely find a channel for his goods to the consumer."

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput Fils & Cie., Montreal, was elected president of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, at the annual general meeting of that body on Friday last. Mr. Chaput is one of the progressive wholesale grocers of the younger generation, and this honor which his fellow business men have conferred upon him is evidence of the high esteem in which he is held.

Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Arthur Birks; Treasurer, Nap. Gendreau; Directors, S. J. Carter, D. C. Brosseau, J. T. Lalonde. Jas. Ethier was unanimously re-elected to represent the Exchange on the Council of the Montreal Board of Trade.

C. W. Gregory has joined the Montreal staff of Bovril, Ltd. Mr. Gregory has been working for the past fifteen years among the grocery trade in Quebec Province.

A number of cereals have gone out of existence, not having merit enough to satisfy the consumer, but "Meat of Wheat" is here to stay. Children actually cry for it.—Advt.

Attention Necessary in Storing Canned Goods

Practical Canner Who has Studied This Problem Gives Retailers Some Good Advice—Dry, Even Temperature Needed — Cases Should Not be Near the Wall—The Effect of Frost—How Rust Often Accumulates Through Carelessness.

By W. R. Drynan, written especially for The Canadian Grocer.

Although canned goods have come to be a very important item in the business of all grocers, yet apparently very few give any special consideration to their care. Because the goods are cased and sealed, any place is good enough to store them. The darkest corner of the dampest cellar is generally considered about the most suitable place. Canned goods are sometimes dumped into out-of-the-way places, and left for several months. When they are opened up later on, the tins are probably badly rusted, possibly an odd tin is burst, spoiling the appearance of the contents of the entire case, and the retailer immediately sits down and writes a long letter to his wholesaler about the condition of the goods, throwing all of the blame on the packers.

If grocers would only be impressed with the fact that canned goods must not be treated as cordwood there would be far less cause for complaint.

Tin plate is almost universally used. In fact, there is hardly a kitchen utensil that is not made of tin, and everyone knows that all tins are very susceptible to rust, especially when exposed to damp, and the greatest trouble experienced with canned goods is their tendency to rust.

The ideal storage for canned goods is a dry, even temperature, between 40 and 50 degrees Fahr., with a free circulation of air. Cases should be piled clear of the walls and as much as possible off the floors, to permit of the circulation of air over, through and around them. Cases should also be piled on their sides, so that in the event of a tin bursting, the contents will drain off, rather than into and through the cases underneath. Canned goods cases should also be examined at intervals, and where there is apparent trouble inside of the case, the cause of the trouble should be at once removed.

Protection From Frost.

The question is often asked, "Does frost injure canned goods?" As to affecting their value as a food, the answer is, "No," but as a general thing canned goods should not be allowed to freeze. With goods such as corn, peas and beans, the flavor is somewhat affected through freezing, not so much that one not an expert could tell the difference, but there is a difference. On the other hand, the flavor of preserved fruits in tins and tomatoes is not appreciably affected by frost. In fact, the writer made a number of experiments with tomatoes especially, and could not discover any impairment of flavor due to freezing. However, the greatest trouble with the freezing of canned goods is that the tins will sweat in thawing out, and the water lodging on the cans will cause the tins to rust, and also the labels to become soiled. If these goods are not carefully looked after, after thawing out, the rust will, in course of time, eat through the tins, and permit air to get into the cans, thus spoiling the contents.

Another thing to remember is that when canned goods are frozen, they are usually bulged, but as soon as they are thawed out, the ends will snap back. Be sure, therefore, that your goods are not still frozen before condemning them as swells.

If, owing to lack of storage, canned goods are allowed to freeze, it would be better to keep them frozen rather than to thaw them out, and freeze them again, as every time they thaw out they are liable to accumulate rust. If the goods are not used until the spring, the cases should then be carefully overhauled and placed where they will dry out rapidly, otherwise there will most likely be trouble.

Most packers are anxious to stand behind their goods, and if it can be shown to them that the trouble with any canned goods is through fault of their own they are generally always only too glad to have the difficulty remedied promptly.

Get at Cause of Trouble.

If grocers have goods that are not satisfactory, they should, in all cases, hold them subject to the instructions of the packer, as it is in the interests of everybody that the goods should be examined, to ascertain exactly what the trouble is, and it is only by doing this that any defects in packing can be remedied.

A swell of a leaky can is due most likely to an imperfection in the can or an error in the time given to the processing. Once air gets into the can, decay begins, just the same as the goods would decay if left exposed in an open vessel. Don't think that the packer has been putting decayed goods into the can. This view is entirely erroneous. Canned fruits and vegetables, as put up by the packers in Canada to-day, are, without doubt, strictly first-class, that is, the raw material is grown especially for factories, and is canned immediately after picking and when at its best.

In all large plants the processing is almost entirely mechanical, every means being employed to insure the goods being put up in the most cleanly manner. These vegetables and fruits are also preserved by sterilization only, i.e., by the application of heat, at a temperature which absolutely destroys all bacteria, and, therefore, there are no safer or more wholesome goods in the world to eat than canned goods.

Mister Grocer, as canned goods are an important and profitable part of your business, it is to your best interests to impress upon your customers that canned goods as put up to-day are the choicest and safest of foods.

EARLY CLOSING NOW A FACT.

Montreal Merchants Working for This and Law Will be Enforced.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—After many attempts early closing in Montreal is now an established fact. Some mention as to this was made in a recent issue, but more definite details have come to hand since then.

A society has been formed to see that the law is observed. It is called the Society for Early Closing in the Province of Quebec. The meeting at which this was formed, was held last week in St. Joseph Hall. Both merchants and clerks were well represented and great enthusiasm was shown at every mention of the recent victory for early closers.

Officers were elected for the coming year. J. B. E. Poirier, who has been most active all through the fight, was unanimously elected president. Ed. Hardy is the secretary, and A. Lavergne, J. R. Lesage, T. Cardin, J. A. Lepage, and J. O. Labelle are the councillors. It was not thought necessary to have any other officials, as the work of the society has been completed. The only object for a permanent organization, was to see that the law is fully lived up to in the future. A charter will be sought from the legislature immediately.

The following are the most important clause in the ordinance just passed:—

Section 1.—The shops in the City of Montreal, shall be closed at 7 o'clock in the evening, on Wednesdays and Thursdays of each week during the whole year, with the exception of the days indicated in sections 2 and 3; and the same shall remain closed until 5 o'clock in the morning the following day.

Section 2.—The provisions of section 1 shall not apply to Wednesdays and Thursdays preceding the following holidays, viz.: Epiphany, Good Friday, Empire Day, Dominion Day, Thanksgiving Days, All Saints Day, Immaculate Conception and Ascension Day.

Section 3.—The provisions of section 1 shall not apply moreover to the days of the last two weeks of December, in each year.

Following shops are allowed to remain open: Establishments where tobacco only is sold; establishments where newspapers, etc., are sold; hotels and restaurants; fruit and confectionery stores where no groceries are sold or kept for sale.

The Canada Packing Co., Montreal, has dissolved, Theophile Dion registered.

Criticisms on the Standards for Milk Products

One Manufacturer Thinks Difference Between Condensed and Evaporated Milk Should be More Definite—Some of the Standards Claimed to be too Low—Another Wants Time to Get Rid of Evaporated Cream Labels.

As announced last week, the Inland Revenue department of the Federal Government in drawing up the Food Standards, decided to first consider standards for milk products.

The Canadian Grocer in the meantime secured the views of manufacturers of condensed and evaporated milk, on the standards as at first suggested by Chief Analyst, A. McGill, and the revised standards issued by him.

One stated after considering the former, that the difference between condensed milk and evaporated milk should be more clearly defined, otherwise there would be no end of trouble and inconvenience if the specifications were to be adopted in the form they are now in. Evaporated milk (or evaporated cream) is a distinct trade term representing a product which receives quite a different treatment in the process of manufacturing. It is preserved by sterilization process only, without the addition of sugar or any other ingredient, while the term 'condensed milk' is usually applied to milk condensed and preserved with sugar. He also believed that the percentage of butter fat in condensed milk should be raised.

Time to Use up Labels.

Another manufacturer thought that the outline of the proposed standards was fair in reference to the milk products. There was no sweetened condensed milk or evaporated milk that should be put on the market showing a lower percentage than the standards call for. It would lead to a better class of competition besides giving the public the quality they are paying for.

"Really the only change that is being made," he said, "that will affect first-class companies is the changing the term "evaporated cream" for "evaporated milk." If you will look on any label on the so called evaporated cream you will find it states plainly, that it is the whole of the milk reduced to the consistency of rich cream—which is correct. It, however, is not cream as the label would indicate.

"The principal point we are interested in is that the new standards, when put into force, shall allow the manufacturer ample time to use up his supply of evaporated cream labels, which with most companies will be rather large, as they are always bought in large quantities. We should be granted at least a year after the standards go into effect, to use up the stock of evaporated cream labels and boxes."

Wants Higher Standard.

After reading the revised standards which were sent out this week, a manufacturer said: "I have two criticisms to make, viz., with reference to section 7—Condensed milk, and Section 8—Evaporated milk.

"The standards proposed are not consistent with conditions, nor with the scientific facts of manufacture. For condensed milk I believe the minimum of total solids should be 28 per cent., and not less than 8 per cent. butter fats. This is really a low standard, and no honest manufacturer will have any difficulty in observing it.

"Section 8—Evaporated Milk—should be lower in solids if any change is made from commercial practice rather than to lower the precentag of fat, and while a percentage of 7.7 per cent of butter fats is comparatively easy to maintain, it is not so easy to get 26 per cent. of solids in some sections at certain periods of the year, nevertheless I believe if any concession is made whatever in the interests of the manufacturer, it should be by reducing the solids, but not the fat.

"Briefly, the draft of the Proposed Milk Standards reads: — "Condensed milk 26 per cent. solids and 7.25 per cent fat." "Evaporated milk, 26 per cent. solids and 7 per cent. fat." I would recommend for condensed milk 28 per cent. solids and 8 per cent. fats, and evaporated milk 7.7 per cent fats, but 26 per cent. in the latter is satisfactory.

"The present standard for condensed milk in the U. S. has not been debated, but for evaporated milk it is debatable, and it is probable that for solids in the latter it may be reduced to 25 per cent."

Manufacturers of powdered milk also want to see their product included in the standards in order to be protected, and a request to this effect has been sent to the Chief Analyst.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

Not since the institution of vote by ballot has there been a contest in which such intense and world-wide interest is being taken, as that now in Great Britain. In order that its readers may be thoroughly informed as to the progress of the fight The Globe has sent its news editor, Stewart Lyon, to Britain. His letters and cables will appear exclusively in The Globe. This is an opportunity which the reading public of Canada will not be slow to take advantage of.—Advt.

THE SEMI-FINAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

It is only two more weeks until Dec. 31st, when the Christmas window dressing and advertising competitions of The Canadian Grocer close. That it is worth while for retail grocers to consider these is shown by the rewards offered for the best windows and the best advertisement. This, too, is merely incidental to the benefits in extra sales that must accrue to those who take extra pains in dressing their Christmas windows and in writing their Christmas advertisements.

The Canadian Grocer recognizes that grocers in smaller places have not the same facilities as those in the cities, so far as window dressing is concerned, and therefore has divided the field into two classes—Canadian towns, villages, hamlets, etc., under 10,000 population and towns and cities above that. The winner in each case will receive $7 in cash, the second prize being $3 in each case, making altogether $20 for the window dressing competition.

This gives retail merchants in the smaller places an opportunity to enter without competing with their friends in the trade who have better facilities in the way of larger windows.

The only stipulation so far as either class is concerned is that the window must be dressed with Christmas goods by the grocer himself or one of his staff. A 'manufacturer's' window— that is, one dressed by or at the suggestion of a manufacturer or his representative—will not be admitted. In sending in the photograph kindly tell who dressed the window and include a detailed description accompanying it. Be careful to obtain the best possible photograph.

In the advertisement competition all that is necessary is to forward one or more clippings from your local paper to us with the name of the writer of the advertisement, and the name of the paper it was clipped from. There will be a prize of $5 cash given to the winner.

The award will be made by an advertising specialist and will be announced, with a reproduction of the prize ad., shortly after the close of the contest. All entries in each case should be mailed not later than December 31 to the Editor of The Canadian Grocer.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Retailer Thinks Profits Should be More Evenly Distributed — Much Early Christmas Selling in Chatham—Intelligence and Persistence in Advertising—Plans for Getting New Customers.

Deals Heavily in Poultry.

Palmerston, Ont., Dec. 14.—The methods employed by J. H. McKay, Palmerston, since he purchased the stock of Mr. Stinson, a few months ago have helped him well in the general store business. The care in selecting stock, employing good salesmen and selling the most dependable goods, have all helped to increase this store's volume of business.

A large trade has also been developed in poultry, and Mr. McKay is one of the largest shippers between Palmerston and Toronto. He is in fact open for farmers' produce of all kinds:—potatoes, dried apples, onions, eggs, butter, wool, etc. He has the confidence of the public and is always ready to lend a ready assistance to their every enterprise.

A Merchant With Initiativeness.

Quebec, Dec. 14.—One of the most successful retailers of this city says that the greatest element in his career has been initiative. The ability to decide matters quickly, yet correctly, will always keep a business man in the forefront. "Learn to choose," he says "for instance, what lines you want without unnecessary delay, and by continually practising decision combined with speed and accurate judgment, you can't go far wrong. Always be willing to take a chance, if it shows a reasonable certainty of success, and a good future margin. Over-cautious merchants are as badly off as those who, while they decide quickly and take plenty of chances, do not use their heads to the best advantage in summing up a situation."

Wants Profits on all Goods.

Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 14.—A large Edmonton grocer claims he is at a loss to know why retail merchants consent to handle some manufacturers' goods for scarcely nothing. They have to make their profits on others, and are therefore apt to lose their trade in these goods to some extent.

"To keep accurate accounts of the business is not only necessary, from a financial standpoint," he says, "but it awakens an ambition to excel each week. I know of some stores where the clerks can hardly wait for the statement on Saturday nights, to see whether they are ahead or behind of the previous week."

Want Standard Weight of Loaf.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 15. — Grocers here are interested in the bill recently introduced into Parliament at Ottawa by Mr. Currie, of North Simcoe, to fix a standard weight for loaves of bread for all Canada. Conditions here are anything but satisfactory, the loaves of bread being small and the prices high. Moreover, judging from appearances, inferior flour is also used in small proportion. The way it works out is that grocers who sell bread have to stand the abuse of the dissatisfied customer, when he not only is not to blame, but makes nothing on bread, or at the most, a fraction of a cent per loaf. In fact, some grocers declare they will not handle bread, but then they are forced to by occasional demand. This, the bakers know and consequently the grocer has to handle bread merely for the benefit of his own personal trade, and the retention of a customer.

Finds Profit in Pastry.

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 14.—L. A. Primeau is the authority for the statement that a well conducted grocery business can well afford to carry a good stock of pastry, fancy and otherwise. He handles bread, but more particularly fancy pastry in connection with his grocery business, and he finds that it not only brings the afternoon shopper into his store, but also lands the dimes into the till, which after all is the main thing. Mr. Primeau puts an occasional display in his window, of the appetizing pastry, as a rule on Saturdays, and it is surprising the amount of fancy articles that are disposed of. "Like all other special goods it has to be properly advertised and ticketed," says Mr. Primeau.

Early Christmas Selling.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 14. — Chatham merchants this year have certainly done their best to bring out the early Christmas trade. Long before the end of November, Christmas displays were in evidence, while simultaneously many merchants commenced their special Christmas advertising.

The grocers were particularly active, nuts, confectionery, currants, raisins and the various other Christmas cake and pudding ingredients having been prominently displayed for the past three weeks. Christmas advertising is also well under way.

One grocer states that he has noticed a perceptible improvement in regard to the Christmas trade, which now starts quite a bit earlier than it formerly did. An exceptionally big Christmas trade is looked for, however, so that it is possible the rush of the last few days may not be much lightened. Quit a bit of business was transferred to the earlier days of the campaign, though, that under ordinary circumstances would be left to the last.

Advertising a Good Investment.

Quebec, Dec. 14.—That there are two requisites for successful advertising, is the claim of a progressive Quebec grocer. With either one lacking, he claims, failure is a distinct probability.

"The first, and most important is intelligence. Use your head in choosing a medium for your advertising matter which will give the best results. Without the proper medium your money is practically wasted.

"The second requisite to success is persistence. Spasmodic insertion of advertising will never give full value to the advertiser. A yearly contract for continuous insertion of even a small ad. properly written, will, in the end, give more value than the same amount of space taken in a few issues as full pages. With a combination of the two above mentioned qualifications, advertising will pay, and pay well."

An Aid in Selling Candy.

Perth, Ont., Dec. 8.—A local store in putting prices on its more expensive lines of candy, marks them 30c per ½ pound or 15c per ¼ pound. The idea is that a person might see something marked 60c per pound and think that confectionery too expensive, whereas if it were marked 15c (the amount probably he feels like spending) per ¼ pound, it seems easily within his reach.

Look Out for New Fields.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—There are chances coming up every day for a retailer to increase his field of operations. It may be by means of good service to the casual customer, by means of the local press, by dodger advertising, or some other method.

A Montreal merchant brought this subject up recently, to a representative of The Grocer, saying, "so many retailers are neglecting daily chances to add customers to their list, simply through carelessness in not taking advantage of hints which come their way. For instance, a stranger comes into a store. The clerks wait busily on all their regular customers, some of whom have come in after the stranger. Finally becoming impatient, the latter leaves the store.

"Meat of Wheat" is guaranteed absolutely. Grocers are authorized to refund money if not perfectly satisfactory, even after package is used.—Advt.

A NEW CO-OPERATIVE BILL.

Here is where retail merchants in Canada have an opportunity to show their strength in legislative matters.

Lloyd Harris, M.P, for Brantford, Ont., has announced that he is preparing a bill which is meant to provide machinery for the incorporation and supervision of co-operative societies.

This bill will not be in the interests of retail trade and especially will it be detrimental to the grocers should it go through. If the merchants were united all over the Dominion, such a pressure could be brought to bear against the passing of any such a bill, that it would scarcely ever be heard of. Nevertheless those who are united can do a great deal and also others who are interested can assist in preventing any legislation detrimental to their interests.

A co-operative society working in every city or town will do much to separate the merchant and his customers, even if it does not continue to become a success. Every association and every individual merchant should carefully watch this co-operative bill and make it a point to interview or write the member representing his constituency in the House of Commons to oppose it.

No member of parliament interested in manufacturing goods which are sold by the retail trade should consider it fair to be instrumental in passing a bill that will be detrimental to that trade. Yet what else do we find in the case of Lloyd Harris, of Brantford?

WHO IS TO PROSECUTE?

In connection with the recent confiscation of adulterated butter in Montreal, a somewhat puzzling, and in many ways ridiculous situation has developed. Dr. McCarrey, the health officer, who made the seizure, says he cannot do anything further than seize the goods, as no harmful adulterant was introduced. He has made a further statement that any prosecution would have to be originated by the Inland Revenue officials.

At the Inland Revenue department it is said that no definite information has been laid against any of the offenders and no action can be taken until such is the case. The fact remains that large quantities of adulterated butter have been seized, the names of at least seven of the alleged guilty parties are known, and nothing has been, or seems likely to be done.

It seems a pity that there is this lack of co-operation between officials, when upon their activity depends the protection of the interests of honest competitors and of the average citizen. It is about on a par with the case of two children, one of whom has been told by his mother to tell the other to do a certain thing. He tells, but the second one refuses because his mother didn't tell him personally. Meanwhile the obvious thing remains in it's old condition, undone. Who is to blame?

ON THE CARE OF CANNED GOODS.

The reader's attention is directed to an article in this issue on the methods which should be used in storing and taking care of canned goods. It is written by a practical canner who has had much experience in the business and therefore the suggestions given are all the more valuable to those who have under their care stocks of canned goods.

The article was secured at the instigation of a retail merchant who wrote to The Canadian Grocer, asking what effect frost has upon the contents of a tin of canned vegetables.

This paper shall be pleased at any time to answer so far as possible inquiries on trade questions and requests merchants to be quite free in making demands.

VALUE OF STORE CRITICS

Some merchants are inclined to feel sore—to use a common expression—if any of their customers happen to register a "kick" against some article purchased or lack of service on the part of themselves or their salesmen.

This is a mistake. They should rather consider it as a mark of favor because they have come to discover leaks in their businesses which otherwise might have gone unnoticed.

There is a retail firm in a large United States city which employs a woman regularly at a salary of $50 per week to do nothing but criticise the work of every salesman and manager and also the goods and their prices. She might be termed a private detective but prefers to call herself a critic. For instance, if she comes across a saleslady attending to the candy counter who happens to have dirty finger-nails, she purchases some candy and obtains the number of the party who made the sale. She is then in a position to find the name and the saleslady is next day given a "call."

In this way everything that goes wrong or doesn't look well is reported by the critic to the management, who call the attention of the managers of the various departments to them. The latter are, of course, often surprised and wonder how things are discovered and this has always a tendency to make them more careful in their work.

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSIONS.

Sherbrooke, Que., is just now much exercised over the question of extending their street railways to reach the outlying districts. This is always a question of importance to the local grocer in such sections.

Does it bring him more trade, or do his customers take advantage of the street car to buy in the larger centre?

There are certainly two sides to this question. In the first place traffic is sure to be stimulated toward the larger place, and many people will take advantage of the improved transportation to do their buying away from home. At the same time, the closer the connection between town and city the better the local grocer is able to buy, and if there is little saving to the customer, they are apt to save trouble by using the more convenient local man. His profits are likely to be more as he comes into closer communication with the city, and he can often take advantage of a drop in the price of some commodity, where previously he only had vague rumors, perhaps too late to be of use, as to that change in quotations.

Another aspect is the general enlargement of the field for both the local man and his city competitor. To a certain extent the city grocer has the advantage here. More buyers will go from the small place to the larger than will do the opposite. Still there are buyers along the line of the street railway who are closer to the small town than the city, and these very often take advantage of the car to do their buying. On the whole it is probable that both city and suburb, or small town, are benefited. It would be difficult to say as to which receives the most.

CO-OPERATION FOR TRAVELERS.

An excellent suggestion was thrown out at the annual meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association in Montreal on Saturday. It was not concerning a novel subject, but one which frequently comes up, secures approval, and is forgotten. A member stated that it was most regrettable that there should not be more united action, more co-operation, among the travelers of Canada. In the Dominion Association there are close upon 6,500 men, while in all of Canada the travelers number 20,000. Yet, the various associations were acting individually, and consequently were not accomplishing the many reforms aimed at by each, but ccomparatively easy of attainment through united action.

He suggested that every two years there be a general meeting of all the associations. This is an excellent idea. It should be carried out. There are innumerable questions of vital interest to individual travelers, and to the various associations, which could be discussed to advantage at such a meeting. Annual gatherings of the various associations are about to be held—let this question be discussed. It is the duty of the president of each association to bring the matter up at the earliest opportunity.

PROPOSED CANNING MERGER.

Some new phases to the proposed amalgamation of independent canners are reported this week. It is well known to the trade generally that the Canadian Canners are interested in the proposed merger as well as the American Can Company which supplies many of the independent Canadian concerns with tins.

Should the amalgamation materialize, and eventually an amalgamation with the Canadian Canners, the American Can Co. would likely lose a considerable portion of its Canadian market. It is claimed, that the American Can Co. is also becoming interested in a merger of Canadian independents, this to be separate altogether from the Canadian Canners, so that the independents would naturally be at a loss to know exactly where they are at.

Then the question of the members of the independent companies taking the preferred stock of the proposed new concern to the value of their plants and properties, is not meeting with universal favor. The directorate of several of them are principally farmers who have grown the vegetables, fruit, etc., used. These men believe that if the merger is put through, they will not find the ready sale for their products which many of them now enjoy, and this seems to be another drawback. Some are not even considering the proposition on account of having to take the preferred stock.

It is the belief of men in close touch with the situation that nothing definite will be decided upon for some time.

CAPITAL TIED UP IN IDLE STOCK.

It is a generally conceded fact that the average merchant in the smaller cities and larger towns does not look after the idle goods in his stock as closely as he should.

How many small dealers are there that could not go through their stocks and pick out inactive goods, a few here and a few there, small in individual amounts, but in the aggregate amounting to hundreds of dollars, that are neither bringing returns in sales or profits. These goods are inventoried year after year, at first cost, when they should not be counted as assets at all, their value having gradually faded away until they should properly be classed as liabilities.

Carried-over goods can reasonably be estimated as deteriorating in value one-third each year. Not only is there a loss in quality, but the value of the article has been tied up for twelve months without earning a cent. It has thereby eaten away one-third of itself and after the third year it has practically disappeared as an asset in determining the profits of the business.

In the case of articles that change in fashion from season to season the deterioration is even greater, and in closing out past season's goods of this character the question of cost should be lightly considered in comparison with the quick disposal of the goods. The money thus released and put to use in buying active goods that can be turned over and over during the year at a good percentage of profit, will more than counterbalance the loss sustained in promptly closing out the unselling, the clerks work more overtime, the buying problem is more important, the effort to sell early and deliver at the last moment and the adoption of plans for interior display all bring up questions which cause thought.

All of these have to be met and acted upon without delay, but in the rush of holiday trade ideas will develop which can be used in next season's trade, and unless a merchant plans to jot these down when they occur to him they will vanish and not be thought of again until they present themselves in new form a year hence. It's when the holiday shoppers are out in force and everything betokens the approach of Christmas that real inspirations knock on the average man's skull and prod him into saying, "If I had only thought of that in time what a hit it would have been. Too late now."

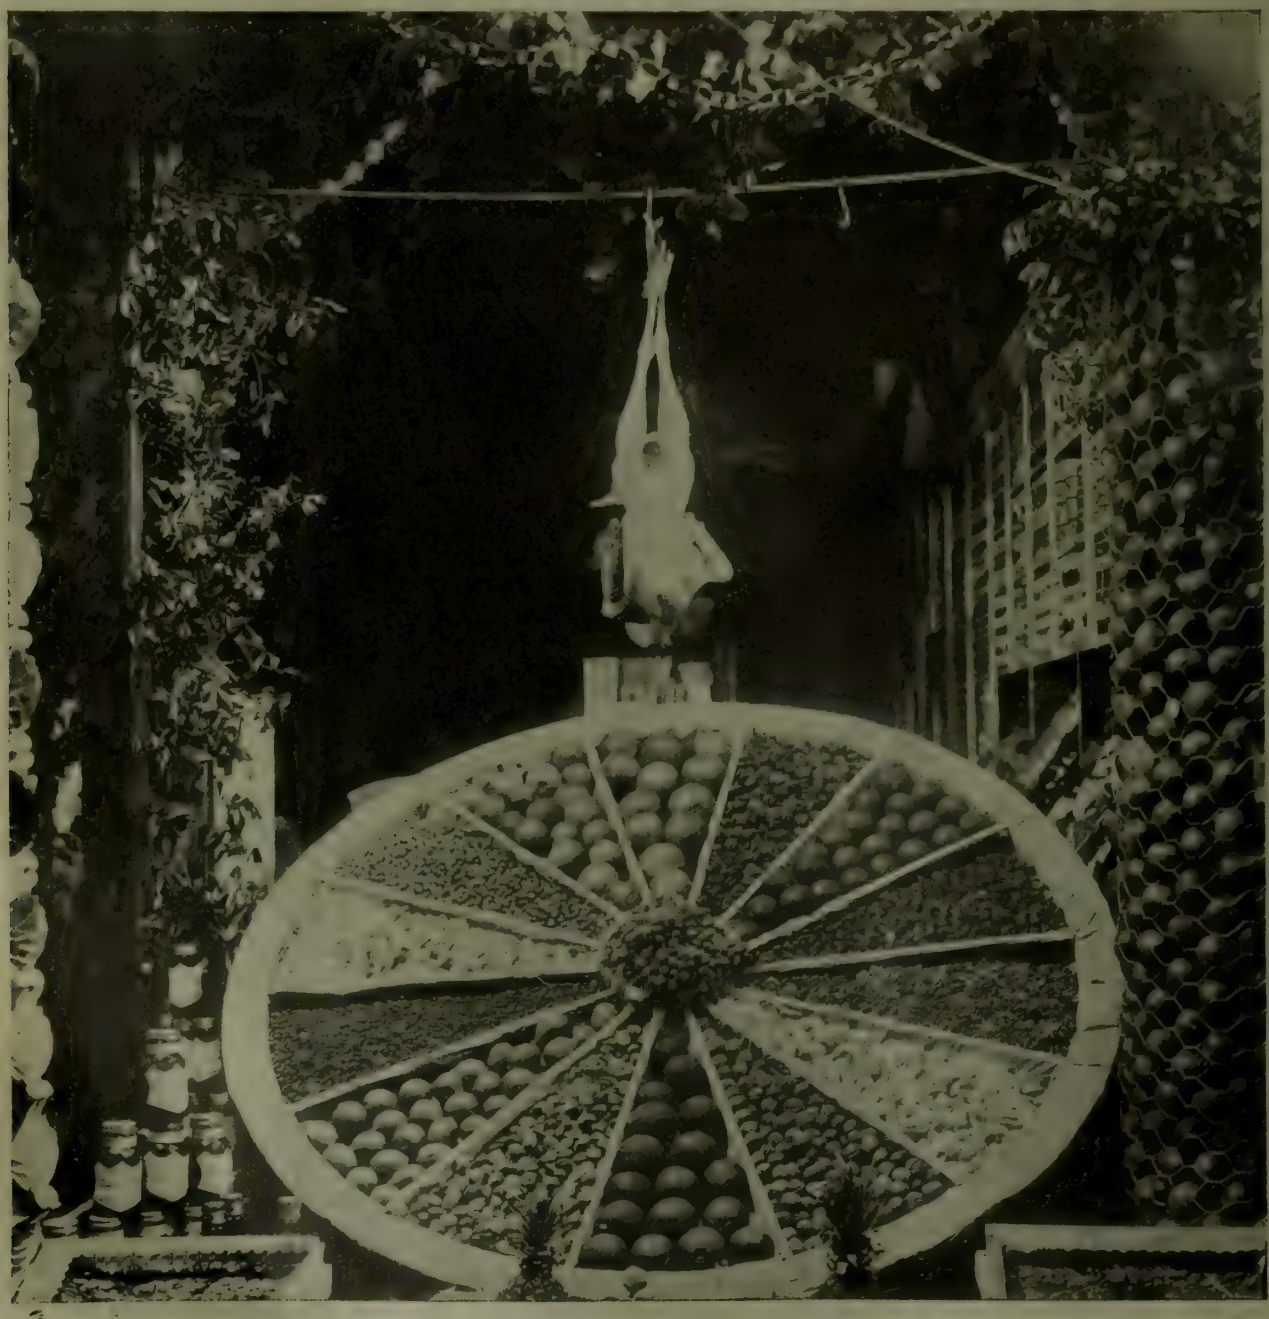
Each retailer should obtain a blank note-book, print on the outide cover of it in big, bright letters, "Holiday Ideas," and then proceed to jot therein the things he ought to have "thought of sooner." Put down a few bright window suggestions as they come to you while Santa Claus is grinning at you from all sides. Add a few advertising hints and note down the things that go the best for Christmas gifts; and the things most called for that you did not have. Paste in a few of the most striking advertisements issued by the city stores who do things on a bigger scale than you can afford to.

Don't confine your observarions to your own store, or even to business hours, but take a stroll around the stores with your eyes open. The jeweler or dry goods merchant may have ideas that a little skill would render more fitting in a grocery window.

Jot these things down in your special book and file it away among the things you know where to find. Then next season turn to your notebook and begin the sifting process. Some lines so popular a year ago are out of date now. Still there lies before you a big chunk of holiday atmosphere with its inspirations as well as some suggestions ready made.

A HOLIDAY NOTE BOOK.

No season of the year is so productive of trade-bringing ideas as the month of December, when the minds of all progressive merchants are concentrated upon evolving plans for increasing their trade by adopting methods which they hesitate to use at any other time of the year. Larger space is taken in the local papers, the windows are changed more frequently and more thought is given to the displays, booklets are sent to customers, the prices of goods in plain figures to assist the



The wise beginner is always willing to learn. Also the wise veteran in the merchandising art is willing to learn and he has chances every day to pick up information from his customers.

There is only one way to sell goods, and that is by asking people to buy them. Any kind of advertising is asking the public to buy, and they are entitled to be asked in a pleasant and alluring way.

Developing Originality in the Window Display

The Methods Used by a Grocer in an Ontario Town — Thoroughly "Christmas" in its Setting and it Proved to be a Splendid Seller.

J. McDermid, of Georgetown, Ont., conceived some good ideas in dressing the accompanying window. The store is a typical small town grocery, the window is not by any means a large one, and the design used is admirably suited both to the store and the window. Several novel ideas have been used, particularly in the building up of their large pillar of oranges, which will give some useful hints to other grocers. The centre is in the shape of a wheel set at an angle of 45 degrees. The bottom of the wheel is covered with half-inch boards and divided into fourteen compartments with a small circle in the centre, all of which is covered with tissue paper, one division being done in green, the next in cerise, and so on. Starting at the centre division at the top to the right is grape fruit, chocolate candy, oranges, walnut candy, shelled walnuts, cream candy, walnuts, oranges, almond nuts, lemons, shelled almonds, mixed candy, filberts, apples and the centre circle is filled with Malaga grapes, giving a nice contrast. On the right is a pillar of California oranges six feet high which fills that side of the window nicely. The rack which holds the oranges is made of poultry wire with a tin tube inside, the oranges being slipped down between the tin and the wire. On the left of the wheel is a pyramid of preserved cherries and peaches in glass. In the centre of the window between the wheel and the glass there is a fancy china plate filled with natural figs, on either side of which is a pineapple, then boxes of bon bons, and at either end a box of fancy table raisins, some of which show very clearly in the photo. The window is decorated with natural holly at the back and paper festooning across the top and down the sides at the front. Across the back of the window were a row of fine turkeys hanging on the iron bar which shows in the photo, which made a splendid background for the window, but as the photographer couldn't photograph the window when the proprietor had it ready, the latter sold off most of the turkeys.

The above Window was Dressed by J. McDermid, Georgetown, Ont., and Illustrates an Attractive Wheel Design.

The Markets—Advance of ½c. on Valencia Raisins

This Rise is Due to Scarcity of the Fruit—Shelled Walnuts Scarce — Raw Sugars Easier and Decline in Refined Would Not be a Surprise—Little Demand For Evaporated Apples.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Raw very weak.
Pepper—Firm.
Valencia raisins—½ cent higher.
Shelled Walnuts—Scarce.

Montreal, Dec. 16th, 1909.

Trade is now showing the full effect of the Christmas season. Dealers say that, taking it generally, there has not been such an encouraging outlook for some years.

There are several reasons to account for this. People are beginning to recover fully from the fear engendered by the depression, and as a result are spending more money. Also luxuries are being indulged in to a greater extent than for some time past. Staples are losing this season to a certain extent, but of course people must to a certain degree depend on them.

The marked feature of the week is the rise in price and scarcity of Valencia raisins. This, and the probable reasons for it, are dealt with fully on the editorial page, so need no further explanation here.

Walnuts are scarce at present as well as other lines of shelled nuts. As a whole, the market is steady and the prevailing tone is for a continued firmness.

SUGAR—Raw sugars are down this week. The decline is due to large receipts in New York and Liverpool. One of the largest shipments a Canadian firm has ever imported was on the Teodoro de Larrinaga, which recently arrived at Halifax from the Mauritius with over 6,500 tons of high grade refining crystals. This shipment was all consigned to one Montreal concern who have already disposed of it in England. Prices are firm but a decline is being looked for by some in the near future.

DRIED FRUITS—Valencia raisins have furnished the feature of the market during the past week and will continue to do so for some time to come. Medium grades are practically exhausted, while the 4 crowns and fine off staik are very scarce. Prices have been raised ½ cent with a further raise in sight. The reason is that this year's supply came in on a practically bare market and were greedily taken up.

Other lines are steady with a good sale.

BEANS AND PEAS—Beans are proving popular at present and there seems to be a steady increase in the demand. Supplies are fully adequate, however, and no price changes are looked for. Peas are not in heavy demand just at present though dealers say the situation is satisfactory.

AN ENERGETIC PRESIDENT.

The St. John, N.B., Sun in referring to the election of T. H. Estabrooks as president of the Board of Trade of that city says in part:—In Mr. Estabrooks the board has secured a man admirably equipped in public spirit and business energy and experience to carry along vigorously and progressively the board's work for the upbuilding and development of St. John. In the present circumstances Mr. Estabrooks is peculiarly well fitted for the position. * * * One of the chief factors in this success has been extensive and intelligent advertising, and Mr. Estabrooks, we believe, recognizes this and recognizes also that civic as well as private business is capable of development by similar methods. There is nothing St. John needs more at the present time, than an energetic and well-directed campaign of publicity.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—There is a distinct improvement in the demand for canned fruits. Heretofore the market for these lines has been very disappointing. It is thought that the somewhat inferior grade of dried goods packed this year have had a good deal to do with the return to canned.

Vegetables are firm and in good demand. Prices are firm and unchanged from last week.

Toronto, Dec. 16, 1909.

The great rush on the part of the wholesale grocers for the Christmas trade is pretty much over. They all report having splendid trade, and if the retailer comes out as well as they did, this autumn's trade will figure as one of the best for a good many years. It is hardly possible, however, that the retailer will get his proportion with the wholesaler for the reason that the retail stores have multiplied in leaps and bounds while the wholesale houses are almost the same as they have been for years. If the wholesale houses could have sold the same quantity of goods to a smaller number of retailers they would be surer of their money, the retailers would be better off, and the public would have had equally as good, if not better, service.

SUGAR—The recent report from Cuba showing that the production of raw sugar there is 317,000 tons in excess of last year, has a slight weakening effect on the market, altogether it did not materialize in figures. Cuban futures are lower than present prices, which indicates that lower prices are expected.

TEA—There is again a firmer feeling manifested this week in the tea trade. Considerable quantities are changing hands, which cannot again be repeated at the same prices.

COFFEE—Whether it is true or not, but some one interested in the coffee business made the remark that Toronto was using a lower grade of coffee than any other place. If this is correct, and a better grade would increase the consumption, there is something to hustle for on the part of the coffee men.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Corrected by Wire.

Firmer.—Raisins, beans, peanuts and Holland herring.

New Goods.—Rowley's Valencia raisins.

Withdrawals.—Cluster raisins, figs.

Winnipeg, Dec. 16, 1909.

Staples are again taking up the attention of the wholesalers in the usual active way. Holiday goods are all out, and there has been a recent revival in the general lines. Wholesale competition has tended to introduce a wide range of goods into the field and as a result the trade, both retail and wholesale, has taken an active appearance, travelers are beginning to come in in large numbers and their reports of the general condition throughout the country are interesting. One drummer, who has tramped Eastern Saskatchewan for some years, says that his customers were never in a better financial condition. Although they may not all clear themselves of debts contracted in less propitious years, yet they carry a larger stock and are making larger payments.

Just now a severe cold snap has cut off the trade considerably in all parts of the west, but this only means that the retailer will make larger but fewer sales.

The market continues strong with frequent advances. The heavy Christmas trade, the close of navigation and the shortage of crops in several lines have kept the market firmer than usual

SUGAR—Wholesale stocks have been greatly reduced during the past few weeks on account of the heavy trade in the west. Icing and powdered sugars are popular and retailers everywhere are stocking quite heavily in these lines. Conditions point to the maintenance of a strong market.

All the dried fruit markets are firm, and the output continues heavy. Dates, peaches and apricots have an excellent market. There are very few figs on the market and the price is about 5½ cents per lb. Prunes are slightly weaker just now, and the quality is not up to the standard.

BUTTER—Manitoba creamery is 28 cents to-day. Choice dairy is the same price, while No. 1 is 26 cents and No. 2 24c. There is an active demand for butter and the trade is in an excellent condition.

CALGARY MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Calgary, Dec. 16, 1909.

In groceries the holiday business is now active, indications pointing to a record-breaking trade until Christmas. Most lines have arrived in good time so that the merchants have had ample time to display goods to advantage, which counts for much at this season.

In fresh fruits and vegetables the market is well supplied. A carload of grape fruit arrived last week from Florida and three cars of Jap Oranges direct from Kobe, Japan, (these little oranges retail at 80 to 90c per box). The usual shipments of California oranges and lemons from Los Angeles have arrived. Nuts are none too plentiful, the demand being unusually heavy. In grocery lines several items have advanced. Candied peels are higher; currants, too, have ad-

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 16, 1909.

Changes in prices are all towards increases these days, with the exception of a drop in Quaker lard. The quotation for this has been from $1.25 to $1.32½, but now it is $1.25. Potatoes have started on their winter ascent. The price for Ashcrofts was $22 per ton, but with a day or two of moderate frost, not sufficient to freeze anything inside, the figure has been advanced to $25, and wholesalers declare they will hold it at that, although the weather is warm again. Supplies have not been coming in very fast, and they see a chance of making money. Local potatoes go for $20.

Japanese oranges are of good quality this year, and job at 60 cents a box in large quantities, and 65 cents in small, retailing at 75c.

HAS SCALE OF MINIMUM PRICES.

Manufacturing Concern Points Out Why This Scale Should be Adhered to.

Many manufacturers have now "terms of sale" for their particular products. The following is a sample announcement of these terms, pointing out why the company wants to be protected by a fixed minimum selling price for its products:

"Is a special product, originated by us, made under our exclusive process, and sold under our trade mark. As the result of great expenditure of money by us, it is widely and prominently advertised and known, which has established for it a certain fixed position and value, in which we alone have any material interest. Our existence depends upon its success in the market, while the trade handling it have no particular interest in it except an incidental one, limited to the small quantity they may have on hand at any one time. And as it is of paramount importance to us that our product shall be distributed through the wholesale trade to the retail trade and thence to the consumer, in perfect condition and on terms equitable to all, we have established the following scale of prices, with due regard to the interest of all concerned, deviation from which by any of the parties concerned will result in injury to our business."

Following this the scale of minimum prices is given, including that from manufacturer to jobber, from jobber to retailer, and from retailer to consumer.

It concludes with the following: "Any factor in the trade not willing to observe this scale of prices is requested not to handle the goods. Should a charge of violating these terms be made, we shall ask from the accused a certificate, to be verified by his oath and the oath of the salesman making the sale, to the effect that they have not violated the same. Refusal to furnish such a certificate will be construed as conclusive evidence that the charge is true, and further orders declined until reparation is made."

The business of the Dominion Brokerage Co., Toronto, which has been taken over by the Lind Brokerage Co., but which retains its name, has secured splendid storage facilities in its move to 73 Front St East. The goods handled include all the grocery staples such as pickles, nuts, raisins, jams, etc.

Memories of the famous "Boston Tea Party," says a Boston despatch, were recalled on Thursday last, by the arrival at the port of Boston of the largest cargo of tea ever landed in Boston, and valued at more than $400,000. The consignment of more than 10,000 chests came on the steamship Kattenturm, from Colombo, Ceylon. The great percentage of this was consigned to the "Salada" Tea Company, Toronto.

Early in November of this year the members of the south eastern section (Great Britain) Sanitary Association, with other distinguished experts, paid a visit of investigation to the factory of Bovril Ltd., in London, Eng. Many compliments were paid the Earl of Arran and other officials of the company, as to the cleanliness and general neatness in arrangement. After a thorough inspection the unanimous report was that there were no suggestions to make.

FRUIT WAREHOUSES DAMAGED.

Fire broke out in the fruit warehouse of White & Co., corner Front and Church Streets, Toronto, on Tuesday night of this week and before it was extinguished considerable damage was done by fire, smoke and water. The roof of the warehouse of McWilliam & Everist, wholesale fruit dealers, Church Street, also caught fire but the blaze was extinguished. Much damage, however, was done by water with which the whole building was soaked.

Business Should be Made a Campaign, not a Battle

Spasmodic Efforts in Window Dressing and Advertising, etc., Not Considered of Great Value—Definite Plan Should be Made and Adhered to—Such a System Shown to Bring Good Returns.

By Victor Lauriston.

"The direct sales resulting from a window display or an advertisment I consider the least part of the returns," remarked an aggressive merchant the other day. "If I run my business along right lines, these direct and immediate returns ought to be small compared with those that flow in in the long run.

"Merchants are sometimes too intent upon the direct and immediate results of their efforts to consider anything outside that. They put on an attractive window display and then, because they don't clear out the whole window in a day or two, they feel sore. Or they advertise a certain line of goods in a couple of issues of a paper, and consider themselves duped if the line isn't depleted inside of the week. They expect to win their business campaign with the very first shot.

"And this," concluded the wise merchant, gravely, "is something I always remember—that life is a campaign and not a battle, and that business is practically life on a slightly smaller scale. It's not the result of a single effort, but the sum total of results from a large number of persistent efforts, that goes to make up a successful business. A campaign—not a battle. Remember that, if you are about to start in business,"

The advice is excellent for the business beginner. It is better still for the business man who, after struggling along spasmodically, feels down at heel because he is not gaining the patronage which he thinks his efforts justify.

In window display, in advertising, in salesmanship, it is not the one day's work, but that of the long series of days that builds up the business.

Take the first instance—the window display.

The flower wears bright colors to attract the bee. The girl wears attractive garments, puts an added touch to her coiffure and an added bit of brightness to her cheeks, to attract the beau. And, for a like reason, the merchant must brighten his store exterior to attract the business of the chance passer-by.

It is not merely for the purpose of selling the goods actually displayed that the merchant makes his show window attractive.

It is in consideration, rather, of the business which will perhaps be driven away if he leaves the window careless, dirty, dusty, unkempt.

A window display does more than actually sell goods—and what it does should be considered by the impatient merchant who feels like declaring that the returns from this window or that do not come near to paying for the time which he himself or one of his salesmen may have spent in dressing it.

The window gives the prospective customer a favorable impression of the merchant himself, his personality and his business ability. And, when you simmer it all down, the average buyer prefers to deal with a good business man.

A good window display may not at the moment sell enough to pay for the clerk's time or the merchant's time in putting it together. But it may, in conjunction with a series of other good windows, be the means of bringing to the store one or two or three permanent customers. And, if every good window display means just one permanent, paying customer, the merchant will contrive to worry along very comfortably, thank you.

But if the window display talks to the man or woman who drifts past the merchant's store, it is through the advertising columns of the newspaper that the merchant must talk to the many who, in the regular order of business, do not come within such close hailing distance.

There are dozens of men who imagine that, because they cannot trace the direct results, advertising doesn's pay—who renew their contracts with the suspicion fondly cherished all the while that they are being duped.

Positive That it Pays.

The other day a merchant who has been advertising, day in and day out, for a couple of decades, who gives the subject daily study, who is probably the best advertiser in his town, said:

"It is hard to trace sales directly back to the advertising."

Then he added:

"But we are advertising and will continue to advertise for a very important reason. It's a professional secret, but I don't mind passing it on to you. It's because—advertising pays."

The gentleman went on to quote instances which did indicate that the firm's advertising was read.

"One time," he said, "we purposely quoted the wrong figure for a certain article—ham, I think it was. It was a ridiculously low price. The answers we got, the orders for ham, the queries as to the correctness of that price, would have astounded you. At another time we advertised that we were putting in a second telephone to accommodate our telephone customers. We could trace direct results from that. The man who comes in, buys an article, and then goes out again does not as a rule tell that he saw it advertised. Neither does the purchaser always buy at the time he reads the advertisement; often he is stocked with the article advertised, and merely makes a note of it. Nevertheless, after an experience extending over many years, I am convinced beyond all possibility of gainsaying, that advertising does bring direct results, and lots of them."

Yet outside all the actual, direct results in promoting the sale of the one article advertised, there are other things to be counted in the final summing up, where advertising is steady and persistent.

The merchant is kept continuously before the public.

Persistent advertising impresses the merchant's personality, and the personality of his business, upon the purchasing public.

The constant dropping of water that hollows the stone isn't in it with the constant advertising that builds up a business, so far as results are concerned.

A single advertisement may not sell enough coffee or cocoanuts to pay for the one insertion—but a series of advertisements, day in and day out, will (as the experience of successful merchants the wide world over has shown) unquestionably bring new customers. It is these new customers, rather than the immediate and direct returns, that pay for the merchant's advertising and give him something extra in pocket besides.

That is why the merchant should remember that successful advertising is a campaign, and not a battle—and that, just like a military campaign, it should be carefully mapped out beforehand.

CHRISTMAS CALENDARS AT CHATHAM.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 14.—Following a recent resolution of the local Merchants' Association, few of the Chatham merchants this year are giving out calendars.

John McConnell, one of the grocers who is still adhering to the calendar practice, has adopted a decided reform, which aims to eliminate the bad feature of calendar giving. With reference to his 1910 calendar he makes the following announcement:—

"Our regular customers will receive one free. Any others desiring one can have one by purchasing $3 worth of groceries before Christmas or until all are gone. You do not have to buy the goods all at once. Every time you come, you will receive a receipt for money paid. When you have $3 worth of receipts bring them in and receive a calendar."

The experience of merchants hitherto in regard to children clamoring for calendars has been a source of intense dissatisfaction to the merchants, and it was largely this difficulty which lead a majority of them to decide to do away with calendars altogether. Mr. McConnell, as will be seen, is endeavoring to meet the difficulty in another way.

Last Friday a social function including many interesting features was held at McConkey's restaurant, Toronto, where Henry Wright, president of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., entertained the travelers of the firm, several of the office staff and a few friends.

Jno. L. Forrest, general merchant, Dysart, Sask., has assigned to Wm. J. Smith.

Hogs Higher than they Have Been for Many Years

Some Comparisons Made—No Likelihood of any Noticeable Decline in Hog Products—Butter Tends to Lower Prices—Speculation in the Egg Market.

Last year at this time the price of live hogs at country points was $5.75 per cwt., and then everybody thought they were too high. This year they are $7.85, and still the supply is short and the demand good. On the United States market this year they are worth $8 per cwt.; a year ago $5.65, two years ago $4.25, three years ago $6.25, and four years ago $4.85.

It will be noticed how much higher hogs are this year than in years past, and yet on account of the scarcity they are likely to go even higher. Judging from reports from the country there is nothing in sight that points towards lower prices. Even at these steep prices the demand is firm.

With the low prices of butter in England and with so many countries pouring their butter into the English market, and a liberal make here, the likelihood is that butter will do well if it will hold its present prices.

The egg market is very steady. Montreal and Quebec dealers seem to think that their stocks might run short, but on the whole the egg problem will likely work out all right.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—There is a decided tendency toward higher prices in the provision market. As yet it has only made itself felt directly in two lines, dressed hogs and bean pork. Dealers seem agreed that in the near future the whole tone of the market will be higher. Trade has been good and there is a smaller influx of supplies. Other prices are firm.

BUTTER—Batter is firm with a good demand. Dealers consider the butter situation to be much better than last year, when the slump after Christmas worked such havoc.

Receipts are keeping up wonderfully, in view of the various influences present this year which were lacking at that time. For the week they are 4,657 packages as against 3,627 packages same week last year. For the season they are 376,203 packages as against 402,523 packages same season last year, showing a decrease of 26,320.

PROVISIONS—"Some years ago, it took us all our time to get rid of the goods, but now the trouble is altogether on the other side. The trouble is to get the goods to give the people what they want." This was remarked by one of the dealers, and this is not the case with one line only but with almost all farm products. Hogs are still scarce and no chance of them being plentiful for some time. In view of this, prices are sure to remain sky high. The local demand continues well up to the supply and prices are firm and unchanged.

BUTTER—Receipts of fresh made butter are quite liberal, but a good deal of it is, as usual during the winter, far below the quality the people desire. Cold storage creamery butter is preferred. It is picked up readily and the fresh made is waiting for buyers. With the low price of butter in England and with the heavy receipts from Australia and New Zealand, we cannot expect much demand for our butter from England. Under these circumstances, we will at least have plenty of butter, if not more than will be required. The chances are for cheaper butter especially if too much poor stuff is put on the market. This always has a tendency to lower prices, for the simple reason that it takes at least twice as long to eat 1 lb. of bad butter as it does to eat a pound of good butter.

POULTRY—Comparatively little poultry has arrived this week above the daily needs, and therefore there is not much on hand to meet the Christmas requirements. Next week, and up to the 22nd will furnish the supply, whatever that will be. Dealers all claim that it is a mistake for farmers to hold their stock until the last few days before Christmas. This gives them too little time to handle them to good advantage. It is supposed that it will take all that can be secured to meet the Christmas demand, and that prices will be good for the farmer, but tough on a great many who would like a Christmas turkey.

HONEY—Honey trade is steady. The chief demand is for honey put up in glasses. Grocers often neglect their honey when it becomes candied. They should either educate their customers to use it in that way, or else keep it liquefied and clear in the bottles. This can easily be done by placing them over the register over night.

A TRAVELERS' CLUB.

Organization in Montreal for Social Purposes and Entirely Separate From the D. C. T. A.

At the annual meeting of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, held in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, Saturday evening last, a subject was broached and met with the approval of the members present to such an extent that it was deemed advisable to call a special informal meeting afterward for the discussion of the project—the formation of a social club for travelers. Since the subject was one with which the association as a body can have absolutely nothing to do, it was necessary that it should not be brought up at the meeting of the D. C. T. A., and the after-meeting was the result.

When the club is established—for it was decided to go ahead with the project—members of the club will be able to entertain outside friends, including customers, while they will always have some place to take their local customers when occasion requires. It was clearly explained that the club was to be conducted on strictly business lines, and that it was emphatically not a drinking place, and no misconduct would be tolerated.

It was pointed out clearly by the promotors of the idea that the Travelers' Club was to be absolutely independent of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, and that the two were to have nothing in common. Membership is to be open only to travelers over twenty-five years of age, who are earning sufficient money to insure their moral responsibility. Merchants will probably be given the opportunity of becoming associate members.

A committee was formed composed of the following gentlemen: J. Bevans Giles, chairman; F. N. Picard, Major J. T. McBride, D. M. Lefebvre, Hackett, Austen, W. J. Egan, Samuel Woods and H. B. Levine. These gentlemen will consider the whole question.

Some thirty-five travelers present handed in their names as members of such a club. The fee will be about $25 a year.

On every plate, at the annual dinner of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, a card will be placed, outlining the club proposition, and requesting those in favor of the idea to express themselves, and to attend a meeting, which will be called in the holidays to arrange for the securing of a charter, and the drawing up of the constitution of the new club.

President S. J. Mathewson was in the chair, supported by vice-president Giles and treasurer Max. Murdock. Mr. Mathewson spoke of the courteous action of the Federal Government in changing Thanksgiving Day from a Thursday to a Monday, and Mr. Murdock read a resolution of thanks, to be sent to the Government, which was passed unanimously.

EXPERIENCED TRAVELER AS GUEST.

Captain J. E. Bernier, of Arctic fame, will be one of the guests of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association at the annual dinner in the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on Monday evening next. A last call is issued to travelers, by the executive, to attend. An excellent time is assured, and a large attendance is certain, as over three hundred tickets have already been sold.

The annual dinner of the Drummers' Snack Club will be held at the Arlington Hotel, corner King and John Streets, Toronto, on Thursday, Dec. 23, at 7 o'clock.

WHY RAISINS ADVANCED.

The following is an extract from a letter received by a Canadian importer from the firm he represents in Denia, Spain, and explains the cause of the rise in Valencia raisins.—"We should like you to impress upon the minds of Canadian dealers that weather having been unfavorable for drying the raisins, in the early part of the summer, we, like all other exporters, were bound to buy the fruit that was offered on the market, or close the warehouse. We may assure you that we took every precaution with regards to condition, but when you have to pack 25,000 cwts. of raisins in 70 days, and receive the fruit in lots of from 10 to 25 cwts. each, and examine basket after basket, it is quite impossible to get through without any bother, particularly so, in a season like this, when all the growers offer what they have, and as it happens that all their fruit has been more or less affected by the influence of the unfavorable weather that prevailed whilst being dried, they try to mix bad and good fruit, and some times they succeed.

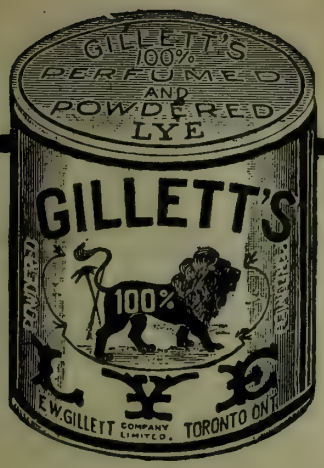
"As the crop is smaller than last one, and exports up to the present show an increase on those of 1908, stocks remaining here are much reduced. Besides, England that has lately gone up 3s. to 4s. per cwt., will still require the majority of what is left for her spring trade, and so, our market has considerably advanced during these last few days, and we are of the opinion that we have seen the lowest this season."

A MAN OF HIS WORD.

"While I am not in the same political fold as Hon. Wm. Paterson, the Minister of Customs," said a prominent member of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who was attending the banquet in Montreal the other night, "there is one outstanding characteristic about him which strongly appeals to me. The Hon. Wm. Paterson is a man of his word. Every time I go to him in regard to any important customs matter, I know that what he says he will do he will do. If he promises to do a thing which he subsequently discovers should not have been done, for the sake of keeping his word he will keep faith with you. Any alterations or changes which he may think necessary will be made afterwards. He has carried through his political life the quality of integrity which characterized him in business life.

"Unfortunately, there are a great many politicians who do not do this. They are strictly honest in business affairs and their word is as good as their bond in that sphere, but for some reason which I have never been able to explain, when they get into politics, too often these qualities, under pressure of political influence and the exigencies of political life, are thrown to the winds. It is not so, however, with the Hon. Wm. Paterson." Concluding, the manufacturer vigorously struck the palm of his hand with his clenched fist by way of emphasis.

PERSONAL NOTES.



Z. Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal, has sailed for Europe. He expects to spend the next two months across the water.

A. H. Brittain, of A. H. Brittain & Co., Montreal, was in Toronto during the week, and made a friendly visit to that office of The Canadian Grocer.

J. Hewitt, general sales agent for Canada of the Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., was presented with a handsome gold-mounted umbrella by the Canadian field staff during a conference last week, held at the Toronto offices of the company.

Ballots for the election of the officers of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada must all be in by noon on Monday Dec. 20th. The election will take place on Dec. 23rd, the date of the annual meeting.

Opinions on Future Values of Flour Not Ventured

Millers at a Loss to Know What Will Next Occur—Raise in Prices not Anticipated—Farmers Slow in Bringing Out Wheat —Cereal Products in Good Demand.

While there may be vast differences of opinions between the buyer and seller of wheat, there is no visible change in the prices of either wheat or flour from last week. Even the oldest millers scarcely dare to venture an opinion on future values. Before they risk to take a large contract for flour they first find out at what they can secure the wheat, and in this way work at a small profit on a safe basis.

The prospects of the Argentine harvest, which was used to move the price of wheat either one way or the other, is now so far advanced that the scare from front can now have little effect. According to the most reliable estimate the wheat crop of the world this year is 120,200,000 bushels more than any previous year, and 355,968,000 bushels more than the average of the last ten years. It is quite true that the stocks held all over the world, were very light, when this year's crop was available, and it is also true that farmers, as far as they are able, are holding back, which all helps to keep up a strong market; but, judging from the quantity, it seems reasonable to suppose that easier prices must rule.

Wheat delivered by farmers at Toronto mills is bought for $1.08 by millers.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—It is reported that the visible supply of wheat in Canada is less than at this time last year. However, even if this be true, it is more than counterbalanced by the increased European stocks. Christmas trade in flours is very good, and steadily improving. Prices are steady, with no downward tendency. It was thought a short time ago that when the farmers began to bring their wheat in there would be a slight lowering of prices.

ROLLED OATS—Oatmeal is selling at steady prices. Cold weather is bringing the increase. From present indications this winter is going to be fully as cold as the average, if not colder, and with this in view, dealers expect a heavy demand.

FEED—All lines are having a good sale, with brans somewhat in the lead. There is a very firm tone to the entire market, and from indications of a shortage among some dealers, it would not be surprising to see higher prices in the near future.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The local market is strong, but the prices are unchanged and not likely to go higher. Farmers are slow in bringing out their wheat, and millers have some difficulty in getting a supply of Ontario winter wheat, to meet the requirement of their customers.

CEREALS—The demand for all kinds of uncooked cereals is active. Most people after all, like a fresh cooked hot porridge in the morning, and when the fires are required for other purposes, it makes it convenient to do the cooking. This accounts for the keen demand for these goods. Prices are steady but no change from last week.

The Honor of One is the Glory of All

IN Montreal early last week, Brother Grocer, there was quite a mild sensation.

About several grocers who were accused of selling "watered butter."

Whatever that means! But if it bears any relation to "watered stocks," sure, 'twere a grievous crime.

* * * *

Be that as it may, the alert reporters got hold and exploited it in the press. Quite a stir. "Oh, the Grocer!"

Result—the women's clubs take up the matter, agitate for Women Inspectors, contemplate drawing up for distribution a "White List" of Pure Food dealers.

Well! Well!

* * * *

The pity is, Brother Grocer, that those found selling the watered article may suffer all along the line.

Confound those reporters, anyway!

Though their other lines may be the best and purest on the market, yet because of the—ah, "watered stock," all are condemned.

Such is poor, weak, feminine human nature, and the way it reasons.

Now, Brother Grocer, if Mrs. Housewife comes to YOU and you should praise to the echoes a brand of flour which to HER is associated with many unpleasant kitchen recollections —do you make a sale?

Not only do you waste your time (which is money), but you engender in her mind dark suspicions of your intentions and general stock.

Very sad!

Hardly logical, you say? But human nature is not altogether logical, especially feminine human nature; and women constitute 90 per cent. of the buying community.

* * * *

But if you sell her FIVE ROSES, you handle a flour which for twenty-one years past she knows to be eminently satisfactory, which has never failed her friends in kitchen or parlor. All your goods shine with reflected glory—"the honor of one is the glory of all."

Think well on it, Brother Grocer.

There's something in it—'tisn't all water.

E. S. CLOUSTON,
General Manager.

Bank of Montreal,
Montreal, 30th October, 1909.

The Vice-President.

The Vice-President then spoke as follows:—

The most important change from last year in the statement submitted to you is the unusually large increase in deposits, amounting to $36,000,000. Part of it is temporary, pending large payments in connection with special transactions, part is the natural increase from depositors as a result of the prosperous condition of affairs in this country, but the largest portion of the increase arises from money brought into Canada from other countries. It is quite possible that if the apprehensions expressed in many quarters as to the consequence of the new methods of British taxation are realized, deposits from this last source may be still further enlarged. It is very important, therefore, that nothing should be done in Canada by injudicious legislation, the exploitation of doubtful enterprises, or otherwise, to stop this flow of capital. Our call loans have increased by about the same amount as our deposits, and what is not necessary to retain as a portion of our reserves, will be gradually brought into the country to meet the commercial requirements as they arise.

The profits are some $130,000 less than last year, but considering the low rates ruling for the greater part of our fiscal year in London and New York, the result may be regarded as satisfactory. I am glad to say that the outlook for the coming year, or at least, for the earlier months, is more promising, and I shall be much disappointed if we do not make a better showing when next we meet.

The rapidity of the recovery of trade from the set-back following the monetary crisis in the United States two years ago has been as striking as it is satisfactory. Conditions to-day are, as a whole, excellent. The large harvest gathered in the Northwestern Provinces in itself affords a basis for active and profitable business for some time to come. How considerable a factor in the commercial life of Canada the agricultural output of our Northwest has become may be realized from the fact that the yield of wheat, oats and barley is this year 313,635,000 bushels, as compared with 232,620,000 bushels in 1908, 160,000,000 bushels in 1907, or 32,000,000 in 1900. A tenfold gain in the grain product of the Northwestern Provinces in nine years conveys some idea of the commercial potentialities of the country.

The marketing of wheat has been quite prompt, and the railways have had no difficulty in moving the crops. In the ten weeks to November 14th, there had been inspected in the Northwest 43,866,000 bushels, being 10,300,000 bushels more than in the corresponding period of 1908, while the shipments from Fort William and Port Arthur amounted to 35,815,000 bushels up to November 14th, or 13,300,000 bushels in excess of the preceding year's shipments.

Our foreign trade has not only reached, but has begun to exceed, the high-water mark of two years ago. In the six months ending September 30th, last, imports for consumption and exports of domestic products were of the value of $292,857,000, or $46,000,000 in excess of the corresponding period of the preceding year, imports having been larger by thirty-six millions and exports by ten millions. The adverse balance of trade has thus again begun to grow, but while men and money pour into Canada from abroad the disparity need not cause uneasiness. Domestic industries are, speaking generally, working well up to the limit of capacity. Labor is fully employed; the lumber trade has improved. The export of dairy produce has been larger than last year, with high prices ruling throughout the season; all farm products, indeed, are exceptionally dear.

Such tests as bank note circulation, bank clearings, railway earnings, all point to the great activity of business. At the end of October the note circulation exceeded $89,600,000, or $6,600,000 more than a year ago. Business failures have been neither numerous nor serious, being for the year to October 1st, 1,486, with liabilities of $12,919,000, as compared with 1,629 failures and liabilities of $16,959,000 in the previous twelve months.

Railway construction is proceeding apace over the whole face of the Dominion. West of Lake Superior nearly 1,100 miles have been built this year, and the Western Provinces now have 11,500 miles of railway, as much as the mileage of all Canada twenty years ago.

Immigration has picked up after the short relapse in 1908, the estimate of the number of new settlers this year being 150,000, about one-half of whom are experienced farmers who have moved into our Northwest from the United States. The evidences of expanding trade, accumulating wealth, and material progress and development might be cited at great length, and a pleasant picture painted of our happy condition. There are always, however, dangers to be avoided, and never more so than when the outlook is so bright and inspiriting. A tendency to over speculation in real estate in some parts of Canada is already apparent, and this, like other forms of gambling, can bring only disaster when the inevitable crash comes. How suddenly conditions may change the rapid advance in the Bank of England rate last autumn attests. Only by prudence both in taking and granting credits and by avoidance of wild-cat ventures and exploitations on the high reputation Canada enjoys in the British money market, can we reasonably anticipate a continuance of the prosperity now enjoyed.

There is only one other observation I desire to make. As you are aware, the decennial revision of the Bank Act will take place during the present session of Parliament. In one or two respects changes of a more or less technical character will be found necessary, but the Act has been so thoroughly revised in the past, it withstood so staunchly the trials of 1907, and its operation has been found to conform so admirably to the requirements of trade and the interests of a rapidly developing country, that I hardly think it likely that any material change will be made.

In our note circulation we have a system which enables us by its elasticity to carry out the heavy autumnal demands without creating any monetary stringency; and to show how valuable it is to the whole business community, I need only point to the fact that we are moving the large crop in the Northwest with great ease and without any advance in rates to our commercial customers.

I beg to move: "That the report of the directors now read be adopted and printed for distribution among the shareholders."

This was seconded by Mr. E. B. Greenshields, and unanimously adopted.

Mr. H. Joseph then moved: "That the thanks of the meeting be presented to the president, vice-president and directors for their attention to the interests of the Bank."

Mr. C. J. Fleet seconded the motion, which was unanimously agreed to.

Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy moved: "That the thanks of the meeting be given to the general manager, the assistant general manager, the inspectors, the managers and other officers of the Bank for their services during the past year."

The motion was seconded by Mr. David Morrice, and was unanimously carried.

Sir Edward Clouston expressed acknowledgment on behalf of himself and fellow-officers.

The ballot for the election of directors was then proceeded with. The scrutineers appointed for the purpose reported the following gentlemen duly elected:

Believe Organized Efforts to be Necessary

Grocers and Butchers of West Toronto Join Ranks of the Retail Merchants Association—Interested in Division Court Act Legislation and the Collection of Accounts—The Officers Elected.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—The grocers and butchers of the western part of the city, known in olden times as West Toronto Junction, held a meeting last week for the purpose of considering the advisability of forming an association to protect their mutual interests. They, too, feel, like the rest of the merchants all over the country, that their interests suffer if not looked after by united action on their part. While assistance was secured from the Government in the matter of trading stamps, and in defeating the co-operative bill, through the determined fight on the part of the retailers, it cannot be overlooked that the retail merchants have seldom been favorably considered by the Government.

The merchants are a necessary element in the industrial fabric of the country, and are essential to the convenience and comfort of the people, and they have rights which must be respected and maintained. They are called upon in a large city like Toronto, to assist more people than all the charitable institutions put together, and yet when they asked for an ammendment to the Division Court Act, for a simple, cheap system of collecting accounts from those who deliberately take advantage of them, and who dead beat their way from year to year, they were turned down, because it would interfere with the income of some of the officials.

To protect their own interests and secure fair and reasonable legislation, they see the necessity of being organized. The most unanimous feeling prevailed at the meeting in West Toronto, with an enthusiasm that meant business.

T. P. Padget presided, and forcibly pointed out the necessity of united action. The meeting was then addressed by F. C. Higgins, ex-president; E. W. Trowern, secretary, and M. Moyer, treasurer, of the Retail Merchants' Association.

The work of the association was clearly described, and the good results shown from collecting systems in getting after the dead beats, was highly appreciated. From the practical manner in which those present took hold of their work, it was evident that the retail merchants of that part of the city are a good class of business men and will be useful for the betterment of the retail trade.

After deciding to form a district board of the Toronto branch, they at once elected their officers as follows:—

T. P .Padget, chairman; F. Whetten, first vice-chairman; W. J. McCullough, second vice-chairman; J. C. Gilbert, secretary, and H. Rowntree, treasurer.

At the close of the meeting the officers invited all present to an oyster supper, where they became better acquainted with each other and where each found out that they were all jolly good fellows. The following occupied seats at the table:—T. P. Padget, B. Wilson, W. J. Tobin, S. Harris, J. C. Gilbert, F. Whetton, J. H. Rowntree, Hillock & Brown, James Scott, J. S. Adamson, C. W. Spink, T. Chapman W. H. Ford, W. Rowntree, R. Padget, M. Evans, H. McClement, A. L. Anderson, E. M. Trowern, F. C. Higgins and M. Moyer.

BROKE HUXTER BY-LAW.

Woman Fined in London—Association Keeping Eye on Offenders.

London, Ont., Dec. 15.—The usefulness of an association was once more demonstrated to London grocers, during the week, when a woman was fined for breaking the law governing huxters. In spite of warnings from members of the Grocers' Association, and Market Clerk Maker, she persisted in engaging in huxter business on the local market.

The woman pleaded ignnorance of the by-law, but President Ed. Ryan, of the Grocers' Association, stated to the magistrate that he had personally warned her half a dozen times.

"I will have to find you guilty," said the court. "I hate to have to fine a lady, but you certainly broke the by-law. I will fine you $1 and $4.85 costs. I think the by-law is a perfectly just one, and is for the good of the public."

The woman asked if she could appeal if she desired, and the court told her she had ten days in which to do so. She paid her fine, however, and left the court. The case drew a large number of grocers and hucksters to the court, as it was one of considerable interest to them.

"The Grocers' Association intend seeing that this by-law is enforced," states ex-president Thos. Shaw. "The facts of many of the cases are that these hucksters who live outside of the corporation and do not pay any taxes, come into the market very often with empty

WHAT CATSUP IS IN MAINE.

As defined in the Maine, U.S.A., food standards, catchup, catsup or ketchup, is the clean, sound product made from the properly prepared pulp of clean, sound, fresh, ripe tomatoes, with spices and with or without sugar and vinegar. Also benzoate of soda may be used provided its presence and amount are plainly stated upon the label.

QUEBEC REPRESENTATIVE.

C. D. Chown, who has been connected with the Montreal office of The Canadian Grocer, has been appointed permanent traveling subscription representative of the paper in Quebec Province. Mr. Chown, who is a retired retail merchant, knows the problems which confront the trade, and his past experience will enable him to intelligently discuss with the grocers and general storekeepers in Quebec, the difficulties they meet with every day. It is the intention of The Canadian Grocer to have Mr. Chown call upon subscribers, and those who should be subscribers, in every part of the province, and merchants will confer a favor by co-operating with Mr. Chown, in furnishing him with their ideas on progressive retailing and their views on the treatment of questions which are daily presented to them for solution.

The Consumption of Fish Increasing in Canada

Dealers Finding Better Demand From Year to Year—Temporary Scarcity of California Navel Oranges — Apple Prices Becoming Easier—New Potatoes From Bermuda are Rather Expensive.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Dealers are somewhat disappointed in present trade in fruits, except in oranges, grape fruit and cocoanuts. These lines are proving popular, and indications point to a continuation of the present demand. Prices remain firm and steady, with the exception of apples. The export sales of apples have proved disappointing, owing it is thought, to the careless packing which has been on the increase of late years. This lack of demand has caused a slight weakness in wholesale prices, which has not yet reached the retail trade.

FISH Weather has turned more suitable for frozen fish trade, and sales have increased accordingly. On account of exceptionally stormy weather on the fishing grounds, the output of fresh haddock and cod has been short and prices have materially advanced. Smelts and Tommy cods are starting to arrive. Salt and pickled fish have been somewhat neglected of late, while shell fish are much in demand.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—The local demand for apples is largely supplied by farmers driving in and selling them to the stores which causes them to move slowly at the wholesale houses. Navel oranges are scarce. Dealers find difficulty in filling their orders, but they hope to be in shape to supply all orders for Christmas. Just now they are selling at about 40c a case higher. They are however of splendid quality, and will more than satisfy the Christmas trade. Florida and Mexican oranges are here, but the California navels get the preference. Grape fruit, almost like oranges, are in great demand and are rapidly becoming an article of regular daily use.

VEGETABLES—The potato market is steady with no change from last week. Celery from our Canadian growers is making a good showing.

Imported vegetables are beginning to occupy important positions on our market again, as lettuce, beets, and even new potatoes from Bermuda. With our potatoes at from 60 to 65c a bag at this time of the year when they are at their very best, we get some idea of what people will do when they pay $1 a peck for new potatoes, 25c for a cucumber, 25c for a lb. of tomatoes, etc. Next week will show the largest variety of vegetables and fruit ever shown in Toronto for the Christmas trade.

TO USE CO-OPERATION.

Fruit growers in the vicinity of Nelson, B.C., met last week and organized a committee to form an association for the purposes of co-operation in marketing fruit, and in purchasing boxes, fertilizers and other necessary supplies for the cultivation and packing of fruit. The details of the organization will be carefully worked out, and to secure as many members as possible, a canvass will be made of the district.

DECREASE IN SALMON TRADE.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 14.—At the meeting of the Board of Trade on Tuesday evening, R. H. Alexander, who was the delegate from here to the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, in Sydney, Australia, reported the canned salmon trade was rapidly disappearing, so far as New Zealand was concerned. While in the Antipodes, he noticed that a large business was being done in canned herring from the Old Country, and he could not see why a good trade along this line could not be worked up from British Columbia. The market was close at hand, the demand was already established and there were large quantities of herring here to be caught. He made the suggestion that the plants of the salmon canneries might be used for the packing of herring.

Many Maritime Potatoes are Spoiled by the Rot

But for that this Year's Production Would Have Been Record-Breaker—Large Quantities go to Cuban Market—Some Dealers Think Spring Will Show Shortage.

Special Correspondence

Halifax, N.S., Dec. 15.—The potato situation in the Maritime Provinces, even at this late date, is somewhat uncertain. The crop in New Brunswick is not as large as usual and the quality is below the average. The stock that has been sold here is turning out poorly, and the dealers are greatly disappointed. Large quantities of New Brunswick potatoes are sold here every season and they command a higher price than the local grown or P. E. Island stock. The imports of potatoes from Prince Edward Island this season are below those of last year. Various causes are assigned. Some of the dealers say that the crop is short, while others claim that so many of the potatoes are affected with dry rot that they are unfit to market. Despite these rumors, however, the quality of the potatoes now offered for sale ex-vessel at the wharves is fairly good. The consumers here prefer the blue calico, and those offering find a ready sale. The demand, however, is not as heavy as usual. The dealers are not laying in as large stocks as last season, owing to the uncertainty of the keeping quality of the stock. The price quoted is 35 cents per bushel.

Nova Scotia potatoes are in good demand and all the stock marketed finds a ready sale. The quality of the potatoes is good, but there is the same uncertainty regarding the keeping of them for any length of time. They are quoted at 50 cents per bushel. The higher price, however, causes many to take their chances with the Island stock. Nova Scotia still sends large quantities to the Havana market and large shipments are being made to the southern climate this season. Some of the shipments have totaled ten thousand barrels. Good prices are obtained for the stock. There is a general feeling here that before the spring comes around there will be a shortage of potatoes, and that they will command high prices.

CUBA A GOOD MARKET.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 15.—Despite the fact that potatoes have been shipped from New Brunswick at the rate of over 10,000 barrels per month since the first of September, there still seems to be a plentiful supply available for export. Shippers who are in close touch with the farmers report that there are at least 50,000 barrels yet in the hands of the farmers, over and above what will be needed for home consumption.

Shipments from New Brunswick this season have been confined almost wholly to the West Indies, where the Cuban market alone requires 450,000 barrels. The establishment of potato warehouses by the New Brunswick Government, at St. John and Havana, has contributed largely to the increase in the exports in the tubers. The shipments in November totaled 20,000 barrels, worth in the Cuban market $40,000.

Early in the season it was expected that this year's crop would be the greatest ever, but heavy rains had a detrimental effect and a large portion of the crop has rotted. Shipments received in St. John for forwarding to the West Indies have to be sorted over and from 5 to 10 barrels in a hundred are found to be bad. The ruling price is now $1 per barrel of 180 lbs., f.o.b., at the shipping point.

BIG DISPLAY NEXT WEEK.

The fruit and vegetable dealers of Toronto, are making elaborate preparation for the most extensive fruit and vegetable display for the Christmas trade ever seen in that city. They are determined to have on hand samples of almost everything the world produces, at any cost. They will have strawberries, fresh fruit and vegetables, picked fresh from the gardens of the sunny south, and delivered here for the Christmas festivities. This is a unique attempt and the enterprising dealers deserve credit for trying to show the people how the products of the earth, where they ripen every day in the year, can be brought in good shape from summer to winter climates.

D. C. T. A. BANQUET.

Capt. J. E. Bernier has accepted an invitation to attend the annual banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association in Montreal, on Monday next. Other speakers include Sir Frederick Borden, R. L. Borden, Henri Bourassa, F. Robertson, Hon. Frank Oliver, and W. Cauldwell.

A last call is being sent out by the executive, requesting travelers generally to attend.

An official of a large British fish company states that London, Eng., consumes between twenty and thirty millions of oysters every year. He states that out of the large number of consumers in that city only two known cases of illness can be attributed to oysters. The discussion arose over the fact that a hotel-keeper was fined because one of his guests became ill with typhoid fever, the alleged cause being diseased oysters. Critics claim that no trouble can arise from bad oysters if the bivalves are only allowed to be taken from beds certified to be strictly sanitary.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

Leonard Bros., Montreal, have issued a comprehensive advent price list, in which are quoted all varieties of fish and oysters. It is being distributed to responsible dealers free of charge.

Alderman A. J. Carson, Haileybury, Ont., has moved into his new grocery store in the Post Office block, which has recently been completed on the west side of Ferguson Avenue. The building is one of the finest of the new blocks to have been erected in Haileybury this year.

Friend Retailer—

You have heard the story of the insurance agent that insured the merchant's stock, building and fixtures, and then went outside, stopped to take a look through the plate glass window at the advertising design, and then went away contented.

But that plate glass was not insured. He looked too far.

You are probably doing the same. You wonder why your sales do not increase as you would expect. You overlook "BEACON BRAND" HADDIES AND OYSTERS as a business building line. Oysters sealed at the Coast and haddies cured by our Scotch experts.

To Maintain and Increase Permanent Trade

We handle only articles of known worth—the tried and tested kind—articles whose intrinsic merit has raised them far above the commonplace. We do this because we like to feel that the folks who buy them are, year after year, adding permanent trade to the business of the grocer who sells the goods. From our own selfish point of view we believe the principle applies with telling force.

We Know of No Safer or Surer Way

There is a good living profit on every article we are privileged to represent—each of its kind is, to our way of thinking, a splendid example of honorable manufacture. And because of that important fact, we advertise their strong features fearlessly, over our own name, in The Canadian Grocer and elsewhere, every week of the year.

An additional $1 worth of goods to each of Grocer's 7,000 readers:

If 7,000 of the best grocers in Canada held a meeting every week at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg or some other point, what would a manufacturer pay for the privilege of giving them a series of talks about his goods?

If this manufacturer was able to demonstrate the solid worth of his product, and show that it paid the dealers a fair profit, could he induce each one of them to buy an additional $1 worth of it in a year?

$1 worth of any manufacturer's goods would make a pretty small parcel. Yet multiply that quantity by the number of dealers and you find that it means $7,000.

There is only one way in which a manufacturer can address the 7,000 leading buyers of grocery lines every week. That is through The Canadian Grocer.

If he approaches his talks in this paper as carefully as if he were actually addressing a meeting of these buyers—says something worth while—do you mean to say that he could not make it worth many times what it costs?

A space this size costs $425 for 52 weeks, which means that a manufacturer using it could talk to about 10 good buyers for every cent expended. The value of the space to him would depend entirely upon what he said in it.

Planning a Building to Get Low Insurance Rate

Why Architects Should Confer With Competent Insurance Men — Instances Where Savings Well Worth While Have Been Brought About—Avoid Carelessness in the Store—Watch Negligent Tenant.

When a merchant or manufacturer, at an expenditure of $500, reduces his fire insurance rate by 28 cents on every $100 of his $30,000 policy, he has all of the elements of a good investment if he will only look at it that way.

"There are many business men who feel that, to investigate their own interests in the matter of insurance, is only courting additional expense," said an insurance man to The Canadian Grocer. "It is easy for them to ascertain that such an attitude is certainly not to their advantage.

"The same may be said of the insurance man who considers that conditions which maintain high premiums are the more desirable. The agent who knows his business, that his people are getting good value for their money, that they are fully aware of the weak spots in their risks and what they must do to improve them. The agent who takes the greatest interest with the object of bringing about improvement of risks where possible, even though premiums may thus be reduced, and not be afraid of competition. He will show the business man that significance of the good and bad risks, not only in their individual application, but also to the community—from an insurance standpoint."

The Agent's Duty.

The above statement coming from an insurance man is important, since it indicates that it should be the agent's duty to afford the insured every facility in posting himself upon details of his risk and rate.

Inquiry by this paper goes to show that there is greater investigation in this matter at present than ever before. In some of the larger towns and cities considerable reduction in rates have been brought about as the result of conference between insurer and insured. In every case reductions in rates have followed recommended changes, and these have always made for improvement in premises.

One instance in particular may be cited. Prior to changes a merchant had a rate of 93 cents. He figured that this was rather high and consulted an insurance agent. The building was inspected. It was recommended, as a result, that his freight elevators and stairs be properly enclosed, and the entrance to cellar protected. He had this done and his rate dropped from 93 to 72 cents. Then he installed pails and a stove-pipe and roof hydrant, and his rate fell to 65 cents, or a saving of 28 cents on every hundred dollars' worth of insurance. This, considered in its proper relation to outlay, was well worth while. There are many such instances.

One thing should always be borne in mind by merchants or manufacturers when about to remodel their old premises or build anew. Plans should be submitted to a competent insurance man in order that the essentials of low insurance rates be not overlooked. Too often is it the case that after a fine building has been completed, the owner has found that he has not done himself justice in this particular.

In striking the rate, the insurance man figures upon merits and demerits as compared with requirements in a standard building. This is one having walls of brick or stone (brick preferred) not less than 12 inches thick (one and one-half bricks) at top storey, 16 inches if stone, extending through, and 12 inches above roof in parapet, coped, on all sides, and increasing four inches (one-half brick) in thickness for each storey below to the ground, or of an equivalent average thickness, the increased thickness to be utilized for beam ledges, or wall corbelled to provide same.

Elevators and stairways cut off by brick walls, or by concrete plaster on metallic studs and metallic lathing, continued from basement up through roof, communication at each floor protected with approved tin-covered doors or metal doors with wire glass if lighting is necessary; sills to be incombustible, skylight over elevator to be of thin glass with approved wire guard over; all weights, cables and other elevator connections except motor to be enclosed in elevator shaft; skylights not permitted unless of wired glass set in metal frames; floor lights to be not less than ¾ of an inch thick; windows and doors on front, sides or rear of building, when exposed, to be protected by approved tin covered doors and shutters (shutters must be arranged that they can be opened from outside), or wired glass in metal frame, or a water curtain. Windows are exposed when within 100 feet of another building.

Heating by hot water or steam at low pressure.

Lighting by gas with rigid fixtures.

Interior finish, open, or lath and plaster, or metal.

Wood or other combustible finish prohibited.

Where departure has to be made from these requirements, the builder will not be safeguarding his own interests if he fails to ascertain the best possible substitute.

Negligent Tenant.

Owners of leased buildings should see to it that their tenants understand the penalties which attach to carelessness in disposing of refuse. Not long ago a serious fire started in a large clothing establishment in Toronto. The inspector visited the place, and there was no way to account for the blaze; it was finally attributed to a live wire. This is a somewhat uncontrollable thing, but in an adjoining room the inspector found a pile of stove ashes. The tenant had no explanation. He had been too lazy or too busy to cast the stuff out and what the inspector said to him was a shame. While the cause of one blaze was undiscoverable, that which might have brought the fire to the scene again at any time, was found in another part. It is carelessness which makes much of the protective equipment necessary.

Regular inspection of his building by the merchant is a good plan by which to safeguard against negligence of employes. Back yards, bottoms of elevators, cellars, window recesses, dark corners, combustible materials left unprotected—all of these things and scores of others must come under the managerial eye. Warning notices should be posted up where necessary. Little things may easily make big totals in the insurance account.

SUGAR USED AS A LURE.

John Lyle, London sugar refiner, was in America last week and in connection with sugar in England is quoted as saying: "The refiners are doing better than they were a few years ago, as under the present Brussels Sugar Convention the trade has been steadied and we have a better chance of living without having to meet the competition of bounty-fed sugar. The Greenock, Liverpool and London refineries are supplying the British home demand, which amounts to eighty pounds per capita yearly, reckoning up the consumption of sugar in every form of manufacture. There is a growing desire for the crystal and white sugars and diminishing use of the yellow sugars, though these have a taste favored by large portions of the population. As is the case over here, the grocer treats sugar as an article on which he expects little profit. He gets that from tea, currants or other articles, while sugar is used as a lure with cheap prices."

The death of Andrew J. Stewart, founder of the A. J. Stewart Co., manufacturing confectioners, occurred at Owen Sound, last week.

Need of Giving Information in Writing Ad. Copy

Something Should be Included to Gain the "Point of Contact" of the Prospective Buyer—The Good Points in the Accompanying Ads. and Suggestions for Improvements—The Quoting of Prices a Good Feature.

By Jas. Thompson.

While many improvements have been made by retail grocers in writing copy for their newspaper advertisements, there is plenty of room for a great many to produce better results. This will be seen from the accompanying cuts of ads., which have appeared in Canadian papers. Some of them have been written with care and with the thought of the best possible results in mind, but the same can scarcely be said of the others.

The A. D. Ingraham ad. has been reduced from a space 5 inches by 4 inches in dimension, which it occupied in the two places. A talk calling attention to the fact that the holiday season was here would strengthen the ad.

Kirkup & Wilkie are a Fort William firm and are good writers of ad.-copy. Their talk in the accompanying cut is a splendid one, but the whole ad. might have been improved, if the attention of the reader had been called to some definite grocery article or two with prices given.

Corey's ad. from the Brantford Expositor, lacks "sociability." There is Both A. L. Campbell and Robson are Lindsay, Ont., grocers whose ads. appeared in the Daily Warder. The former is nicely set up, with splendid talks and may be considered a well-written ad. A few prices might have made it more effective.

The oyster ad. of Robson's is good. The information such as conveyed by explaining what "drunk" oysters are is something that enlightens the reader and makes her more intelligent in her purchasing, and hence in the discharge of her household duties. She feels that she has improved her mind and will feel disposed to patronize a grocer who knows something about the goods he sells.

EXPORT NEWS.

It would be a very good idea, according to G. A. Harris, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Yokohama, Japan, if the manufacturers of flour, pulp, con-

Reproductions of Seven Grocery Advertisements taken from Canadian Newspapers

Sydney, C.B., Post. While the ad. has some good features about it, such as the quoting of prices, and the symmetry of its make-up, the talks might have been made more convincing as: "We have just received a few lines of fresh dried fruit in advance, which will equal if not excel in quality, anything in town—and we bought them at the right prices. Here is what we offer."

The Lacroix ad. appeared in a space 2¼ x 4¼ inches in the Quebec Telegraph. The feature of it is the quoting of prices. The space used at the top for the grocer's name might have been utilized to better advantage. Since the name appears below, it is hardly necessary in hardly anything about it, to gain the "point of contact" between advertiser and prospective purchaser. Should a woman enter a grocery store and ask about nuts, the good salesman will not likely say: "Almonds, 15c; walnuts, 15c, etc.," but rather something like this: "We have some splendid fresh almonds with which we are sure you will be pleased, at 15c per lb." He thus gains the interest of the purchaser and she is much more likely to buy, especially if she can purchase almonds somewhere else at the same price or a little cheaper. The same may be said of the R. A. Dutton ad. although the latter lacks the price quotations.

densed milk and any other small article that would be salable there, would send samples and prices to that office. In a great many cases, while the Japanese people prefer Canadian goods, they are obliged to take other lines, as there is no one there who can furnish them with samples and prices. As a general rule, when they wish to purchase these articles the order is placed at once. They cannot wait for further correspondence with manufacturers or until the agent writes to Canada.

If these prices and samples were available in the office at Yokohama more business could be done between the two countries.

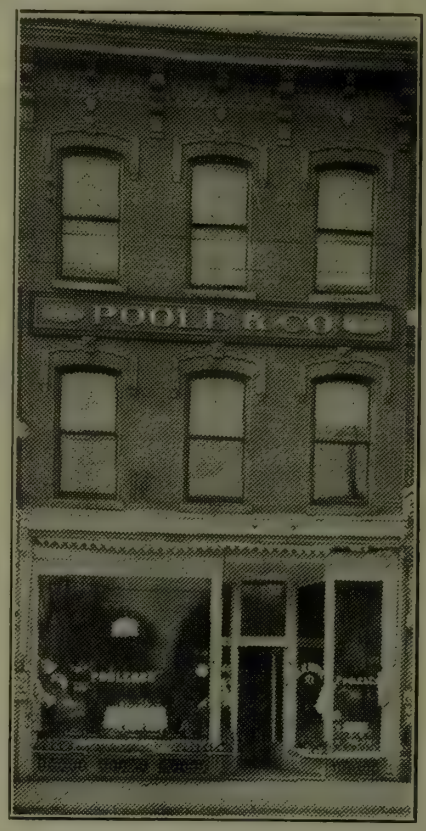
Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Merchants Making Use of Circulars to Sell Christmas Goods—A window Floor Made of Tile—Western Merchant Doesn't Like too Much Buying on Instalment Plan—Woodstock Grocer Believes in Attractive Store Fronts.

Christmas Circular Brings Trade.

Port Hope, Ont., Dec. 22.—McKenny's Grocery got out a Christmas season circular in November, which the proprietor found to be exceedingly valuable. The circular was placed in every home in Port Hope and improved the business greatly. While it might have been set up in the printing office a little more attractively, the talks given were splendid.

At the head of the page were the words: "Good, Better, Best," and in the next two lines, "We never let it rest until our good is better and our better best. Quality right, price right and our service right at McKenny's Grocery." On one side of the list of goods with their prices in a narrow column are the following talks: "The Christmas store now at its best—the wise and considerate are doing their Christmas shopping now—Are you among them?—Our stock is full, fresh and complete," and on the opposite side the words: "See our window this week—goods are sold at this store for what they are and at the value their quality justifies."



Handsome Christmas Circular.

Vernon, B.C., Dec. 1.—In order to attract Christmas buyers to his store, W. R. Megaw, general merchant here, got out a handsome four-leaf circular nicely illustrated in red and green, particularly the front page. This has a pretty wreath of holly half-way around and a cut of a little girl reaching up to a shelf on which is Christmas turkey. The paper used is fine linen, making the appearance all the more attractive. The two inner pages are taken up in giving the store news regarding groceries, oysters, fruits, confectionery, fancy china, etc. The introductory paragraph reads:—"Once again we are ready for the holiday season with the choicest range of fancy groceries the world's markets had to offer. When you see this selection you will appreciate our good luck in securing that class of goods particular people want. Everything for the puddings, pies and cake, and the dining table, is here in great variety. Everything of the highest quality, choice, clean and fresh, and you will find our prices right. Your orders will receive prompt and careful attention whether you call in person, telephone or write."

An Attractive Store Front.

Woodstock, Ont., Dec. 22.—The aggregate grocery trade of Woodstock is not as large as it was a few years ago, but the business of Poole & Co. increases steadily. This is pretty good evidence that Mr. Poole is a shrewd and successful merchant. He is a man still on the sunny side of life's peak, vigorous and progressive. The store staff consists of seven clerks in addition to the office staff and there are two delivery wagons.

Mr. Poole does not conduct a school for grocers, but it is one of his characteristics that he is a keen judge of men and boys and some of the most capable young grocers in Ontario received their training in his store. One of the brightest of them is his present head clerk.

Jas. McCallum. The accompanying picture shows the front of the store building. In addition to groceries, Poole & Co. conduct a crockery and china business that is quite as successful in its way as the grocery.

Buying on Instalment Plan.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Dec. 22.—"It does not pay to lay out too much every week on the instalment plan," remarked a grocer the other day. "Many retailers buy most of their fixtures in this way, and think they save by so doing. To begin with they pay a fancy price for any articles bought in this way. If they would stop to think, it would be very evident that the man who allows long time payments cannot sell as cheaply as the one who sells for cash or on 30-day credit. Ten dollars a week here, another there, and a third somewhere else means a heavy weekly drain that is sure to tell in the end."

Window Floored With Tile.

Dundas, Ont., Dec. 22.—R. Clark having recently purchased the residence of the late Dr. Howard, has had it remodelled, making a comfortable dwelling house and a convenient grocery store. The show windows are fine in appearance, the floors being of tile, laid in cement, in which there will be a fountain spray, where all kinds of vegetables will be kept fresh and clean. The entrance will not be finished for a while, but will be made with inlaid mosaics, when the weather will permit. The interior is handsomely finished, and the fixtures made to order, are up-to-date.

Dresed in Holiday Garb.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 22.—The retail groceries are now all resplendent with fancy paper draperies and greening and Christmas chinaware and crockery, fancy confectionery, fruits and nuts occupy conspicuous positions. Many of the window displays are tastefully arranged with these goods.

Central Delivery at Leamington.

Leamington, Ont., Dec 22.—Though the fact is not generally known, Leamington has for upwards of a decade possessed a general delivery system, similar in some respects to those which have of late received considerable notice through the columns of The Canadian Grocer. The main difference is that the local system is a privately owned one, instead of being co-operative.

The system was inaugurated on April 17, 1899, by Charles Scratch. When he started he delivered for two stores and had one rig. At the time of disposing of his business a few days ago to Wm. Kewen, of Blenheim, he delivered for all the concerns in town, but two, and had three rigs constantly employed.

Mr. Scratch's rigs started on their rounds at 8 a.m., and continued often till 11 o'clock at night. Each of the merchants paid a small sum weekly. The scheme has been very successful, and though the number of articles delivered has run away up into the tens of thousands, few errors have been made.

Curiosities in Windows.

Chatham, Dec. 22.—There is no window display, no matter how attractively devised, that can draw such a crowd as one live animal or a curiosity. This fact has been demonstrated here time and again.

Some time ago a merchant who put on a stock food display put in the window a hen and a brood of newly hatched chickens. From dawn till dark and away into the night, there were always people congregated in front of the window watching the chickens. A recent hunting display in which a couple of Belgian hares figured, produced similar results.

Quite a number of merchants make a practice of putting in their windows, articles in the curio line. A big potato, an old military medal, an ancient book, or something of a similar nature will often find a small corner in a window, and will excite an amount of attention which would never have been given to the real window display, but which helps to bring the latter before the public. One merchant here invariably shows the latest work of a local artist, who possesses national prominence; and these paintings always have one or two admirers looking at them.

While there is no immediate profit in the showing of articles of this sort, which usually have nothing whatever to do with the business carried on inside the store, nevertheless, they help to attract attention to the business itself. Of course, discretion should be used in the exhibition of curios. The skull of some bygone Indian chief does not, for instance, add to the attractiveness of a grocery window.

Another General Delivery.

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 22.—A local carter has decided to inaugurate a central delivery system in Lindsay, and it is understood that a number of grocers are included on his list. It is his intention to make three trips a day to various parts of the town and the whole delivery system will be along lines similar to those in force in the town of St. Mary's. It is expected that this will prove beneficial to those who will have their parcels delivered.

Politeness in Telephoning.

Montreal. Dec. 21.—In talking over some of the best methods of holding customers with Murphy Bros.' manager of their St. James Street store, he said he knew of no quicker way to lose one than to be impolite over the phone. Instructions to their clerks on this matter were very explicit. No impoliteness would be tolerated, no matter what the provocation.

Sells Only Two Kinds of Tea.

Hartford, Ont., Dec. 14.—Only two kinds of tea are sold by R. J. Thomas, of this village. He handles his own bulk tea at 30 cents per pound and a good package tea. Mr. Thomas regularly publishes a circular in his own establishment, and advertises his teas to the public.

Gave a Convincing Talk.

Peterboro, Ont., Dec. 22.—The following reader, advertising the goods of J. M. Donovan, a local grocer, ran in the newspaper here and, according to the proprietor, brought good results:—

STOP IT!

You're grumbling about the scarity of eggs and the inferior quality of butter. I have all the eggs you want, and as for butter, well, there's no better in the city. I can give you a fine butter for 25c. a lb. Phone 652, or better still, call around to the Collegiate grocery, corner of Aylmer and McDonnel and be convinced that fresh eggs and good butter is not as dear and scarce as you think. We have many other toothsome dainties for the Christmas trade. Pure raw sugar for your Christmas cake, and all goods in this store will be found to be of first class quality and at prices you can't complain of, and where you will find courteous clerks and prompt attention shown to all.

While opportune I wish to thank my many customers for steadily patronizing me during the past year, and also those who have in the least given me a share of their trade. I wish each and all of you a merry and joyful Christmas and many returns from the incoming 1910.—Yours truly,

J. M. Donovan.

The talk given by Mr. Donovan on butter, eggs, etc., is a good one and because of its convincing characteristic it sold the goods.

The Whistling Salesman.

Richmond, Que., Dec. 21.—Referring to the question as to how salesmen should act in the store, a Richmond grocer did not believe that they should go about whistling.

"If you have ever allowed it," he remarked, "you may have noticed the peculiar expression of a sensitive lady, who hears the operatic performance in A flat of some musically minded clerk. It doesn't do any good, and may do considerable harm."

A Tea House Window.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 21.—A rather novel display has occupied one of the windows of the local branch of Bradley & Sons, during the past week, and has attracted much notice. It is a tea house, the entire house being constructed of packets of tea. The house itself is aoout six feet in height and occupies the larger part of the show window. It has gable roof, and two chimneys, together with spaces to represent doors (with steps leading up to them) and windows, the latter having mica instead of glass and being draped inside with miniature curtains. At the rear, the window is walled off to a height of a foot or more with tea packets, while the lawn about the house is represented by loose tea leaves, green tea representing the lawn itself, while walks leading up to front and side doors are marked off with black tea. A couple of potted ferns represent trees. At night an incandescent light suspended inside the house adds immensely to its home-like aspect. A small doll sits in the front doorway.

Put Yourself in Customer's Place.

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 21.—"Do you know what I find the great difficulty in preparing attractive advertising?" remarked a grocer the other day. "It is, that I cannot, honestly cannot, feel sure that the advertisement which appeals to me as convincing, will appeal in the same way to the man who reads it. The only remedy I find is to put myself, mentally, in my customer's place; and that is why, when things are a bit quiet, I like to get out among the people and talk groceries to them—or rather, lead them to talk groceries to me."

This point is one which the seller should bear in mind. When he is writing an advertisement or designing a show window, he should try to imagine how his words will appeal to the newspaper reader or the chance passerby.

No fact is oftener lost sight of than that the buyer of goods approaches the act of transacting business in a different frame of mind from the seller. The customer's point of view is by no means the same as that of the merchant. The latter is familiar with the good points of his store and his stock. He forgets that to a majority of the public these good points are still news. Things which he never thinks of, which familiarity leads him to suppose the man in the street is taking for granted, will be entirely new to the latter. Hence, just because he thinks that his customer is familiar with them, the merchant often fails to make use of what would prove his most convincing arguments. Further, the argument which to the grocer's trained mind would be convincing might in all likelihood repel the purchaser. Such is known to have been the case.

Thus it will pay every merchant to spend a little time in looking at his business from the customer's point of view. His advertisements will probably be more appealing, his window displays more effective, and his whole store management may undergo radical changes as a result.

Commercial Travelers Make Merry

TREAS. MAX MURDOCK.
One of the Busy Men at the Banquet.

Montreal, Dec. 22.—Three hundred and fifty travelers gave themselves up to the enjoyment of "annual banquet night" at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on Monday evening, Dec. 20th. Loyal members of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, were they, members of a society which in these days is growing as fast as the population of the Northwest. Acting chairman vice-president J. Bevans Giles, in his remarks, called attention to the 400 new members who had joined during the year—and he never turned a hair in making the statement—and those who know him will understand why he did not. Friend Giles simply has to be economical in some things.

But it was a grand night, with a supplementary grand morning, and no one felt that there could have been greater bliss provided.

President Was Ill.

Only one damper was cast on the enjoyment of the evening, and that was the absence of the president, S. J. Mathewson, who, at the last moment, was taken ill, and ordered to bed. He was greatly missed, for his humorous remarks the previous year, and his witty introductions of various speakers made a name for him as a chairman and toastmaster a year ago. Numerous expressions of regret were heard on all sides.

To get down to a report of actual proceedings, perhaps it would be well to describe the geographical lay out of the Red Dining room of the Windsor, and its occupants, and to trace the source of the streams of eloquence usually called "flow of soul" by enterprising newspapermen who have been taking care of other flows—and not ice water floes at that.

As previously inferred, Bev. Giles acted as chairman, being in the central seat of the guests' table. He was bounded on the north and the south by Bordens, Sir Frederick on the right and R. L. on the left, while to the east, in front of him, he beheld the "flower of the association," seated in groups of six and eight at tables whereon were served the viands and pictures of our old friend Cap. Bernier. To the rear of the worthy chairman was located the door provided for the escape of innocent spectators in the event of the political nature of speeches delivered arousing the fighting blood of muscular followers of our parliamentary leaders on both sides of the House. This wise precaution on the part of the Dinner Committee is to be commended.

Max and the Explorer.

It appeared, after a casual glance around, as if that tireless worker Max.

BRUNO TRUDEL,
One of The Directors of The Association

Murdock, the treasurer, was rusticating in the refreshment parlor in the basement, but a second look disclosed him seated next to Captain Bernier, whom he was endeavoring to influence for some purpose or other. Some stated that he wished the Captain to organize a branch of the Association in the Artic circles, but those who best knew the treasurer were convinced that he simply desired to have Bernier join the St. James Literary Society.

As for Bill Egan, we didn't exactly lose him, for we could always see him towering head and shoulders above everyone, but it was almost impossible to talk to him. He was very busy, with the accent on the very. Where he sat during the greater part of the evening no one knew. He was seen occasionally to whisper advice to R. L. Borden, whose speech was, as a result, a masterpiece.

Missionary Life.

Sir Frederick Borden, the first speaker, sent everybody into the seventh heaven of delight, made every man present feel he had wings sprouting, by stating as his opinion of the commercial traveler, in a few words, that he was the ideal missionary. He tumbled his listeners from the seventh floor, and caused the wings to "ingrow," however, in the next breath, explaining that he referred to trade when he applied the term missionary. The compliment was accepted with thanks, however, inasmuch as its truth was recognized. Proceeding, he called the traveling man a disseminator of ideas, which was further gospel, for the average commercial man of to-day is a man of higher intelligence and broader ideas than most other average men following a different trail to the grave. Sir Frederick told his listeners something about the policy of the Government in the matter of defence, and everyone was greatly interested, for no more patriotic Canadian exists than the traveling man who has been over the Dominion and recognizes what a magnificent country we have.

Lead the Boosters.

Hon. Frank Oliver told the boys that they were the only true and ever-existing optimists. Their spirit of optimism, he said, had done as much as anything else to build up the west. He claimed credit for the west for the origin of the expression in vogue in that portion of Canada, "It's cold, but you don't feel it."

Hon. Jacques Bureau put in, among other things, a good word for the hotels in Three Rivers. There are some good ones there now. Hon. Jacques did not say that the spectacular fire in Three Rivers several months ago was arranged with a view to securing for Three Rivers more than one first-class hotel. Doubtless this, though, was in his mind. The boys who cover Quebec Province are not sorry that there are now more good hotels in the little city.

R. L. Borden, the Conservative leader, was given the glad hand when he arose. He knows about as well as any speaker how to tell a lot of men what fine fellows they are, without saying it in just those words. His address was interesting and well received.

Cheer up the Weary.

F. D. Monk was given a reception which proved that he was also considered a good fellow. He remarked that he had frequently run across traveling salesmen in his own journeyings, and they had cheered him and encouraged him in his work. One does need and appreciates some cheer and encouragement when those "dry" towns are encountered when navigating the stormy political sea. Travelers certainly are a man's best friends.

Max Murdock found time, despite his many self-imposed duties, to propose the toast, "Our Guests." He did it nobly and well. Judge Lafontaine, Ald. Carter, R. C. Smith, Henri Bourassa and Captain Bernier responded. His Lordship referred to the excellent system of technical education being introduced in Quebec Province. R. C. Smith made a stirring and patriotic speech. Ald. Carter, who represented the Mayor, and who has been doing great work toward securing the enactment of a by-law for the early closing of saloons, made a neat address.

Of Henri Bourassa we cannot say too many nice things, since he is soon to be confrere, through the establishment of a new daily paper. But he made a speech in which he said much, and gave his auditors what he called the French-Canadian side of the Defence question.

The Gum-Drop Market.

Captain Bernier made a distinct hit. He was introduced as the greatest traveler in Canada. Becoming reminiscent he related his early struggles in the north, when he was in the "retail" business, annexing for Canada small sections of ice floes and islands of 22,000 square miles or more in extent. Latterly, as traveler, he had been doing some "wholesale" business, having taken possession of one piece of country of an area of 500,000 square miles. He cordially invited the boys to spend their week ends on Melville Island, but suggested bringing a gun along in all parties over five. Speaking of trade prospects in the north he said that there was room for great expansion in the distribution of old bonnets and gum-drops. Someone asked him about Cook, and the Captain carelessly replied, "Cook is an uncharted rock. We haven't placed a buoy on him yet."

Some of the Workers.

Everything considered, the dinner was a huge success. All praise is due to the dinner committee, of which W. J. Egan was chairman, and the following gentlemen the other members: A. J. Brown, P. H. Burns, A. Chaput, F. S. Cote, E. Daoust, J. A. Dawson, L. Decelles, J. T. Dwyer, A. M. Ellicott, J. B. Giles, H. Langelier, J. O. Laporte, D. M. Lefebvre, H. M. Levine, S. J. Mathewson, Major J. T. McBride, Max. Murdock, Luke F. Moore, F. N. Picard, Chas. Petrie, Bruno Trudel, R. C. Wilkins, I. Stuart Wotherspoon, S. Woods, John E. Wright, H. W. Wordsworth, secretary.

LUKE F. MOORE,
A Director of the D. C. T. A.

Salted Almonds.

J. O. Laporte distributed good smokes on behalf of J. M. Fortier. They were much appreciated.

Bruno Trudel, an old traveler himself, and now manager of the tea department of Chaput Fils & Cie., did his share to keep the ball a-rolling. He is a new director, and a good one. He has been associated long enough with good fellows to make him a prince of entertainers at a table.

Our friend Kusanobu was there again this year, accompanied by the genial "W. H." Halford, also a partner in the firm of Nishimura & Co. Both are the right kind.

That Maraschino Punch was great, but how the taste did linger! Ask him who knows.

A neat box of chocolates was presented to each one fortunate enough to be near the "passer-out."

A. P. Tippet, and his trusty right-hand man, of military renown, Col. Schneider, were seen in earnest conference with one politician. The inference is that Cox's gelatine will soon be used exclusively in Government circles in Ottawa.

Luke Moore was not there. He was on a trip he could not postpone. Too bad. Luke is a fine fellow, and a decided acquisition to a gathering of any kind. He is another new director of the association.

"C. W." forgot his latch key and took home a bottle opener. Hope he got in without trouble.

Charles Gurd, one of the guiding stars of the association was present, as usual. His sound advice is freely given whenever requested, and is invaluable.

MUTUAL BENEFIT OFFICERS.

Toronto, Dec. 23.—The President of the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society for the coming year is Mayor Oliver, Toronto. The annual nomination of officers took place on Saturday at St. George's Hall, Toronto. The other officers elected were vice-president, Robert Maxwell; treasurer, H. Goodman; Toronto trustees, John Gibson, R. G. Hector, C. T. Parsons, S. R. Wickett, S. M. Sterling, A. J. Tipping, Robert Forbes, John Burns, and W. T. B. Laurie. All the trustees for outside points were also elected by acclamation. Since this society was formed thirty years ago over half a million has been paid in death benefits to widows and orphans of the members.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

Quebec, Dec. 23.—The Quebec Commercial Travelers' Association held their annual meeting last Saturday. Officers were elected for the ensuing year. No changes were made, all former offices being re-elected. They are as follows:

President—Jos. Poirier.
1st Vice-Pres.—Jos Cote.
2nd Vice-President—Ovide Hamel.
2nd Vice-President—G. Van Felson.
Secretary—Arthur Tremblay.
Assistant Sec.—Almazar Richard.
Treasurer—Jules Lanonette.
Directors—G. C. Giguere, P. Tremblay, A. Morency, E. Lemieux, Louis Trepanier, George Simoneau.

The annual report showed that the finances were in a very prosperous state.

A fire in the plant of the Dominion Tobacco Co., Montreal, did damage to the extent of about $6,000, last Tuesday morning. It was covered by insurance.

C. S. McGillivray, government inspector of canneries, has been inspecting those in Quebec and the Maritimes. He finds conditions satisfactory.

HERE'S TO YOU.

The Canadian Grocer extends to its many readers a Merry Christmas and wishes them continued prosperity in the years to come.

That the past year has been one that most Canadians will look back upon with pleasure, needs no elaboration. Farmers have garnered big crops, mechanics have worked overtime and merchants generally have done a business which equals if it does not excel any previous year.

The Canadian Grocer has shared in the betterment in conditions which have been the outstanding features of the year fast drawing to a close. The advertising announcements of manufacturers, wholesalers, commission merchants, etc., have contained descriptions of many new articles and improvements, and a change has also taken place in the style of the advertisements, many firms having adopted the policy of giving educative talks, descriptive of the selling qualities of the articles illustrated. This is an advance step toward more profitable publicity. Another feature noted in the advertisements is the tendency of manufacturers and jobbers to take advantage of their trade paper's pages, in which to make special announcements regarding changes in the price of their products, as well as giving an expression of their good will at the close of a successful season.

While few circular letters would escape the waste paper basket at this season, the retail grocer will be sure to read his trade paper.

That their Christmas may be a merry one is the wish of The Canadian Grocer to every manufacturer, jobber, salesman, retailer, clerk, warehouseman and delivery boy in the Canadian trade.

HOGS MUST DECLINE.

The price of hogs at present is undoubtedly too high for the general good of the hog-raising and the packing industries in Canada. Hogs should be bought here on an expert basis as Canada cannot consume all the bacon that can be made from hogs raised in Canada.

This year exports to Great Britain have fallen off considerably as packers could not export without loss, and today the Canadian bacon sold in London is being sold at a loss.

These conditions should not exist and the cause is that packers have to pay too much for the raw material. The farmer seems to be getting all the profits, and this applies to almost everything he has to sell.

The only remedy is that bacon must go up in England or the raw material must decline in Canada.

So far as the British market is concerned there appears to be no hope. Trade over there has been bad. Large shipments of Danish killings have been made, so that agents for Canadian bacon are bound to keep selling a certain quantity. They see nothing to warrant higher prices for the time being. The majority of the agents are asking 64s for the best weights of Canadian bacon, and this is costing them from 68s to 70s. Danish is selling as low as 65s and 66s, and Siberian at 58s, all of which affects the sale and price of the Canadian product.

There seems only one way out of the difficulty—only one remedy for the placing of Canadian bacon on a sound foundation on the British market—and that is the lowering of the prices of raw material. To save the situation the price of Canadian hogs must decline.

COULDN'T AFFORD ANOTHER $5,000.

It is to be regretted that the Department of Trade and Commerce has decided to let at least another year go by before appointing a separate Trade Commissioner to New Zealand. The matter of cost appears to stand in the way. As the cost is only in the neighborhood of $5,000 a year it is rather extraordinary that it should be used as an excuse by a Government which has so often been characterized as progressive rather than otherwise.

When the present government came into office Canada had one Trade Commissioner. Since then the Trade and Commerce Department has appointed on an average more than one a year, there now being 18 in different parts of the world.

Mr. Larke, the Commissioner at Sydney, Australia, is supposed to look after New Zealand as well, but as that Island is 1,000 miles away from his permanent office it is only once in a year or two that he is able to visit the field.

Parliament has voted $50,000 for a steamship subsidy between Vancouver and New Zealand. Surely the department ought to be able to persuade the House to grant an additional $5,000.

Possibly Sir Richard Cartwright does not like to move as fast as necessity demands that he should. Last year the House voted $85,000 for the Trade Commissioner's service and the estimate this year calls for an additional $10,000, or $95,000 in all. When Sir Richard Cartwright was in opposition he was a stickler for economy. He is evidently still characterized by this quality ; in fact to an abnormal extent.

He might just as well have rounded off the sum asked for from Parliament by making it a clear $100,000. The business men of the country would have endorsed him. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association would have even applauded. They want the Commissioner.

Our trade with New Zealand is rather at a stand still. Our exports to that country have never yet totalled $1,000,000, but they have been very close to it. Last year was the best on record when we sold to the Island $996,901 worth of goods. With a live Trade Commissioner on the spot this amount would naturally be increased.

In food stuffs our chief exports to New Zealand are fish and fish products, the canned salmon exported being valued at $102,465. Breadstuffs last year only amounted to $2,128, while the year before the figures were $41,684. We sent material for giving light to the extent of 116,000 lbs. of candles valued at $8,078.

Preferential trade exists between Canada and New Zealand, and an enterprising business man would not under similar circumstances hesitate to add another salesman to his staff in order to bring more business.

Governmental departments can, like individuals, evidently be penny wise and pound foolish.

WANT BETTER FACILITIES.

It is quite evident from the communication appearing below that trade relations between the British West Indies and Canada are not what they might be. This letter was written to the Canadian Grocer by a commission merchant in Kingston, Jamaica, and tends to show that the Royal Commission was not appointed any too soon :

Editor Canadian Grocer,—"We would like to see closer relationship between this island and the Dominion of Canada, but we must confess that the methods adopted by the Canadian firms in doing their business, certainly do not tend to promote this end.

"We are in the habit of executing orders for Canadian firms on an f.o.b. basis, we insure the goods at the expense of the purchasers, advise the company in which they are insured, and we value on our clients at 10 days, at their request, but while the ships trading with the Canadian port of Halifax take 10 days after leaving this island, to reach their destination, there is considerable delay through railway accommodation and other causes for goods reaching their destinations, such as Montreal, Toronto, and other inland cities and towns, with the result that when our drafts are presented with B-L. attached, our banks are informed that the receivers refuse acceptance as the goods have not arrived.

"We maintain that we in no case guarantee the arrival of goods sold on an f.o.b. basis Jamaica, and it is one of the greatest stumbling blocks in the trade with your country. We are in the habit of shipping goods to far off Australia, Trieste, Odessa and such like places, bought on the same terms as our Canadian friends, and we have never on one occasion been told the bills have been refused acceptance because the goods have not arrived.

"We know that some of our Jamaica firms act in this manner in regard to Canadian fish stuffs, being of a perishable nature, but the articles which we ship do not come under that head, and we wish you would take this matter up and endeavor to enlighten your friends and cause discussion on the subject, so that we might have a more lucid understanding. If the dealers desire only to pay on arrival, we are quite prepared to draw at longer dates at their expense, it is simply a matter of exchange, but when we have to draw at 10 days and wait 25 for payment, it neither tends to promote business or goodfellowship."

The above are matters which should be given careful attention by the Dominion authorities, if we are to have a closer relationship between the two countries and the finding of the Royal Commission is something to be looked forward to if it is going to benefit transportation facilities and place our trade and commerce with the West Indies on a smoother foundation.

TRADE PAPER SUPPORTS FIRE INSURANCE MONOPOLY.

The Western Canada Trade Gazette, Calgary, published in the interests of the wholesale and retail trade, in its December issue gives its first two pages of reading matter to the Fire Underwriters Association, and the All-Canada Fire Insurance Federation, the two organizations which are endeavoring to amend the Insurance Act adopted by Parliament last winter in such a manner that the Canadian companies will obtain a monopoly of the fire insurance business in Canada.

In other words, the insurance companies want to force all Canadian premium payers to first offer insurance to all licensed companies without regard to the amount they decide to accept or to their record, resources or standing, and upon their own terms and conditions. What this means can be understood when it is remembered that companies transacting 88 p.c. of the fire insurance business, as reported to the Dominion Government, are bound hand and foot by the rates, rules and conditions of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, and it is manifest that the enactment of any such legislation as desired will not only develop the practical monopoly now existing, but will also strengthen and reinforce a combine, which, even as it now stands, is unique in its power and ramifications.

The Trade Gazette in publishing these articles favoring the fire underwriters, without commenting editorially or saying a word regarding the interests of the premium payers, must have done so without realizing that the interests of the manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers are on the side which will make it possible for them to get the maximum of insurance for the minimum of cost, reasonable security, of course, being assured. The Trade Gazette, in its January number, will correct its position and speak in "the interests of the wholesaler and retailer," or mercantile interests in Alberta must consider it as being published in the interests of the fire underwriters combine.

A resolution passed by the Alberta branch of the Fire Insurance Federation is published in the Trade Gazette, and it is stated that the signatures of all fire insurance men in the district are being sought for presentation to M. S. McCarthy, M.P., for Calgary and Senator Lougheed, Calgary, in order that they may present the resolution and signatures in Parliament and Senate.

The Trade Gazette, or some other concern or individual desirous of protecting the interests of wholesalers, retailers and buyers of fire insurance generally, should put in circulation a counter petition to be presented by Mr. McCarthy, M.P., and Senator Lougheed, pointing out that the interests of all premium payers are opposed to the further entrenchment of the insurance combine.

"Because of the combine," says the Committee of Premium Payers of Canada, an organization formed by representative business men in all parts of Canada, including P. Burns, one of Calgary's best known citizens, "rates are excessive and insurance required to reasonably expedite large business transactions cannot be obtained. Necessary and very desirable forms of insurance in the proper conduct of business are not procurable, and on the other hand, conditions are imposed by the Licensed Companies which are not required by other offices, and the operation of which entail additional burdens upon the Premium Payers of Canada. Other insurance than can be obtained in Canada is therefore most desirable, and in many cases, absolutely essential, and the Premium Payers want the Insurance Act to provide the means whereby the right of private contract outside of Canada, now an inalienable right of the citizen, may be carried out, and the co-incident requirements of inspection and adjustment of losses within Canada not interfered with. The Premium Payers do not wish the Insurance Act to lower the bars whereby unlicensed insurance companies would be permitted to canvass or solicit business in Canada, to advertise or open offices in the country, but they strongly protest against any legislation which will restrict their right of contract, by imposing penalties on the individuals who will perform in Canada, the acts incident to that contract, as for example, the inspection of a risk or adjustment of a loss."

The Canadian Grocer again urges manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers to write the M. P. and Senator representing their district, urging them to protect the interests of the vast number of insurance buyers. Petitions signed by the retail merchants in each town or city, or endorsed by the various Boards of Trade througnout the country should also be sent to the local M. P. and Senator for presentation when the matter comes up in the Senate after the Christmas holidays.

Any readers who desire further information as to the operations of the insurance laws as they affect premium payers can be informed by writing the secretary of the Committee of Premium Payers of Canada, 113 Board of Trade Building, Montreal.

A Plan to Eliminate the Cutting of Prices

Manufacturing Firm Devises System so That all Retailers Can Make Fair Profits on the Goods—Fixes Prices Between Wholesaler and Retailer and the Prices to Consumer—Special Label Containing the Minimum Prices Attached to Every Box.

From the Journal of Commerce.

That price-cutting is the greatest foe to the successful prosecution of the grocery trade has long been recognized by every honest and discerning student of trade ethics and economics. It not only defeats the one great principle of trade—selling merchandise at a profit—damaging the merchant who practises it, but it undermines the groundwork on which all fair competition must rest and demoralizes the reputation and standing of the goods which are made the object of the reprehensible practice.

For years there has been a strong desire on the part of both manufacturer and merchant to prevent ruinous price-cutting. The chief difficulty in the way of devising any successful plan is the much distorted and grossly misapplied argument that, when a merchant has bought and paid for goods, they are his and may be sold just as he pleases, whether it suits his competitors or the man who made them. By an unfortunate twist of logic such specious argument conforms very conveniently to the principles on which most of the conspiracy and anti-trust laws are based; wherefore most of the efforts to protect a product from the price cutter have met legal barriers which have been difficult to overcome.

The most effective and successful system yet devised appears to be the "Pacific Coast Selling Plan," and one of its most earnest champions in endeavoring to put it into operation in the Pacific States is the N. K. Fairbank Co. of Chicago. Already their efforts have been crowned with a large measure of success, and the company is understood to be preparing to apply the system to the national field as soon as certain legal elements have been clearly tested. In the hope of presenting this plan intelligently to our readers an interview was secured with J. B. McMahon, vice-president and general manager of the company, during a recent eastern visit. Mr. McMahon spoke freely as follows:

"I have no hesitation in saying that we are pleased with our experience thus far with the Pacific Coast plan, and if we find the trade disposed to reciprocate we will very likely extend it into other territories. I want it to be distinctly understood, however, that whatever we do is our own affair, and undertaken in our own behalf, and in no way as a result of any collusion with any dealers or association, or aggregation of the trade. We have long recognized that it was bad for us to have our goods cut by the trade, either wholesale or retail. When we have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in introducing a product, advertising it and giving it a reputation in the trade, our best asset is a state of trade whereby the grocers, wholesale and retail alike, can handle it with profit. Our efforts are largely in vain if we cannot have their cordial co-operation. On the ground, then, of self-protection we were interested in seeking some way to protect our goods.

Devised Their Own Plan.

"It is true that retail grocers' organizations, especially on the Pacific Coast, had struggled with this problem, but in the present movement we are merely seeking to protect our own property and reputation. We investigated the various plans which were proposed, and finally devised one for ourselves which appeared to us to meet the perplexing exigencies of the situation. Our plan has been put in operation under advice of eminent counsel in the East and West, and the progress of the work is being followed with very intent interest by our counsel and ourselves. One of the chief obstacles in devising a satisfactory plan was the fact that our goods are sold through the jobber to the retail merchant, and while we could prevent the jobber from cutting our price, thus depreciating and discrediting our product, it was not so easy in our case to arrive at a device by which we could likewise control the man to whom the jobber sold the goods and prevent him from in turn demoralizing our business, and, of course, any plan had to be a matter of agreement between individuals and ourselves rather than with grocers in combination; hence the application and operation of our plan have involved an immense amount of personal negotiation. At all events, we believe we have finally evolved a plan which has overcome all the objections to the average method.

"It was two years ago that we first attempted this plan on Cottolene. More recently the plan has been elaborated and extended to our soap products. As a result, price-cutting has been very largely diminished, and we confidently believe it is only a question of a short time before it will be practically eliminated from the trade in our specialties. This plan is now in operation in the States of California, Oregon and Washington, and a canvass of the trade shows the consensus of opinion among the retailers to be decidedly in favor of the plan. Here and there a case of wilful price-cutting creeps out, but we are making plans to attack one of these instances for a test case in court, and we will not hesitate about resorting to the courts when the time appears to be expedient for this action.

Want Commercial Success.

"The extension of the protected price system to other territories, however, depends on the retail merchants throughout the Pacific Coast territory giving a conclusive demonstration as to their ability to make a commercial success of the proposition. I have less fear about its eventual legal success than I have about its commercial success, and, of course, unless it proves to be a commercial success on the goods to which the plan applies it cannot survive; much less could it be extended to other territories under these circumstances. At the present time the plan is in operation on the Pacific Coast on our four leading specialties in that territory.

"The plan offers to the retail merchants of the Pacific Coast a great opportunity to demonstrate their capacity to get a profit, but this profit can only be retained, as I have intimated before, by sustaining and developing business in all lines on which the protected price policy is being attempted. Therefore the retail merchants have not only a grand opportunity presented to them, but in seeking and accepting this opportunity they also have incurred very serious and specific obligations, which can only be discharged by favoring and preferring at all times, and over all others the goods that are protected in price."

Deal With Incidentals.

Mr. McMahon explained the details of the operation of his company's plan on the Pacific Coast. As he indicated, the steps are all taken with individual grocers. The fundamental features of the plan are two contracts: the first between the N. K. Fairbank Company and the wholesale grocer; and the other between the wholesale grocer and the retail grocer. The wholesaler agrees that he will not cut the wholesale price, nor allow it to be cut; that he will sell only to those who will agree to maintain the retail price and obligate themselves to that effect. Each violation of this condition will render the violator (whether wholesaler or retailer) liable to the company in the sum of $50 for each violation—this sum to be construed as liquidated damages and not as a penalty—it being recognized that any such violation would result in material damage to the company, the actual amount of which it would be extremely difficult or impracticable to fix. The company may prosecute any dealer for any such breach in its own name.

Lest there still lurk some misunderstanding of these agreements (agreements in each case of an individual with the owner of the goods whose reputation and property it is sought to protect), a special label printed in white letters on a bright red background, is attached to every box of the goods sold—thus reminding the distributer, whether wholesaler or retailer, of his individual agreement with the company. This label announces the lowest retail prices that may be accepted for the goods contained in the box to which it is affixed.

"It seems to us," said Mr. McMahon, "that this plan will prove an effectual protection for everyone concerned. Thus far it has not been necessary to sue for the recovery of any damages, but, as I have said before, we shall begin an action as soon as we find it convenient, and we have no doubt as to the outcome.

"I cannot refrain from again referring to the importance of the retail merchants supporting the protected price policy; in fact, I go further than this, and insist that both wholesale and retail merchants have a common interest in the success of this principle.

"This protected price policy can only succeed on the goods of manufacturers who distribute through the wholesale grocery channels when the relations of both wholesalers and retailers are more or less harmonious in the sale of these goods. As it is our general policy to distribute through the wholesale channels, the wholesale merchant is a very important link in the chain by which the manufacturer can reach the retail price cutter, and I cannot conceive of any justifiable motive for the wholesale distributor of protected price goods not ardently supporting the principle involved and likewise favoring these goods in his distribution. In any event, the final test of the success of this proposition, in my opinion, lies in its commercial success, because I have no other fear of the final success of this proposition, by one means or another, provided the merchants who are vitally interested in securing a profit do their full duty to themselves and to the manufacturers interested. If this movement on the Pacific Coast is defeated, or should its progress be retarded by any apathy or indifference on the part of the great body of wholesale and retail merchants who are not price-cutters, it will prove a great blow to their future prosperity, because if the few manufacturers who are doing the pioneer work in this great reform should be disheartened or defeated in their work, the movement may come to an abrupt ending, and the loss for the distributors, both wholesale and retail, would be beyond recovery.

Must Give Aggressive Support.

"No failure of the protected price policy would reduce consumption, and the manufacturers could still dictate their own prices and, by creating demand, sustain their own business; but if either class of distributors wish to participate in the profits on the sale of these goods, they must support the manufacturers' policy in no uncertain or equivocal manner; their support must be cordial and aggressive.

"I am involving the wholesale grocer in this proposition because, where he distributes the goods to the retail grocer, it is important that he should avoid a policy which would dissatisfy or demoralize the retail trade. A wholesale price-cutter can injure the manufacturer's trade as well as a retail price-cutter, hence both classes of distributors must be controlled, and both should co-operate towards the same coveted end. Fortunately for the Fairbank Company, each wholesale grocer on the Pacific Coast has accepted the terms and restrictions that we have imposed on each individually, and now it only remains in this particular territory for the retail merchants to respond with an emphatic demonstration of their interest in the proposition in order to make it a commercial success.

Will Protect its Rights.

"Also, fortunately for the company, the same as all other manufacturers, the wilful, persistent price-cutters on the Pacific Coast are comparatively few in number, and if the smypathy of all other dealers—both wholesalers and retailers again included—is arrayed against this malicious and demoralizing type of merchant, his attempt to obstruct a definite price plan can be overcome successfully. About this, as I have said before, we have no fear, because, while legal precedents may still be lacking, legal resources are yet plentiful, and once the merchants of the Pacific Coast, wholesale and retail, have given a satisfactory demonstration of their sympathy with its plans, the company will not hesitate to take any judicious step that may appear advisable or necessary to establish the legality of the protected price plan as applied to its exclusive specialties.

"The Fairbank Company feels that it has acquired valuable property rights in its trade-mark specialties, and it proposes to protect these rights to whatever limit the encouragement of the general trade justifies us in going."

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

E. & T. Pink, of London, Eng., report numerous recent enquiries from Canada for strawberry jam, of which there is a present scarcity. In this connection it is of interest to note that during the season, fifty tons of strawberry jam are put down by the Pink people in a day.

Spratt's Patent Ltd., of Fenchurch Street, E.C., London, England, have issued their 1910 calendar, and are offering copies to any of their customers and customers' friends whose names are handed to them. To the lover of dogs and pets, this calendar is of especial interest. Each of the twelve sheets contains a colored plate, representing prize dogs, cage birds or poultry. The January illustration is very apropos, showing Lord Charles Beresford in a typical English garden with four celebrated bull dogs in leash. On another sheet are shown two Basset hounds, the property of Her Majesty the Queen. There is also an excellent copy of Sir Edward Landseer's "Suspense." Several sheets are devoted to Orpington fowls, game fowls, etc., while on the back of each sheet there is considerable information respecting the breed illustrated, together with hints on feeding, etc. To any readers of The Grocer, Spratt's offer to send copies direct to their customers and marked with the retailer's name, an offer which should be accepted by those who have customers amongst owners of dogs and other pets.

CALENDARS FOR 1910.

An attractive calendar has been issued by J. J. McCabe, fruit broker, Toronto. The picture is that of an Irishman using the telephone, the illustration, being embossed, making it stand out more prominently.

Green & Co., grocery commission merchants, Toronto, are sending out a very attractive calendar—an American Princess— which is being received with much favor. The same company is sending an attractive and nicely worded greeting card to customers.

ONLY A DREAM, BUT—A CHRISTMAS FANTASY

By H. D. McMullen

Christmas had come and gone. To John Craven, bachelor, it had been a season of eat, eat, and then eat again, always with some of the particular Christmas delicacies such as plum pudding, mince pie, or some similarly indigestible viands, to finish off the dinners.

On Christmas day it had been a particularly good, but indigestible meal. One of his benedict friends had extended a hospitable invitation to the lonesome one, and in the cheery home life he saw that day and evening, John became more and more envious of it all. A good cigar after dinner served to ease his ruffled feelings somewhat, but the thought kept recurring every few minutes, "why haven't I a home like this?"

Now Craven was a large wholesale grocer, who did a good deal of manufacturing in certain lines. Also he had made a great deal of money in a remarkably short time. Envious competitors said he adulterated his goods, or it would not be possible to amass the fortune he had, in the time it had taken. John would only say that he was no worse than the others, only a little more successful perhaps. At any rate he had the money, whether by questionable methods or not.

About eleven o'clock John decided that Christmas was about over for him and wended his way to his flat. It seemed to him that he had not been in bed more than a few minutes at the most, when he became aware that he was not alone in the room. As his eyes became more accustomed to the light he made out several strange looking figures moving about. They seemed to be in groups, each with one who seemed to be a leader, followed by a crowd of fantastic, misshapen individuals who all seemed to be in serious trouble of some kind.

That there was anything strange about the scene did not at first strike Craven, but finally curiosity impelled him to call, "who are you?" One of the largest figures left the rest and came toward the bed. To John, it was the most peculiar looking creature that he had ever seen. The head was large and almost round; the skin dark chocolate in color. There seemed to be very little body, while legs and arms were mere spindles.

"You don't seem to recognize your acquaintances," said the creature.

"I certainly haven't ever seen you before, to my knowledge," replied Craven.

"That is very possible," was the answer. "However you know me only too well. Haven't you ever eaten plum pudding?"

Craven immediately became interested. It was his first speaking acquaintance with any of his Christmas dinner "victims."

"What is your trouble?" asked Craven.

"This is a delegation from the poor, mained, adulterated products of your store. We want to see if the tale of our troubles will not have some beneficial effect on your future treatment of us. We have, as you can see, suffered extremely from your past crimes. For instance, take my poor friend, Pepper, here. His eyes are so full of dust and ground shells that he cannot see, and has to be led by my friend, Coffee. Coffee, poor fellow, is so weak on account of the chicory you have made him absorb, that he can hardly stand up alone.

"Then there is my friend, Tea. Now who would take him for a first-class specimen of his kind? Yet he is supposed to be of the half-dollar per pound variety. Just look at these poor creatures and see what your cruelty has accomplished. The current expression, "he is only half there," fits in almost every case. Yet we are put out as first-class in every respect, by your house. You should, at least, furnish an asylum for the lame, the halt, and the blind, whom you have created. Once we were full of life, and as vigorous specimens of our kind as one could wish to see.

"Speaking for myself, I have been produced from poor grade flour, sold as first-class; from poor currants, which were sold as fine filiatras, and too many other makeshifts to mention in the short time I have to put our case to you. Just think of the woe you have caused to human stomachs from the inflictions you have placed on them, not to speak of the sufferings we, your creatures, have had to undergo.

"I know your defence will be that you have made more money by it all, but what good has it done you? You suffer from indigestion, caused either by yourself, or others, as bad as you are. You have no family, because of bad temper and general inadaptibility, caused by this indigestion. Money is not everything. Happiness and a clear conscience are synonymous. Try the clear conscience after New Years and you will achieve the other. It may take more time, but it will come if you will only give it half a chance.

"I could give you tales from personal knowledge that would wring pity from a stone, much more from you, for at bottom you mean no great harm, and hardly realize what you are responsible for. Probably you do not realize that you are directly responsible for the possibility of this delegation visiting you. It was from your store that my ingredients came, and I am the direct cause of our being able to visit you as we have. You will remember you ate considerable of me at dinner to-day. Well, this is my revenge, and yet it is not entirely revenge. I only wish justice for my comrades in misfortune and myself."

During this appeal Craven had been thinking rapidly. It was true, indeed, that he suffered tortures from indigestion. It was true that he lacked a home and the happiness he had witnessed in that of his host of the day. Was it possible that, directly or indirectly, his business policy was responsible? At any rate it would do no harm to see if a difference in his future business conduct would tend toward the happiness he had envied his friend to-day. The poor creatures in front of him, lame, half blind, or distorted in some way, aroused some hidden corner of his heart to action.

"Do you really mean that happiness would result from a change in my business policy," he asked. "I can see that it is unjust in many ways to do as I have made a practice of doing, yet I can hardly see how it would alter my personal affairs to change my business policy."

"Can't you see?" answered the pudding, "that it is because of the cold-hearted treatment you have given us, and through us your customers, which has made you less susceptible to the emotions of the average man? Give yourself, as well as those whom we represent, a fair chance, and see if what I have prophesied does not take place."

There was a moment's pause, while Craven thought it over. After all, what did a change for, say a year, matter. It was worth trying, at any rate.

"Well, I will try it for next year," was his final answer. "But remember, if things are not better for me by that time I will return to the old methods."

"That is only fair," said the plum pudding. "I only ask a fair trial. We will not call on you again for one year, and possibly not then, if things are still satisfactory to you."

One year later, John Craven was talking to his wife of three months, about the change which had taken place in his life. "I lay it all to my dear friend of last Christmas—plum pudding. If it hadn't been for him, my heart would still have been in its old stony state. I never thought of others before my own interests, and as for thinking of myself as dishonest, it never entered my head. I only thought of such dishonesty as meaning more money for me. What should I care about others? It was just the change in my nature which made me attractive to you, I know, dear, and I have found, and will keep my life's happiness as long as I live. Let's drink a toast, my dear, to my best friend, plum pudding, who put me on the right track just a year ago to-night.

Concerning the Retail Salesman and His Work

What Character Does for Building up a Retail Business and Why Merchants Should be Careful in Employing Salesmen — Trade Will be Lost by Clerks Careless of Their Moral Standing.

By B. H. Thomas.

The employment of good store salesmen is something that every retail merchant is directly interested in. Merchants know that they are necessary if the business is going to grow.

Character is essential and is one of the most important factors in every successful business. The character of a business house is often judged by the character of its employes. It is, therefore, wise to secure the services of good honest, straightforward help and not be partial to friends and relatives.

The man who has succeeded in building up a good, strong, sound mind in these days of temptation is entitled to some consideration. It should be the aim of every merchant to secure the services of such men. Young men and boys who start in business at the very bottom—which is to my mind the only way to start—should remember that character will play an important part in their lives, and they should not be discouraged at the many apparent hardships which are bound to come. It is overcoming these difficulties that strengthens the mind and builds up will power.

Boys that are kept hustling, with their minds constantly occupied, are fortunate, inasmuch as they can not find time to think and do foolish things.

Hard Work Necessary.

In starting out in the mercantile business it is well to remember that it takes lots of laborious work to accomplish things, and no real success can be achieved without useful effort. Hard work helps develop character as well as brains, both of which are absolutely necessary if one is to be successful in these days of progressiveness.

After a young man has done a hard day's work he should not look for degrading recreation. All of us require good, clean recreation to enable us to perform our daily duties without looking upon them with dislike. It is surprising how little one accomplishes along any line that does not appeal to him.

Young men should not make the mistake of thinking that they are making wonderful headway in life if after their day's work in the grocery store is finished they proceed to do things that will reflect upon their moral character just because they think they will make them "big" men.

Success in the mercantile business depends largely upon the selling end of the business. If a merchant does not employ salesmen of character the reputation of the business is at stake, and if he continues to employ irresponsible salesmen he will soon discover that its business is falling off, and no matter if such a man offers the highest quality goods it is very hard to dispose of them.

When a merchant once loses his reputation it takes many years of toil and honest endeavor to regain the good will which was lost in an apparently short time. It is, therefore, of great importance in any line of business to conduct the same on such lines as to command the good will of the trade.

Proprietors and managers should not forget that it is very trying upon a salesman to sell goods for a store that has a poor standing and a poor reputation in the trade, and often the proprietors and managers are responsible for the poor standing.

One must work hard to build up character and one must also work hard to keep it, but is it not worth working for?

TO CONDENSE MILK.

Another Factory Proposed for British Columbia—Tobacco Growing Begun.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 21.—Parkinson & Archibald, who have been with F. R. Stewart & Co., for a number of years, one in the warehouse and the other in the office, have started in the wholesale fruit and vegetable business for themselves.

H. E. Almond, of the City Dairy Co., and J. L. Ahlers, manager of the Vancouver Cream Co., both of this city, are with C. Yungen, interested in the establishment of a milk condensing plant at Chilliwack. They are now looking over the ground. Chilliwack is about to have electric tram connection with Vancouver, and consequently attention of those interested in industrial plants is being directed that way. The condensing plant proposed will handle 50,000 pounds of milk per day, the capitalization being $30,000. No financial aid is asked or is looked for by the company. Speaking of the proposition, Mr. Yungen claims that the company will be able to pay five cents more per pound for milk than the creameries can afford, and this amount will repay the dairyman for the loss of the by-product of the cream, and at the same time be as much as the milk companies in the cities can afford to pay and ship it out.

As an instance of what can be done in the Okanagan, John Conlin, of Kelowna, this season sold $600 worth of tomatoes from 1½ acres of land at ¾c per pound. Owing to transportation facilities not being adequate, considerable quantities of tomatoes were never harvested. Canneries are being established in this district, and these will utilize all the product. Mr. Fleming, also of Kelowna, sold $500 worth of onions, and last year $600 worth from 1½ acres. John Casarso grew thirty tons of onions to the acre this year.

Another successful industry in the Okanagan is the growing of tobacco. L. Holman, of Kelowna, grew between 8,000 and 9,000 pounds, or about 1,000 pounds to the acre. The crop of Thompson & McTavish also promises to turn out well and will probably reach the same average, which is an exceptionally high one for Havana tobacco. The weather has been good this season, and all of the tobacco, even that which was late, is good. The total yield this year will be between 25,000 and 28,000 pounds, and next year there will be a large increase in production, now that certain markets are opening up for the leaf.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Weaker.
Coffee—Very firm.
Nutmegs—Scarce.
Walnuts—Bare market.

Montreal, Dec. 23, 1909.

Jobbers report an unprecedented rush of small orders, fillers, showing that the retailer must have been doing great things this Christmas season. The original orders showed that good business was expected, so these additional orders make it look as if our friend Santa Claus must be looking after the retail grocer in first-class shape this year. It always leaves a good taste in the mouth to have a good finish for the business of the year.

Luxuries are the order of the day just at present, but an unlooked-for feature is the way some of the staples have been holding their own. Molasses, for instance, has lost very little of its former popularity on account of Christmas.

Walnuts and citron peel are practically off the market. Dealers are looking for small lots eagerly and none have been allowed to be offered twice.

The grade of imported dried fruits, particularly raisins and currants, is not up to standard this year. It is also reported on good authority that in Greece, growers of currants are uprooting part of their vineyards, so that next year's crop will be small enough to enable them to obtain higher prices. If the Grecian Government has sanctioned it, as is stated, it seems a comparative certainty that the desired result will be obtained.

Both jobber and retailer seem well satisfied with present business and future prospects look bright for the New Year.

SUGAR—Raw sugars are weaker. No effect has been shown as yet on the retail market prices. Sales have been only fair as compared with the same week last year. Dealers and refiners expect an improvement after New Years.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—It was hardly expected by local jobbers that trade in these articles would keep up through the Christmas season as it has. There has not been such a demand for molasses at this time of year for some years past. Prices are steady, and a big trade is looked for early in January.

TEA—Tea business is good just now for any importer who has any stock to speak of, but they are few and far between. Prices remain firm and stocks held are almost negligible. Most of the jobbers are still well supplied, however, so there seems no immediate prospect of higher prices. Japans show the greatest scarcity.

COFFEE—Coffees are firm, particularly Rio and Santos, in view of the fact that the export limit set on these two lines will probably be reached before the end of January. This will mean higher prices inside the next thirty days. Prices as yet have not been affected.

SPICES—There has been an exceptional demand for some lines of spices this week, particularly nutmegs, ginger and peppers, which are always popular at this time of year. While the primary market is higher in these lines, no change has yet taken place to the retailer. Dealers report trade very good in all lines.

DRIED FRUITS—The market is bare of citron peel. A few cases which were in the hands of one of the local dealers were snapped up immediately. Valencia raisins are very scarce, and those on sale are pronounced of only mediocre quality. It is reported that the Greeks are even going to the extreme of uprooting sections of their vineyards to keep up the market for currants. The Government is said to have sanctioned the plan, and if it is followed, higher prices will be in order next year.

There are few first-class shelled walnuts on the market, and prices seem sure to go up for this line. Limited quantities of almonds are to be had, but they are rapidly being taken up. Other lines are firm, with brisk sales.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Christmas has a bad effect on the trade in both rice and tapioca, for sales have been very disap-

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Owing to the quantities of first-class frozen fish on the market, the demand for canned has dropped considerably. Meats are having a brisk sale, and there seems to be almost a daily improvement.

Toronto, Dec. 23, 1909.

Travelers are off the road this week, and although retailers sometimes get tired of them, their value in calling constantly on the trade can, to some extent, be estimated from the constant use of the long distance telephone when they are at home. Orders, although small from this source, are numerous this week. The wholesale trade on the whole has been satisfactory this fall. The most sanguine expectations have been realized, and the trade is ready to enjoy a Merry Christmas.

SUGAR—The New York market has responded to the report of the large production of raw sugar in Cuba, and is, therefore, easier, and about 10c lower. This, however, is not likely to affect our prices here, as our markets are governed more from Europe, and are not on an even footing with the United States in regard to the Cuban sugar. While the market is not lower, it is, however, not active, with the exception of icing sugar, which is in great demand this week.

DRIED FRUIT—The output of these goods was very heavy, the retailers are all pretty well stocked up, and it is up to them to get them turned over. Prices are firm, but as the rush for them is over so far as the wholesale houses are concerned, prices are not likely to change. Valencia raisins are scarce, the crop this year being estimated at 20,000 tons, or 5,000 less than last year. A London report states that only about 1,200 tons are left, and that the farmers and growers in the raisin district have sold out. Currants are also higher in the primary market.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Corrected by Wire.

POINTERS—

Advances—Peel, walnuts.
Firmer—Beans, syrup, seeded raisins, figs, nuts.
Weaker—Sugar, rolled oats.

Winnipeg, Dec. 23, 1909.

Local wholesalers were never before so scarce of goods. Many important lines are low in stock and they cannot be had. These include beans, nuts, dried fruits and canned goods. The wholesale trade has been excellent and travelers who were anxious to get into the city last week over the holiday sent in bumper orders the last few days they were in their territory. Southern Manitoba merchants have had a quiet time for a few weeks owing particularly to the severe storms and prolonged cold weather in that region of the west. The fact also that this season's crop in that part of the country was light has tended to restrict the retail trade somewhat.

Merchants throughout the west are generally well satisfied with the trade in holiday commodities. They stocked well in anticipation and they have not been disappointed. The markets continue on the strong side. The shortage of supplies has forced prices up. The dried fruit market is perhaps the most interesting in this connection.

SUGAR—Owing to recent revelations of fraud in the N. Y. sugar market the price has been reduced at several points on the continent. The market is weaker here but we cannot quote any changes. Wholesalers think prices will not go lower here but it will be interesting to watch the market for a few days.

CORN MEAL—The market has recently weakened in the west. The eastern houses have all been supplied and the remainder of the large supply in the producers' hands has been forwarded west. The quality is excellent and the following prices may not last long.

Cornmeal, per sack	2 00
" per ½ sack	1 00

ROLLED OATS—This market is again fluctuating. The milling companies are wholesaling at $2 this week while the wholesale houses are selling at the following prices and in one instance a car load was sent out at $1.85 recently.

" 20 " " 20	0 52

NUTS—The stocks are low in all lines. Walnuts are up 1 cent. There is no possibility of a weakness so long as the demand continues as it has for several weeks. Almonds may go up soon.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Following the break in the market in eastern Canada, the market has been receding here by degrees. It is a puzzle to local men why stock-holders in the east should hold up the market to the 11 cent point, when supplies were so abundant. The price to-day is 9½ cents.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Tapioca is growing firmer, the bulk of sales being on the 4¾ side this week. Rice is quite unchanged, the market is ridiculously low.

Japan rice, per 100 lbs	3 50
Pearl tapioca, per lb	0 04 0 04½

COFFEE—While quotations for both future and actual coffees show little or no change, the strength of the spot situation has created an active demand and in turn a better feeling. It is believed that coffees are good property and with the demand that naturally comes each year during the latter part of December and first half of January the tendency will be towards a higher range of values.

FRESH FRUITS AND VEGETABLES—Pumpkins, celery, radishes and cucumbers are off the market. The remaining vegetables are firmer in price. Fruits are unchanged and sales are heavy.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N. B., Dec. 23, '09

Indications are for a green Christmas in St. John. Business has been brisk right along, though there would probably be more country produce coming in if the farmers could use their sleds. Turkeys are selling at 21 and 22 cents a pound and eggs are quoted at 28 cents by the case and from 35 to 40 cents for new laid stock. Butter is selling from 24 to 26 cents a pound.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

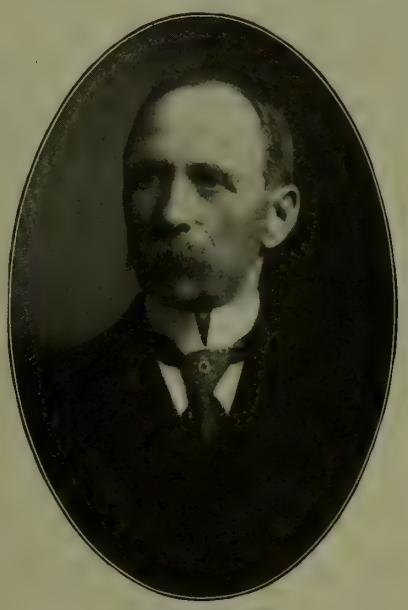
Corrected by Wire.

Halifax, Dec. 23, 1909.

Wholesale grocery dealers say that while business has been good this fall it has been especially good in the distribution of dried fruits of all kinds. This trade, however, is now about over, little being now left for the dealer to attend to except sorting up and attending to some delayed orders. Business has been satisfactory during the fall months, the difficulty at times being to find transportation. The schooners owned in the different ports along the shore, that used to come to Halifax, have almost disappeared, and their places have been filled by the coasting steamers. Occasionally in the rush of business, orders are left out, causing disappointment to the customer as well as the shipper.

Collections are much as usual, fair, but with room for improvement. Dealers say that one of the greatest drawbacks is that customers do not give the necessary attention to their drafts when falling due, and this causes constant irritation to the drawer and a loss of credit to the buyer.

Apples are still coming on the market in considerable quantities, and prices are practically unchanged from last quotations. The continued arivals of Bishop Pippins may, however, have the effect of lowering present prices somewhat. It looks as if the demand for potatoes would be heavy after Christmas, as all the stocks in the vessels in the harbor will be cleaned out during the next few days. There is nothing doing in Nova Scotia potatoes here. at present. Dealers are asking $1.50 per bbl. here while the price is reported to have declined to $1.25 in Havana.



Sales of oranges are reported to be very heavy and will continue so until after the holiday season.

A REGRETTABLE DEATH.

Donald Gunn, President of Gunns Limited, Accidentally Killed by an Automobile.

Those in the trade acquainted with the late Donald Gunn, president of Gunns, Limited, Toronto, and those who came into contact with him in a business way, learned with deep regret of his death by accident in Toronto last Sunday morning. On Saturday afternoon he was accidentally run over by an automobile on Yonge Street, and the injuries resulted in death the following morning.

DONALD GUNN,

President of Gunns' Limited, Who Died on Sunday Morning From Injuries Received in an Accident.

Deceased was born at Beaverton in 1843. He was 28 years of age when he went to Toronto, buying the business of Morse & Taylor, Front Street, produce merchants. The new firm was known as D. Gunn & Co., and under Mr. Gunn's direction the business increased steadily, expanding in Toronto, reaching out to Montreal, and rendering necessary the erection of packing houses at West Toronto and the establishment at several points throughout Ontario of tributary warehouses. Of recent years he had consigned the carrying on of the business to trusted managers, and had returned to his first love, farming. Whenever the opportunity offered he was to be found devoting himself to the development of Dun Robin stock farm, near Beaverton.

His influence with the people among whom he moved will be greatly missed and his absence from participating in agricultural development, in which he was interested, can only tend to be disadvantageous to the agricultural industry.

The funeral, which was held on Tuesday, Dec. 21st, was attended by a large number of friends of the deceased, showing the high esteem in which he was held.

TRADE NOTES.

R. E. Newton, Lethbridge, Alta., has moved to Taber where he has opened a grocery business with Mr. Jensen, of Taber.

R. A. Smith, merchant, Newmarket, Ont., was in Toronto on Wednesday. Mr. Smith is thinking of giving up his business, which he has conducted so successfully for many years. He is one of the "life-long" readers of The Canadian Grocer.

A meeting of the independent canners was held last Saturday in Toronto, but the situation remains much the same as last week. The independents are still between the two fires, as mentioned last week, but from statements of some of them the merger is viewed from a more optimistic standpoint than before.

The Ontario and Western Co-operative Fruit Co., is a new concern, with a Dominion charter, organized to deal in fruits, vegetables, grains, etc., as well as canned and preserved fruits, vegetables, etc. The head office wil be at St. Catharines, Ont., the incorporators being Mary Moylan, Isabel Suddaby, Robert Gowans, Henry Chalmers, A. M. Garden, J. F. Lash, S. G. Crowell, Wm. Bain and J. S. Lovell, all of Toronto.

THE LAST CALL.

Grocers and retail salesmen are again urged to remember the Christmas window-dressing and advertising competitions which have been fully explained in recent issues of The Canadian Grocer. The results so far have been gratifying but much more is expected the last week of the year when the rush is over and merchants have time to think about something else besides dried fruits, nuts, peels and plum puddings.

Kindly send your window photograph with a description of the window attached and also your Christmas newspaper advertisement to the editor of The Canadian Grocer, Toronto, Ont., as soon as you can. This is the last call.

Price-Cutting a Thorn in Side of London Grocers

Trouble Claimed to be Caused by a Few—Better Training Believed to be Cure for Many Ills—One Merchant Doesn't Like Idea of Running Excursions Out of Canada—Wholesalers Critized for Disallowing Cash Discounts.

Staff correspondence.

London, Ont., Dec. 22—During a visit of about ten hours in a place the size of London, one can get only a small idea of the extent and methods of the grocery trade. There are about 200 grocers, scattered over the entire city, and all have good ideas on the important matters affecting the trade. This is due principally to the fact that the London grocers have a strong association, which is most educative in its influence on the members and which has grown rapidly.

Better still, they are all loyal to their association, because they realize its beneficial results in many ways, although they may not yet have overcome the many obstacles that stand in the way.

Considerable complaint has been made about the universal trouble of price-cutting. One grocer is particularly pointed out by others as being guilty of this crime. In speaking of him, however, they all say he is a splendid fellow and is well thought of by his fellow grocers, but he has this one fault, which causes them all some trouble.

This reminds the writer of an incident that happened when he visited an uncle in the United States many years ago. While in the town where his uncle lived, the writer wandered over to a neighbor's garden to have a chat with the owner. During the conversation, which drifted—as conversations sometimes will—towards the uncle, the latter was referred to with much pride as being a relative of your humble servant.

"Is that so?" remarked the neighbor, with an expression that fairly bristled with kindness and tenderness. "Mr. —— is a very nice man, he is a real good neighbor, but he is the biggest liar I ever saw."

Some good fellows sometimes have a few faults, and if they are treated properly they will gradually and naturally grow out of them.

Advises Better Training.

"We never cut prices and never pay any attention to what others do," remarked one merchant. "A grocer that kicks sells too cheaply. I never yet saw one gain customers or make money by cutting prices. The people only go there for bargains, while we sell the goods on which we make fair profits. Grocers should have a better training, and then a good many of our troubles would disappear."

Another grocer has some good ideas regarding cleanliness. "All our clerks must wear white coats and aprons, which must be changed every day. It costs from 40 to 50 cents each man a week, but it pays. Cleanliness is the best advertisement a grocer can have."

"Our excursion last summer to Detroit was a great success, but, after all," said a third, "it seems to be a mistake to take our customers over there to spend their money. Our people are often short in paying their bills, and I begin to think that it is not the best policy to be instrumental in taking them out of the city, and especially out of our country, to spend their money."

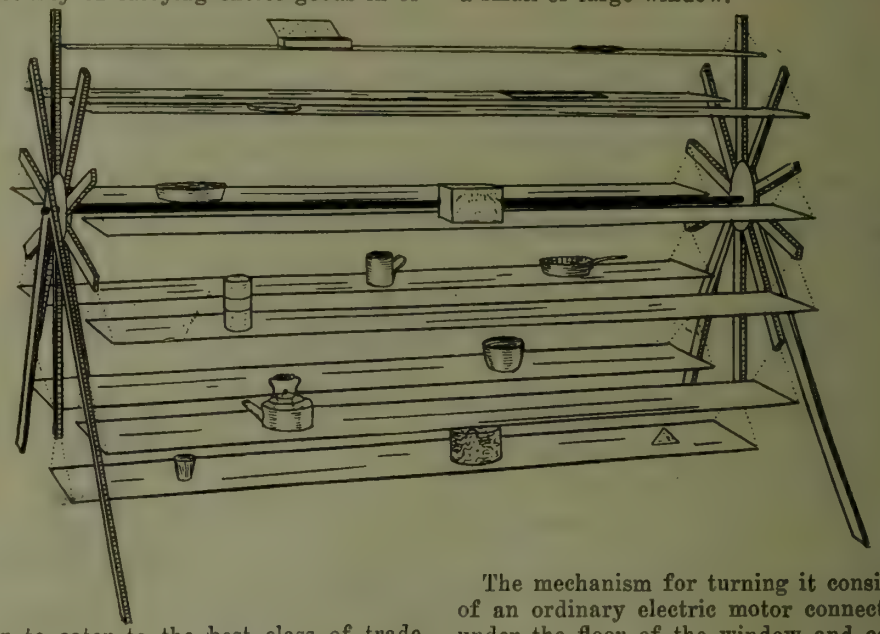
"I am an old reader of The Canadian Grocer, and I always look for it; there is certainly nothing, to my mind, that pays as well as the two-dollar investment in The Grocer," were the encouraging words of another. "It is remarkable how a man almost unconsciously grows out of his narrow ideas by keeping in touch with the general trend of the trade."

A Richmond Street grocer makes a specialty of carrying choice goods in order to cater to the best class of trade. "I control the sale of the —— brand of California goods west of Toronto," he said, "and several other exclusive lines. I keep my store clean and tidy, not only where people see it, but just come down into the cellar and see how we keep things there; everything must be in order."

Makes Collections Easily.

"I have not much trouble in making my collections; I believe in being prompt myself, and I let my customers know that I expect them to be prompt as well," were some views of another.

"I am a new man in the business," said one grocer, "and about the first thing I did was to order The Canadian Grocer, which I find a great help to me."



"We will send you a photo of our window and do our best to win the prize—you see the size of our window and with the other advantages we will give the competitors a good chase, even if we do not win."

"We are bothered a good deal in this city with mechanics who have a little money and who start small groceries and make their wives attend to them," remarked another. "They know nothing about the business, neglect their own housework and in about five years they break down from overwork. People should have some qualifications, I believe, before they are allowed to start business, especially handling goods for food."

"I think the wholesale houses made a stupid mistake when they cut out the discounts for cash. This was the only fair and decent way to encourage prompt payment. If they would carry it out properly it would not be so annoying, but some who get down and beg for it, get it, secretly. It is demoralizing trade instead of lifting it."

A REVOLVING SHELF DISPLAY RACK.

The accompanying illustration shows a revolving shelf rack, adapted for either a small or large window.

The mechanism for turning it consists of an ordinary electric motor connected under the floor of the window and connected to the pulley wheel on shaft by a leather belt. The adjustment should be such that the large wheels carrying the shelves should revolve very slowly. Brass plumbers' chain is used to support the shelves. To the persons looking in the window, the shelves then rise gradually to the level of their eyes, and as slowly disappear behind the mandrel.

There is a fascination about the device that draws people to the window. One reason may be that anything in motion is attractive, but another is that with the shelves full of small articles, one has to be a close observer to take them all in before they are carried past the range of vision.

Another way to use the device is to cut out a space a little wider and longer than the shelves at front and back of window flooring then suspend the floor of the window as a wide shelf to the revolving axle by chain and hooks thrown over the axle. The shelves will then have the appearance of coming up through the floor of the window.

In using this device, or, in fact, any window idea that is at all out of the ordinary, much of the advertising effect is lost if the name of the house using the device is not clinched in the observers' mind as firmly as the device itself. Be sure, therefore, to have your firm name stand out clear on the window or on some card bearing some such phrase as "Buy it at Brown's."

CONFECTIONERY FIRM FAILS.

St. John, N. B., Dec., 22.—A meeting of the creditors of the Phillips & White Company, manufacturing confectioners, was held last week when a thorough investigation was made into the company's business. The company was incorporated about two years ago with a capital of $28,000, of which $20,500 was used. A large amount of this was invested in machinery, leaving the company with insufficient working capital. A committee was appointed to look carefully into the affairs of the company and report back at a meeting to be held shortly. The company will likely ask for an extension of time in order to settle their affairs and still continue the business.

Alderman John W. Vanwort, the Charlotte Street grocer, organized a last-of-the season trip on the river on Thursday, Dec. 16. The party left on a tugboat and intended going up to Evandale for dinner, but were stopped by the ice after they had covered about 20 miles, and were forced to return home. They established a record for late navigation, however.

Miramichi fishermen have been having great luck with their smelt fishing. The catches have been unusually heavy and they are receiving 5½ cents a pound on the ice. One night last week the combined catch totalled to the value of $12,000.

A Canadian canner states that 100 tons of raw pumpkin only produces about 50 ton of canned goods including the tins. Although it may not generally be known, the outside rind on the pumpkin is used. It is claimed to be the best part of the pumpkin for flavoring purposes and that housewives in making pumpkin pie make a mistake when they throw the rind away.

First Class Bacon Being Manufactured in Canada

Price of Hogs too High to Allow Industry to Develop Properly—Butter Inclining to Lower Prices—Christmas Turkeys Very Expensive—Advances in Lard.

The high price of hogs should certainly induce our farmers to raise more hogs. The packers have provided themselves at great expense with the best possible equipped plants to handle the hog product of this country, and are turning out bacon second to none in the world, and it is in the interest of the farmers to keep such a great and profitable industry in flourishing condition. The farmers' interests do not cease when he steps off his farm, but his success largely depends on the enterprise of the men who prepare his products for the markets of the world.

Instead of harboring jealousy, as is too often the case he ought to be familiar with the difficulties that confront the men who by their skill and means are making their produce more valuable, and assist them in carrying on the business which is of mutual benefit to both. It is through the excellent quality of bacon produced by the improved methods of curing which has created the demand and the enormous consumption of cured meats that farmers are getting the high prices for their hogs.

This is not only the case with hogs, but also with butter, eggs and poultry. The splendid facilities provided by the dealers to handle all these goods to better advantage are the causes of the high prices of all these things. A lesson yet to be learned is to work more in harmony with one another, in order to produce the best result to all.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS — Compound lards are up ¼c, owing partly to an increase in demand. Roads as yet are too bad for the lumberman to come in, and as a result trade has not been so far as good as might have been expected. However, if the present cold weather keeps up a decided increase is looked for. Prices other than on compound lards are steady.

BUTTER—This market is steady, but quiet. Receipts are keeping up remarkably well, being larger for the past week than the corresponding week last year. The figures are 3,680 packages, as against 3,229 packages for 1908. For the season they are 382,597 packages, as against 405,752 packages same season last year.

CHEESE—Just at present there is little inquiry for cheese. It is hoped that the open air political meetings in England will serve to somewhat stimulate demand for this commodity, as cheese will be served at all of them. It may not have a great deal of effect, however, as the quantity used in this way would not in itself materially increase consumption. Receipts for the week are 1,859 boxes, as against 1,783 boxes same week last year. For the season they are 1,964,861 boxes, as against 1,954,795 boxes same season 1908.

EGGS—As usal at this season there is a distinct scarcity of new laids. Storage stocks have been drawn on very heavily to meet the demand, which has been unusually large for the better grades. As a result the market is firm, with a probable rise in the near future. Receipts for the week are almost nothing, 171 cases, as against 571 cases same week last year. POULTRY — Prices of all lines of poultry are up a cent. There is none too much stock in the dealers' hands to supply the Christmas trade. In fact some dealers say there is far from being sufficient, with little prospect of much new stock arriving. The country buyers have only been able to pick up small lots, and not many of them. Scarcity and higher prices in all lines are looked for before the first of the year.

PROVISIONS — Cured meats which are regarded with so much favor can well afford to allow poultry to crowd them back at this particular time of the year. BUTTER—Dealers in butter as usual during the winter, complain of poor qualities. This is partly owing to the feed and partly to want of proper facilities and to carelessness of the makers, and often to the way it is handled by the storekeepers in the country. There is little change in the prices, but from all appearance the tendency is towards lower figures. Prof. Dean made the statement at the Guelph Reunion that he hoped butter would bring 30c a pound all the year round. He should, however, not forget that that is a very high price to pay for the man who has to buy it, but the public is generally satisfied to pay a good price for all kinds of farm products if they get the right quality.

CHEESE—The cheese market is quiet, at the same time there is a feeling of safety in holding at the present prices. Canadian cheese has a preference in England, which was secured much to the credit of our cheese men, and will therefore, as long as it will hold this position, sell at a premium.

EGGS—Strictly new laid eggs are still scarce which cannot be expected to be otherwise at this time of the year, and will sell at high prices, but the bulk of eggs used now are cold storage stock. These turn out well and answer almost every purpose. The stock is supposed to carry us nicely through the winter, and at reasonable prices compared with other articles of food.

POULTRY—This week is the great poultry week of the year, and by all appearance the supply will be short and prices unusually high. A good many farmers are still blind to their own interests and unfair to those who buy their poultry, by sending skeletons instead of birds with meat to eat. They make nothing for themselves and positively rob the consumer.

BACON AIDS DIGESTION.

Some doctors frequently prescribe bacon for weak digestion which tends to disprove the impression in the minds of some that it is indigestible.

Prof. Snyder, of the Minnesota Food Station, gives in a report some reasons why bacon should become popular. In reference to a test he says that bacon was cut in thin slices and baked or broiled in the oven until crisp and brown. All the fat which was cooked out, was saved and eaten with the bread and other foods which made up the daily fare.

On an average, about 90 per cent. of the protein and 96 per cent. of the fat of the ration containing bacon were digested, and about 88 per cent. of the energy was available. Calculated values for bacon alone showed over 90 per cent. protein, and 96 per cent. digestible fat, figures which compare favorably with those which have been obtained for other animal foods.

"Lean bacon contains as much protein and about twice as much digestible fat as other meats," says Prof. Snyder, "making it at the same time and even at a higher price a pound, a cheaper food than other meats. Bacon fat is easily digested, and when combined with other foods it appears to exert a favorable mechanical action upon digestion."

Cause of Many Losses Due to Poor Buying Systems

The Season Makes a Big Difference — Necessity of Watching Reliable Quotations in Trade Papers—Where the Greatest Losses Occur—Every Line Should Bear Its Own Share of Expenses.

In some recent conversations with Montreal retailers as to their systems of buying, information which will be of value to others was obtained by The Grocer representative.

Probably the most timely hint was as to systematic buying as regards the season. For instance, different lines of goods should be stocked at Christmas and Easter. Luxuries are in order at these seasons. They should be laid in well before the time when they will be needed, and a careful study made as to the lines most adapted for the particular custom to be appealed to. If the customers are mostly of the wealthy class, there is nothing too good for them. However it must be remembered that time is an important consideration. Overstocking for the time when articles will be readily saleable is quite a common fault, particularly among grocers who have never clerked behind the counter, or who pay too little attention to this source of information. The best index to a man's ability to run a successful business of any kind is his knowledge of what is going on in the store, and the use he makes of that knowledge.

For a man who is closely in touch with his clerks it is a comparatively easy matter to decide just how much of any one line to buy and when to buy it. Reports on daily sales are one of the most useful helps to a buyer. Have the clerks keep track of the various lines as an additional check on your own figures, assigning certain ones to each. Then with a careful study of the extras, goods stocked only at certain seasons, a quicker turnover will be made, and goods will not have a long enough stay in the store to become stale.

Where Losses Come From.

Some of the worst losses that come to the average grocer come from unsaleable stock. It takes up valuable space and eventually has to be sold for cost or under. Even if sold at cost it is a loss, for overheads are always eating away at profits, insurance must be paid, and salaries are paid as usual.

Every line stocked should bear its fair share of all expenses incident to operating the store. If not there must be a reason, and that reason can usually be looked for in the buying.

To be successful as a buyer takes years of experience, combined with a full knowledge of the class of buyers who frequent the store. That man has the best chance who has clerked in the store for which he is buying, and who has made the detailed study which this gave him the opportunity to do.

Current quotations in reliable trade papers are of great assistance. A study of their variations will enable foresight to be developed to a very great extent. The man who hasn't time to read good reliable information hasn't time to look after other details of his business properly. It is as necessary to keep track of markets, as it is to have light in the store at night.

Watch Quotations Closely.

There are so many lines carried in the average grocery that it is almost an impossibility to keep closely in touch with the latest quotations without the aid of good trade papers. Their representatives are paid to do just this. They keep daily in touch with the wholesalers and are often advised in advance as to the probable rise or decline of the price of articles. No up-to-date merchant can neglect any easily accessible source of reliable information.

Mistakes are bound to occur in stocking up. The wise buyer is the one who learns from his mistakes. It sounds very trite to say "don't do it again," but that is one of the soundest mottoes to keep in mind, when looking over some dead stock.

In conclusion the advice given by most of the men consulted was that every man should use the brains nature has given him and avoid future trouble by studying past mistakes and future possibilities. With careful attention to the sources of information available, either in the store or in papers, it will only be a matter of time to perfect your system.

HOW THE TRAVELER LOST.

It was in a country tavern, where a newly arrived commercial traveler was holding forth.

"I'll bet my case of samples," he said, "that I've got the hardest name of anybody in this room."

An old farmer in the background shifted his feet to a warmer part of the stove.

"Ye will, will ye?" he drawled. "Wa-al, I'll have to take ye up. I'll bet ten dollars against your samples that my name'll beat yourn."

"Done," cried the salesman. "I've got the hardest name in the country. It is Stone."

The old man was game.

"Mine," he said, "is Harder."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

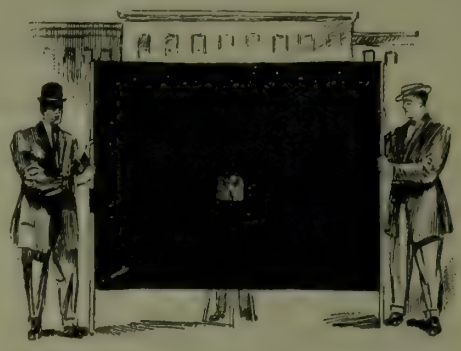
How to Avoid Reflections in Window Photographs



Screen May Be Easily Made For This Purpose — Things to Look After in Having Photographs Taken at Night — An Answer to an Inquiry.

Many mistakes are made in taking photographs of windows which are too small to show the detail of the display. The Canadian Grocer, for instance, frequently receivies photos of post card size, which cannot be used. The chief difficulty, however, is found in overcoming the reflections from buildings or trees across the road, when photos are taken in the daytime. A Grocer subscriber has written to say that he has had two photos taken of his Christmas window, but both were spoiled by reflections; he wants to know of some method to prevent this.

The accompanying drawing shows a simple and inexpensive device for eliminating the reflections for daytime photographing. This consists of two poles that are a little longer than the height of the window. Cut strips a little longer than the window is wide, and sew them together until there is a sheet large enough to reach nearly from the t[illegible] to the bottom of the glass. Tack the upper corner of this sheet to the top of each of the poles and continue along down the poles, thus forming a large, black screen. A square hole is made in the centre for the camera, and when the photographer is ready to begin operations, have two men hold it as illustrated, thereby shutting off all reflections from across the street or from whatever direction it comes.

In daytime photographing, the right time of day must be chosen in order to get the greatest amount of light in the window. Professional photographers usually choose the early morning on a clear day. This, however, must be left to the judgment of the man who takes the picture. The length of strips out of which to make the screen can be determined by taking the poles out on the walk and observing how much is necessary to shut out reflections. Black lining cambric or black calico will serve the purpose, and is not expensive.

If the windows are strongly illuminated by artificial light, and the picture taken at night, from 10 to 25 minutes will bring out the greatest amount of detail. People passing on the street will not interfere with such a picture, unless, there is a continual crowd. No one should be allowed to stop between the camera and the window during the exposure. If the store or windows across the street are illuminated, these lights are very apt to reflect on the window pane and result in marring the photograph.

In order to secure a perfect photograph, the show window lighting should at all times be concealed and should be located in the upper part of the window near the window pane. All the shadows on the goods are then clearly defined and this contrast between the high lights and shadows will give a perfect picture. Open lights in the window have a tendency to blur the photo.

CONDEMNS USE OF PORTRAIT.

A Montreal retail grocer takes exception to the use of a merchant's photograph in newspaper advertising and writes to the Canadian Grocer to ventilate his views. Here is what he says:—

"In a recent issue of a Montreal daily an advertisement of a retailer appeared, the central portion of which was taken up by a photo of himself.

"Possibly in a booklet or circular the use of a personal photo would be good judgment, but it is a waste of valuable space to insert it in a daily advertisement. High-priced space is for use, not ornament. There are so many ways to make use of it for articles of special value, that it shows a lamentable lack of advertising knowledge to waste a large portion of the space taken by a photo, which is of no particular interest to any but close acquaintances, and even they would not, in all probability, think more of the advertiser for such an insertion. Advertising space costs money and special study is necessary to obtain the best value for that reason.".

It would be interesting to learn what others think of this system of advertising.

Peculiar Conditions in Wheat and Flour Market

Work of the Speculators Making Itself Known — Good Cable Demand for Patents—Tendency of Cereal Market is to Firmer Prices.

The general tone of the wheat and flour market is heavy. The fluctuations, especially on the Winnipeg and Chicago markets yield to the greater strength of the buyer or seller. Every conceivable influence is brought to bear in order to effect profitable transactions.

The weather conditions affecting the Argentine crop were closely watched, and now calculations are already made on the winter wheat crop of next year. Under such conditions all that can be said about the market is to quote present prices and guess at the future. With the greatest wheat yield the world ever had, and with the outlook of the winter crop prospects, which are all that could be desired, it requires some effort to keep the prices to their present level.

MONTREAL

FLOUR—There is a steadily increasing cable demand for best grade spring wheat patents. Millers are saying that if it goes on prices will be liable to be higher. The market is already firm, with a higher tendency. As yet no changes in prices have occurred.

FLOUR—The local wheat market is slowly but gradually climbing higher. Millers are paying from $1.09 to $1.10 which is about a cent higher than last week. The local demand, perhaps owing to Christmas baking, is active. Ontario wheat is still scarce. Farmers are holding back.

CEREALS — Merchants having had their supplies laid in for the holiday seasons, causes a lull in the demand for these goods this week. The prices, however, are not affected and after the holidays the demand will likely improve. The prices of both wheat and oats are firm, and are higher than was expected some time ago. People seem to have money and are spending it freely without complaining about the prices.

NO BREAD WRAPPERS.

During the past few weeks Montreal bakers have been much exercised over the persistent attempts made by some parties to have all bread wrapped in oiled paper, or some substitute.

Finally the matter came before the Health Committee, when both sides of the matter were presented. The reasons advanced by those wishing bread to be wrapped were simply that it would be much more sanitary, would not be so susceptible to outside influences such as weather and handling, and there would be little additional manufacturing cost.

When they were asked regarding the matter the bakers showed clearly the impracticability of the scheme. Thousands of loaves were sent out daily by many of them, and it would require a tremendous increase in running expenses to hire sufficient additional help to wrap all the bread. This would mean a corresponding increase in the price of that commodity, thus bringing a hardship upon the poor, whose chief table necessity was bread. Also it would require additional handling, which would negative the sanitary idea advanced by those in favor of wrapping.

The Health Committee decided that it was best to leave conditions as they now are. Nothing was to be gained by the change and it would be a hardship on the consumer to ask the price necessary for bread under the changed conditions.

Comparison of Grocers' and Farmers' Methods

No Price Cutting and no Jealousy on the Berlin Market—The "Three-for-a-Quarter" System Not Heard of There—Business all Done With Precision.

A short time ago, a Canadian grocer in speaking of the unbusinesslike methods employed by grocers, made the statement, that the farmers at their markets were doing their selling in a more business-like manner than the merchants do in their stores.

This remark led a representative of The Canadian Grocer to visit one of the largest farmers' markets in Western Ontario (Berlin), to look into this matter. To get the full benefit of this market, it is necessary to be on hand early in the morning, and to be on time, the town was reached the evening before, and after getting acquainted with the market programme, retired, leaving an order with the porter to be called at 6 o'clock.

This was just a safeguard, but turned out to be not at all necessary for before the clock struck six, the scribe was awakened from his sweet slumbers, by the rumbling of the hundreds of vehicles and the noise of the horses' hoofs on the frozen ground. The farmers were coming to the market. At 7 o'clock they had their produce all arranged on their tables and were ready for business. Here one takes a hurried look over the tables, and sees a variety of things altogether too numerous to mention. When he turns his gaze up and down the street, through the morning twilight, he thinks the whole town is let loose. The sidewalks, the middle of the streets, and everywhere is a living hustling mass of humanity. Men women and children, rich and poor, all on their way to the market, and not one without the necessary basket to carry home whatever he may buy. The market is now in full swing. The farmers are ready to wait on their hurried customers.

The produce is cut into pieces with a paper attached to each, showing the weight and value. There is no cutting of prices, no attempt made to buy below the stated figure and no asking to have the goods delivered. They are promptly paid for and the buyer takes immediate possession, by placing his purchases in his basket. The farmers get rid of their goods without cutting prices. They get good value for their produce and the people who buy them make no kicks.

Clear-cut Methods.

So business-like is everything arranged, and the service so promptly rendered, that customers buy their supplies to the value of $3 or $4, and in fifteen minutes' time are on their way home. At 10 o'clock the market is practically over. The goods are all delivered, the farmers have their money in their pockets, and all they have to do is to gather up their empty vessels, spend some of their cash in the stores, and get home by 12 o'clock.

Now, was the grocer right when he made the statement as he did? The farmers' sell for cash, they do not cut prices, they do not give a ten-cent article for 3-for-a-quarter, they do not deliver the goods, they offer their goods at certain hours of the day only, and they have their customers educated to adapt themselves to their methods. In short, they control the situation. If the goods of one are not picked up as readily as those of another, the only reasonable thing for the former to do is to produce better goods. If these farmers can educate their customers to come out in the morning before daylight, is it not reasonable to suppose that the retail merchants can educate their customers to come out for their goods during reasonable hours of the day? If they never lose a dollar through bad debts, can the merchants not also agree upon certain plans to cut out the dead-beat? If the farmers do not cut their prices below living profits, cannot the merchants also do the same thing? If the people can carry all their things home from the market, why can they not be educated to carry home a spool of thread without considering it any disgrace?

It all seems to resolve itself into this: Retail merchants, through a mistaken idea of being extraordinarily kind, and a stupid jealousy of each other, have spoiled their customers, like spoiled children, and for all their extra efforts to please them, they receive no thanks.

The farmers meet one another, talk over their affairs, arrive at profitable methods, but the merchant stands behind his counter, jealous of his fellow merchants, ignorant of each other's methods, afraid of one another's tactics, and gives his hard labor, business energies, and the most active part of his life to the service of the people without much profit and when all is done, he is only a "storekeeper."

FROST AND CANNED GOODS.

The question as to whether frost causes injury to canned goods is being widely discussed. The general opinion is that frost is injurious especially when the contents are allowed to thaw and freeze repeatedly. A canner stated to The Canadian Grocer that he believed frost had much the same effect as too much heat—it disintegrates the particles and lightens the color, thus making the contents "washy" in appearance and to the taste. He believed the ideal temperature for canned goods was about 3 or 4 degrees above freezing and that if this could be maintained by retailers they could obtain the best results.

Large Quantities of Apples and Oranges on Hand

Novelties in for the Christmas Trade—Demand For Fish Falling off on Account of Holidays—Potato Market Steady.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—Noveltics for Christmas are appearing on the market. Kumquats and tangerines have arrived in considerable quantities, and appear to be of good quality. While trade is brisk it is expected that Thursday and Friday will be the record days, and if they are at all what is looked for it will indeed be a Merry Christmas for fruit men. Prices are unchanged, with the exception of cranberries, good grades of which are scarce. They are quoted $9-$9.50 per bbl.

VEGETABLES—Hot house goods are appearing in considerable quantities on the market. Asparagus, green peas, new potatoes, and tomatoes are among the principal ones. Sale for them has been encouraging, and dealers say that money seems to be fairly plentiful this year from the way people are buying luxuries, rather than staples. Prices on the regular lines are firm and unchanged.

FISH—Christmas trade has fallen off during the past few days, and there will be a dulness now until after New Years. Supplies in general are better than was anticipated some time ago, so when the demand starts in again prices will be reasonable. If the demand is good green cod would probably show a scarcity. Herrings and haddock will be high if fishing does not improve.

GREEN FRUITS—Since the big fire in two of the largest fruit houses, the trade has been somewhat confused. The large quantities of damaged goods which were thrown on the market at hurried sales had a demoralizing effect on the market for the greater part of this week. New stocks, however, have arrived, the trade is assuming its natural shape again, and business moves in its regular order, with prices little changed from last week. It was the full intention of the fruit men to have an exceptionally large variety of fruit from all parts of the world for this Christmas, but the fire has made it impossible, and in consequence such lines as strawberries, cherries, etc., will be missing. Oranges and apples are plentiful.

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA.

Something About the Production of Evaporated Apples in Canada.

By H. D. McMullen.

Canada is the home of the evaporated apple, and in Canada, Ontario is by far the largest producer. Quebec and the Maritimes produce a large quantity, mostly for home consumption. The United States is also a large producer, though the highest grades come from this country.

Almost everyone knows the dried apple on sight, so no description is necessary.

As to what apples are best for drying it depends largely on the use to which they are put. Early apples are not nearly so satisfactory for keeping qualities or flavor as the winter varieties, but the average evaporator dries large quantities of them, with which to start the season. When winter apples begin to come in, the early ones become almost unsalable, except at considerably reduced prices.

One rather interesting process preparatory to drying the higher grades is what is known as sulphuring, that is, exposing the pared and sliced fruit to sulphur fumes for a limited time. This whitens the apple and keeps it comparatively white even after drying. The fruit thus prepared brings a much higher price on account of its appearance.

One of the least known, yet most valuable uses of dried apples, is their value in the making of champagnes. France imports large quantities from this country for that purpose. It is stated that the highest grades of champagne now made are those in which dried apples are used.

Canada's production is on the increase and in Ontario it is hard to find a small town, where apples are grown, which has not at least one evaporator. Buyers are plentiful and good evaporated apples usually find a very ready sale.

SUGAR IN OLDEN TIMES.

Cane sugar was produced by the Chinese at a very remote epoch. In western countries it was a more recent introduction. The Roman writers, Pliny, Varro, and Lucian, at the beginning of our era, barely mentioned it. It was then known by the name of Indian salt and honey of Asia, Arabia, or India. In 1090, Crusaders arriving at Syria discovered sugar cane, which became a favorite dainty of the soldiers. During the following centuries, the sugar cane was introduced into Cyprus, the Nile Delta, the north coast of Africa, as far as Gibraltar, Sicily, and the kingdom of Naples. It reached Spain in the fifteenth century, and thence was carried to Madeira and the Canaries. In 1644 the French imported it into Guadeloupe and a little later into Martinique and Louisiana. The Portuguese introduced it into Brazil and the English into Jamaica.

TRADE NOTES.

The J. P. Tanton Company, Summerside, P.E.I., is canning poultry of all kinds.

Incorporation has been secured by the Allredie Pure Food Company, Montreal, with authorized capital of $60,000. A. H. Clements and A. W. Hugman, are the promoters of the concern, which will occupy quarters now being renovated at 589 St. Paul St.

Press advices from the Fresno "Republican" concerning the meetings of raisin growers of that section tell that 2,500 tons were pledged to the growers' pool a week ago and that it was probable that much more would be under contract during the following week.

O. Lefebvre, proprietor of the Ocean Mills, Montreal, has moved into new quarters recently completed. The manufacturing is now being carried on by an up-to-date brick factory, four stories high, situated at the corner of Lasalle Street and Mount Royal Ave. Different departments are located on each floor.

E. Kelly, of Winnipeg, acting on behalf of a syndicate of northwest wholesalers, has closed for the purchase of the Tilbury canning factory, Tilbury, Ont. An option was taken on the plant a couple of months ago. Three factories were purchased :—Tilbury, Alvinston and Jordan in the Niagara fruit district.

The announcement that the Dominion Government has granted a subsidy of $25,000 a year to Wm. Thomson & Co., for a line of steamers between this port and Havana, Cuba, is of great interest to shippers in St. John, N.B., as it guarantees direct communication with the Cuban market where a large and profitable trade is being developed. The prospect of an extension in the South African service of the Elder Dempster line, to provide a fourteen boat service between the port of St. John and Australia via South Africa, is also being viewed with great interest.

The Bartering Methods of Northern Merchants

Difference Between the Goods Sold in Canada's Hinterland and Those in our Modern City Stores—Salt Pork, Sugar and Tobacco the Leaders—Merchants Receive Animals and Furs in Exchange.

By L. C. Harkness.

To have one hundred per cent. of the trade of Indians, who come for their goods in canoes or dog trains, is something quite out of the ordinary for the average grocer and provision merchant. There are perhaps no stores in Canada that enjoy this distinction except the Hudson Bay Posts of Western Canada. Each year sees the number of these trading posts diminishing or pushing farther into the unknown parts, due to the inroads of the white people and the gradual depopulation of the Indian race.

The trade in these posts is neither cash nor credit. It is almost all barter.

The wholesale houses in the west keep the various posts scattered throughout the whole northern part of Canada supplied with provisions which are given in return for whole animals, furs and fish.

The conveniences of getting goods to some of these posts are not always simple, but in these days they are much more simplified than when Lord Strathcona first swept the prairie with his heavy stride.

A view of one of the company's posts, three hundred miles north of Winnipeg at the head of Lake Winnipeg is shown herewith. To get provisions to this post they are transported forty miles by rail, then loaded on a little steamer that plows its way up the lake to the little village post. This is alright in summer when the lake is free from ice. But several months of the year it is frozen over solid with ice about ten feet thick. The provisions during these months are delivered from the train by teams and sleighs which make the trip in several days.

The class of trade does not require such a large range of goods as the average grocer in our city centres. An Indian family can make a piece of salt pork go a long way in sustaining health and happiness. Sugar is a large item on the books of the post keeper. The Indian hut is always supplied with sacks of sugar, tea and tobacco. The latter commodity is perhaps the last thing of which he will deprive himself.

In the late fall of the year the post keeper usually supplies the Indians with provisions to allow them to travel far away in the winter months in search of fur-bearing animals. In the spring they return and lay their spoil at the feet of the good merchant.

CELEBRATE SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

At McConkey's restaurant, Toronto, Henry Wright, president of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., entertained on Friday evening, Dec. 10th, the travelers, part of the staff and a few friends to a dinner to celebrate the closing of a successful year's business. The table decorations were both beautiful and unique, displaying several of the lines of which the firm are agents, and several of their own products. After dinner a humorous address was presented by the president, whose good health was heartily proposed. The chair was occupied by C. E. Stone, a director, while R. T. Macdonald, sec.-treas., was vice-chairman. The speeches were appropriate and all tinged with best wishes for the future welfare of the company. The remainder of the evening was spent in euchre, the first prize—a beautiful cigarette holder—being won by C. Michie and the "booby"—a box of pills—by J. Creig. So successful was the event that it is to be made an annual affair.

VAST NUMBER PRESENT.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the establishment of the H. J. Heinz Co., was celebrated in Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 18th, by a banquet tendered to the president and founder, H. J. Heinz, by the firm. There were about 2,000 in attendance, and among the many interesting features was the presentation of a massive sterling silver and gold loving cup to Mr. Heinz, by a committee, composed of five of the oldest employes. The event, in view of the vast number present, was one of more than ordinary interest.

H. A. Bishop has joined the traveling staff of R. S. McIndoe, commission merchant, Toronto, and will sell the products of Wm. Clark, Montreal. Mr. Bishop represented the Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., in Toronto and London for some years.

BOWSER

Long Distance System
For Handling
Kerosene or Gasolene

meets the highest approval because it is SAFE.

The old method of handling oil by gravity or any kind of pressure was very dangerous, as a leak in a joint or elsewhere was most apt to result in an explosion.

Every feature of the Bowser Long Distance Underground Storage System meets the requirements of the most careful Insurance Companies and Fire Underwriters.

HERE IS THE PLAN:—The oil is stored in a tank buried outside, any distance that you desire away from the building. The tank is made of best heavy sheet steel, riveted and soldered, tested and guaranteed leak and evaporation proof. It is painted with three coats of asphaltum, which absolutely prevents the damp earth from acting upon the metal. The pump is the latest improved, all metal, and measures accurately gallons, half-gallons, quarts or pints at a stroke. The nozzle is fitted with a lever shut-off that absolutely prevents evaporation.

THE SYSTEM HAS NEVER CAUSED A FIRE, nor has an explosion of a Bowser Tank ever occurred. One hundred and eighteen outfits passed through the San Francisco Fire—not one explosion resulted. Some of the pumps were warped and melted by the heat, but the oil remained in good condition in the tanks. The Bowser System is safe in every way.

Crescent BM&Co. TRADE MARK. Brand

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Profits from Purity

The satisfied customer assures a permanent customer, yet without purity satisfaction of the lasting sort is not possible—or probable. Profits from Purity, therefore, command regular trade. Profits from the articles advertised below are business builders.

Made pure for sixty years—as pure as pure oil and skill and experience can make it. The most sensitive complexion or most delicate lingerie is safe with "Shell" Soap. Antiseptic, sanitary, clean. Not a Pure Oil "tallow soap"—no decaying animal matter in it. Absolutely pure.

Bramwell's Epsom Salts show a noteworthy absence of moisture from top to bottom of package. They are absolutely free from foreign substances. They never have been and never will be classed with ordinary "salts" of commerce. They are in a class by themselves.

CEYLON TEA

Be Ever Careful to Buy

The Better Grades.

IT IS

The Most Profitable

Policy in the Long Run.

Selling Cheap Teas at Fine Tea Prices Might Show Big Profits Temporarily, but It Would Eventually Kill Trade. And It Would Discourage Growing Fine Teas.

Your Money Back

When you put in a stock of Pure Gold Goods you are investing your money as surely and safely as if you put it in a savings bank. But the interest is greater. Your principal is subject to your call at a moment's notice because

If the goods are not satisfactory, or do not sell satisfactorily, they may be returned at our expense and your money will be refunded.

Please read the above again---

This is your assurance of safety---and a further assurance that the goods will more than give satisfaction. Because if the goods did not sell and stay sold our business would be confined to selling and then buying back our own goods. Hardly a profitable transaction.

Pure Gold Goods

have the quality that makes them quick sellers. Add to this the great big advertising campaign that is pushing the thing along. Add to this the fact that every package sold to the consumer sells two or more packages to the same consumer or a friend of hers. Now, can you prove yourself a better buyer than to put in goods that we guarantee will be live, quick moving stock? A guarantee that we back up with our money back offer. You can't lose---you can't help but win.

And remember—this means that in taking stock you can put in Pure Gold Goods at 100 cents on the dollar—a regular cash on hand asset.

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped from Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

A Stock-Taking System that Can Easily be Worked

The First Consideration of Merchants With Beginning of the New Year—Systematic Procedure Lightens Labor—Trial Balance Figures Prove Interesting for Future Reference.

Now that the Christmas and New Year's holiday trade is a thing of the past, merchants will naturally turn their thoughts to something else. Stock-taking should first be considered.

That it is necessary to take stock, no one will deny. Merchants should know at the end of the year how much stock they are carrying into the next in order to keep close tab on how they stand. Doing business in the dark is almost as bad as not doing any at all and so the New Year should be started with a thorough knowledge of what stock is on hand, at what it is valued and where it is.

There is no time like the first month of the year in which to take stock. After the holiday rush there naturally comes a calm for a few weeks—hence stock-taking should be the next consideration with every merchant. The question is to those who have not had the experience—how should we proceed?

Many grocers use a rough book for stock-taking purposes, but probably a better method is to use a well-bound "Stock-taking Book" with the pages headed as shown by the accompanying illustration. After the goods have all been placed back in their proper places, the grocer might proceed as the illustration suggests—beginning at the top shelf nearest the front window on one side, etc.

In addition to finding the cost of the stock on hand, this system gives a merchant a direct knowledge of where the goods are and the quantity of each variety he has on hand.

After having entered everything in the manner described above, proceed in the same book and directly following to enter your trial balance as suggested by the following:

	Dr.	Cr.
Capital Acct.		$ 5,000
Bank balance, Dec. 31, 1909	$ 1,200	.....
Book debts (representing excess of debtors over creditors	6,250	.....
Stock at Jan. 1, 1909.	10,000	.....
Purchases during 1909 ...	66,000	.....
Sales during 1909		$82,200
Lighting	250	.....
Salaries and wages ...	2,500	.....
Rent, rates and taxes.	500	.....
General expenses	500	.....
	$87,200	$87,200

Stock-taking is one of the first duties to perform in 1910. It is too often looked upon as tedious work, but if a good, simple system is devised, the tediousness will be dispelled. Too many grocers keep putting off the work until well on in the New Year. This is certainly a mistake. If you are going to take stock take it now and get it over—the sooner you know where you are at, the better, so that definite plans for the coming twelve months may be perfected.

A Suggesstion for the Merchant in Taking Stock—This is a Simple System Which Can be Carried out With Little Difficulty.

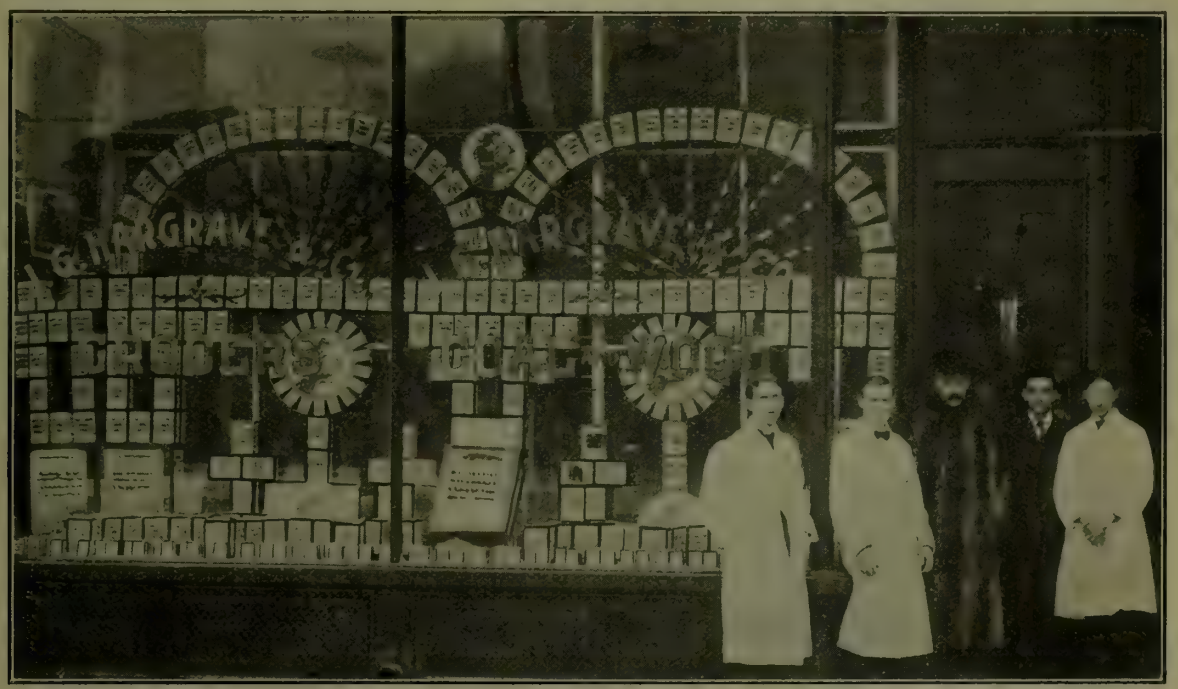
Dealy & White, Owen Sound, Ont., recently opened their new business stand to the public. The stock consists of the choice brands of groceries and confectionery, flour and all kinds of meals. Also a full line of feed, consisting of grain, baled hay and chop. Everything in the line of farm produce is taken in exchange for goods.

A Firm Believer in the One-Line Display Window

Manager and Window Decorator of Winnipeg Grocery Firm Makes Simple but Effective Breakfast Food Display — Claims That the Window Has Been One of the Chief Business Getters.

Winnipeg, Dec. 28.—The experience of many grocers in this city has been that the one line window displays are the kind which bring the most direct results. When several lines are displayed, they think it is almost necessary to decorate the windows with suitable backgrounds, and furnishings in order to make the window look attractive. Attention can more readily be drawn to a neat arrangement of one line of goods rather than several lines, it matters not how neatly those individual lines may be arranged.

If, however, the various lines have an attractive setting the display may be as useful as the single line display. The point is that few merchants or salesmen care to spend the time in making as good a display window out of several lines of goods as can be made from a single line display. The one line does not require the time or possibly the expense which is required to fit up a miscellaneous display. This possibly is the explanation for the tendency to produce the one line attraction.



It must be emphasied that the display features are the great business getters and the desire to minimize the time or expense in this work may easily be overdone. Should the several line attractions be best in some quarters or under peculiar circumstances by all means time should be taken to make the necessary display.

Studied in Ireland.

The accompanying reproduction is of a one line window arrangement in the store of J. G. Hargrave, Winnipeg, which was set up by R. L. G. Seymore, who has been manager of the store for fifteen years. Mr. Seymore has always paid strict attention to his window displays and says that the present status of the business has been largely built up through the medium of the window.

It is interesting to know that Mr. Seymore learned how to decorate windows in Ireland where he was born. Upon coming to Canada he re-entered the grocery business with a firm known as Cummings & Seymore on Main Street. A few years later he engaged as a clerk in the J. G. Hargrave store, where he has been for eighteen years, having risen to general manager of the J. G. Hargrave Co., Limited, a company recently incorporated as grocery, coal and wood dealers.

Mr. Seymore appears in the group at the door, wearing the heavy winter overcoat.

A STEPPING STONE TO SUCCESS.

By Tom. L. Johnston.

There are plenty of good mechanics who are plugging away in small shops for low wages, who could hold good jobs in large shops at good wages, but they do not know what is going on outside of their own little sphere. There are trade journals pertaining to almost every business, and if these mechanics would take them and study them they would keep abreast of the times and get out of the rut they are liable to be in all their lives. Some of them turn out good work, considering the material they have to work with, but it is always the same old style, and if they were put in a first-class shop with every labor-saving device at hand they would not know where they were at.

I know of one young printer who was working in small shops for nine and ten dollars a week, but who was wide-awake and studied every journal relating to his trade he could get his hands on, and is now holding a permanent position at twenty-five dollars a week.

There is more to be learned from a trade journal than one thinks, until they begin to take an interest in it and then they would not be without it.

I once heard a grocer say he would feel like a preacher without a Bible if he did not get his trade journal, so it is quite evident a man in any line of business can profit by taking some journal devoted to his trade.

TRADE NOTES.

Frank Cane, Wetaskiwin, Alta., has sold his general store business to England Bros., Toronto.

The stock of Wm. Mammell, Tottenham, Ont., has been sold at 64c on the dollar.

The Paulin, Chambers Co., biscuit and candy manufacturers, Winnipeg, are enlarging their premises.

Jas. Richardson & Sons, Kingston, Ont., is now being formed into a joint stock company, capitalized at $750,000. The company intend prosecuting the canning business.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Early Closing By-law not Enforced at Ottawa — Montreal Grocer Shows Necessity of Fair Profits on all Goods—Peterboro Merchant Aspiring to Mayoralty Chair—Unique Post Card Used by Kingston Grocer.

Who Will Enforce By-law.

Ottawa, December 28.—The members of the Retail Grocers' Association are of opinion that the early closing by-law is neither being observed by the grocers of the city nor enforced by the police, whose duty it is to see that the laws are duly obeyed. The by-law demands that grocery stores close at 7.30 on week nights and nine o'clock on Saturday nights. Several of the larger groceries close at six o'clock on regular nights. The association thinks the police department should look after the lawbreakers, but the department hold that they will investigate any charges laid against offenders. It is proposed to write the Provincial Secretary to ascertain the ruling of the law on the subject.

All members of the association endorsed the raising of the cigarette license to $15.

All Prepared for Christmas.

Peterboro, Ont., December 28.—In connection with the Christmas grocery trade, it is interesting to note that a large number of the smaller store windows were tastefully decorated showing that while a grocer may not be on the main street he takes advantage of the opportunities afforded him in his own locality. Neat designs have been thought out here and there and have been put into effect. Among the stores that are worthy of mention are W. C. Tully, H. Sisson, W. J. Routley and Mrs. S. Mitchell.

Be Sure to Make a Profit.

Montreal, December 28.—"One of the main faults of many retailers is marking their goods so low that there is not a living profit in them," said Walter Paul, a Montreal retailer. "Every line carried in my stores has to contribute its fair share toward the total year's profits. If it doesn't I know there is something the matter and it is time to make a sufficient advertising campaign to bring it back to normal. There is no better way to keep track of what is going on in the store and what is necessary to be done, than to watch the sales of each line separately. In a way it solves the problem of what to advertise and what to have the salesmen push especially."

Time is Money.

Quebec, December 28.—"Do you realise that your time is money?" observed a local grocer the other day. "That is, if it isn't it should be. Your capital when this life began, was very little, in fact, nothing. As time went on this world's goods began to collect, but you had to spend your time to acquire them."

"This can very politely be shown to your customers, some of whom perhaps like to talk over the state of the weather with you during business hours, or some other equally important matter. If they can only be made to realise that time is only be made to realise that time is equally important to them you will not only help yourself, but do them a distinct service. There is a time for everything, and business hours are set apart for no other purpose than to do business in."

An Original Post Card Note.

Kingston, Ont., December 29. — John Gilbert, a local grocer, has been sending out a unique picture postal card, on the picture side of which is a marine scene showing Martello Tower and on the other the following original letter:

THIS SPACE MAY BE USED FOR CORRESPONDENCE

W E C. T O U.

Madam.—

We would B pleased 2 have UR weekly order 4 supplying UR table with good things 2 - 8. Should U favour US we will do our best 2 please U in Price, Quality, Prompt delivery and courteous attention.

194 BARRIE STREET and COR. GORE & WELLINGTON STS.

PHONE 254 PHONE 248

This is always read on account of its original character and Mr. Gilbert states that it has caused a great deal of discussion among those who have seen it.

A Grocer in the Fight.

Peterboro, Ont., December 28.—One of Peterboro's leading grocers, E. F. Mason, is one of the two candidates for the mayoralty of this city during the next year. He is contested by W. G. Morrow, and the general feeling is that the fight will be one of the hottest that has been waged in this municipality in a long time. Mr. Mason has proved a successful business man and he has also a good record on the council and Board of Education. He was three years an alderman and established a good record as chairman of the finance committee, and last January was elected to a two year term as a member of the Board of Education. There is no question as to his receiving a large vote, but in Mr. Morrow he has a worthy opponent and when Greek meets Greek the combat is one that pleases the gods.

Handles Confectionery.

Sutton, Que., Dec. 28.—Stores in Sutton, Que., are mostly general stores. H. W. Cull, started two years ago, a grocery and confectionery business. His store has two of the best display windows in the town. It is well arranged, neatly kept, and, for the summer trade, has in the rear a nicely furnished room for serving ice cream, soda water, etc. Mr. Cull is assisted by his mother. Both credit The Canadian Grocer with giving them many items of desirable information in connection with their business, which has been rapidly increasing in volume.

Use Your Own Individuality.

Montreal, Dec. 28.—Walter Paul, the proprietor of two large stores in Montreal, gave The Grocer his opinion on the subject of individuality, in a recent conversation. "Very few men realize how much their business can be strengthened by the use of their own individuality," he said. "By that I mean the use of original ideas on methods of trade and advertising. Use the best things you can develop, and adapt good ideas used by other successful men to your own conditions. It will inevitably produce good results."

Clinching the Agreement.

Wallaceburg, Ont., December 29.—"What a pity it is," remarked a grocer recently, "that so many merchants fail to clinch their arguments properly?"

"I mean," he added, "that they don't get the full results they should from elaborate and carefully prepared window displays.

"Suppose I put on a first-class display showing Santa Claus coming out at the bottom of the chimney, or racing across country behind his reindeer, or something appropriate to the season. My window takes a lot of my time, or my clerk's time, which is the same thing. I should, therefore, strive to get from it every possible return.

"My Santa Claus window talks to the passer-by about Christmas goods. I should make it talk, though, in such a way that it will drive conviction home. And I can't do this unless I make a liberal, though tactful use of show cards and price tickets.

"Without them my window is nothing but a picture—a very pretty picture. it is true, but still not the thing that will have a direct effect upon the sale of goods. People will remark that it is a pretty window—and some of them will probably make purchases as a result of stopping to look in—but so long as it is only a picture, I won't be getting what I am after—the biggest possible results.

"When I put in price cards and show cards—little, seasonable, catchy hints on Christmas buying—I convert my window from a mere, attractive picture into a convincing, logical argument. The cards supply the missing link. Without them, I don't consider any window of mine complete."

The Value of Patience.

Montreal, December 28.—Patience is often hard to keep continually to the fore, particularly when a cranky customer uses up a lot of your time uselessly. Even though her trade may be well worth an effort to keep, it sometimes seems as if it would be almost better to let her take it out on someone else.

In talking this matter over with several retailers in Montreal recently, the general consensus of opinion seemed to be that customers must always be treated right, unless there was an absolutely unreasonable person, who was continually finding fault for no cause whatsoever. In that case they should be waited on a few times by the proprietor to see that such was the case, and then treat them politely, but give them plainly to understand that if they did not like the methods of the store they were free to transfer their trade. It is better to do this than to offend them out and out, as some salesman is sure to do sooner or later.

WEST INDIES TRADE GROWING.

Canadian Commissioner to Barbadoes at St. John—More Careful Inspection of Canneries.

St. John, N.B., Dec. 30.—Grocers here, both wholesale and retail, report that the Christmas trade was satisfactory and stocks of holiday goods were fairly well cleaned up.

E. H. G. Flood, Canadian trade agent at Barbadoes, who spent the holiday with relatives in St. John, is leaving this week on his return to Bridgetown. Mr. Flood in speaking of trade matters, said a steady increase was shown in trade between Canada and the West Indies. The greatest need of Canada in the West Indies is the same as it has been for years, he said—more commercial travelers to drum up business. Canadian firms apparently did not realize the importance of the market, and meanwhile the United States and British firms are securing the bulk of the trade. With this need supplied, Mr. Flood saw no reason why Canada should not materially increase her trade in manufactured goods.

C. S. McGilvrey, Ottawa, inspector of food factories and canneries, was in the city last week on his annual trip of inspection. He said it was the intention of the department later on to look more closely into the quality of canned goods. A close inspection would be made to see that too much water was not used in the preparation of goods.

Merry Wit About the Drummers' Banquet Board

Annual Dinner of the Drummers' Snack Club Held During the Week—Some High-Class Oratory Abounds, — The Next Snack Outing to be Held at Oakville.

Staff Correspondence.

Toronto, Dec. 29.—There is only one Drummers' Snack Club. The world is not big enough for two; and in this way it has a marked resemblance to Shakespeare.

The Drummers' Snack held its annual dinner on Thursday evening, Dec. 23rd, at the Arlington, Toronto, and any person who is acquainted with any of its members can appreciate the statement that 'a royal good time was the result.' It was a miniature summer-time Snack with the same sociability and merry wit tingeing every minute of the few pleasant hours during which it was held.

Prior to the dinner a general meeting was held at which arrangements for the next annual July event were begun, which, by the way, will take place at Oakville, in the Province of Ontario in 1910. Then came the dinner and the speeches. Of course, there was that old-time chestnut sprung: "This has been a surprise to me—if I had only known I could have had a nice after-dinner speech prepared." But if such were really the case it didn't look much like it once they 'got going'—there are many orators among the Club, notably Jack Charles, Robt. Algie, Billy Reilly and President Bay Hill.

A feature of the evening's prominent events was the display of wit on the part of Sol. Walters. He was in good form, as he was on the occasion of the outing at Erin, just another case of history repeating itself.

One thing the club is regretting these days, is the departure from Toronto to Montreal, of Wm. Colville, who has been an indefatigable worker every since the Drummers' Snack first saw the light of day, almost two decades ago. More about this, however, will be seen in another column.

Once the dinner got well under way and the rough corners of appetites had been worn off, the humorous side of the merry company was turned out. Col. Stoneman was wont to associate present and past events, when he observed one of the waitresses serving a Hamilton drummer with an arm on either side of his neck. It looked dangerously like something else. "Same thing happened at Erin," remarked the Colonel, and with the ensuing laughter arms were removed.

Was the Silverware Safe?

Sol. Walters and Michael Kennedy suspected each other of carrying away the culinary utensils as souvenirs, but if the knives and forks didn't disappear something else did. It will be remembered that Michael Kennedy was the man "who kept the bridge" at Erin all night. He is an authority on municipal affairs and don't tell him we should have the tubes in Toronto. Somebody might get hurt.

Robt. Algie and Charlie Smye choose their company, when they dine, or else they require plenty of room. At any rate they sat apart from the remainder of the company, cracked their own jokes and laughed alone. As a matter of fact the trouble was "lack of space," which often affects reading matter in a trade paper.

"How many trains stop at Oakville"?, was a frequent query at the banquet table. The "boys" are already looking forward to the great midsummer event. It might be mentioned here that Col. Stoneman objects to the term "boys," but nevertheless when it comes to having a good time he must be counted in.

But to get down to the oratory in earnest. President Bay Hill—who, by the way, would sooner be president of the Drummers' Snack Club than Governor General—told the assemblage that as for looks, they were unequalled so far as his experience extended. In referring to the Snack Club outing of 1910, he asked for the 'co-operation of all and the antipathy of none.' As everyone knows, Bay Hill is a lover of poetry. He has a pretty parody, which runs like this:—

Backward, turn backward, O time in your flight,
Make me a baggage-man just for tonight.

The toast to "Our King and Country" was loyally drunk and followed by loyal speeches from John Charles and Dr. Algie, both of whom would be glad to allow the destinies of our Dominion to rest in the hands of such men as compose the Drummers' Snack Club. It was commercial men who sell the products of factories, that the people should commend in the building up of a nation and not the armies and navies.

"Our greatest weakness is our greatest strength," observed Dr. Algie, as he referred to the outcome of an invasion of Canada in the midst of winter, with snow ten feet deep.

"We could play a freeze-out game then alright," interjected Sol. Walters.

Harry Eckstein's song put an end to the speeches for a few minutes, and after the lengthy applause had died away the company were delighted to hear from Secretary Algie that C. Weese was making hay in Lindsay. A letter of regret was also read from F. J. White of Minto Bros., who was also unavoidably absent.

PRESIDENT BAY HILL.
Who Presided at Annual Dinner of the D. S. C.

His Last Battle.

The recitation by Col. Stoneman, which followed was a masterpiece of elocution. He pictured an after-battle scene with such realism and vigor, that every listener remained spell-bound during its entirety. His recitation was all the more remarkable as it was 10 years since he had given it before. The Colonel is certainly without a peer, when it comes to elecution.

Michael Malone, Robt. Asher, and Robt. Keys, responded to the toast to "Our Dominion and Provincial Parliaments." References were made to the advances the country was making, to the work the legislature was doing in looking after hotel accomodation, and to the necessity of proper legislation.

Vice-Chairman, J. H. Wildfong conducted affairs from this pointed beginning, with a presentation of some silverware to Earnest Bowles, pianist, who had helped the club on many occasions as accompanist at concerts. He similingly accepted the gift, and like any good husband ought, though of his wife who, he was sure, would appreciate it very much.

"The Merchantile and Manufacturing Interests" was responded to by "Pap" Sommerville and Walter Madill, both of whom are orators of repute. Between the two a song was sung by Mr. Hudson, which certainly deserved all the applause which ensued.

"The Commercial Travelers Association of Canada" was responded to by John Gibson, the president, who is a firm friend of the Drummers' Snack Club. He will be at Oakville next year.

The "Honey Boy" was sung by Billy Reilly as only Billy can sing it; Harry Ritchie gave the "Stein" song, and everybody expanded their lungs when it came to the chorus.

The Mountain City section then announced that it was train time, and after the singing of "God Save the King," the happy gathering dispersed.

Side-lights on the Banquet.

Smoke sometimes has a good effect. Walter Madill could have made a longer speech, but for the fumes following the flash-light.

Sol. Walters replied to the toast to the ladies. After telling all about their good characteristics he left unsaid the rest.

A diary of the trip around the world, neatly bound was presented by Billy Reilly to his traveling companion Billy Colville, who leaves soon for Montreal. The contents can only be read in Montreal. Toronto "the good" would not stand for it, so it is whispered.

Even if Michael Malone was befuddled from eating too much, he got off some good philosophy when he said that the Drummers' Snack teaches each and all of us that there is some good in the rest of us if we can only get it out. "That's the trouble," observed Sol. Walters.

When Billy Colville makes $10,000 in each of the 10 succeeding years, he's coming back to pay all the Snack's expenses. The boys are going to have that in "black and white."

Billy Meen had his troubles keeping order at the lower end of the table—and directly across.

"I want a ticket for Oakville."

PRESENTATION BEFORE DEPARTURE.

Toronto, December 28. — The Drummers' Snack Club is undoubtedly losing a faithful worker in the person of Wm. Colville, who on January 1st takes charge of the Montreal office for the Pugsley-Dingman Company, for which he has traveled for many years. Many expressions of regret were heard at the annual dinner of the Snack Club last Thursday night and one of the features of the event was the presentation of a secretaire to Mr. Colville.

This was done in a few well chosen words by Robt. Algie, who referred to the faithful work that had always been freely done by Mr. Colville. "We want you to know and feel that you were a man who did things and who did not merely say them," he remarked. In reply Mr. Colville regretted severing his connections with the club. "We have in the Drummers' Snack Club," he said, "an element that, if properly carried out will do more for the travelers than any other organization in Canada."

His successor as traveler for the Pugsley-Dingman Co. is Geo. F. Campbell, formerly on the road for Blue Ribbon Tea.

TRAVELERS TALK BUSINESS.

Annual Meeting of the C. T. A. of Canada Held—Amendments to the By-laws.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—Amendments to the by-laws created lengthy discussions at the annual meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, which took place last Thursday afternoon at St. George's Hall. About 150 travelers were in attendance, and on many occasions two, three and even four speakers were on the floor at the same time to advance their respective arguments. John Gibson, the president, was in the chair.

Several amendments to by-laws were proposed, one of the most important being the widening of the terms upon which a man can be called a traveler. Hitherto he had to travel at least three months of the year in Canada, but in the future he will be qualified to enter the association provided he travel at least three months in any part of the British Empire.

The meeting turned down a by-law amendment which provided for allowing the Board of Directors, at their discretion, to admit a person into the association for special reasons, even if he were not qualified in all respects under the by-laws.

In the future the annual meeting will always be held during the week between Christmas and New Year's, a resolution to this effect being carried.

During the discussions, one traveler complained of the high hotel and baggage-transfer rates in the west particularly in British Columbia. He had paid $10 for a day and a quarter's expense at one hotel, and spoke particularly on the high charges of transferring baggage. Secretary Jas. Sargant explained that if the members would only live up to the by-laws of the constitution these high rates would not be charged. They go looking for a few cents lower rate with some company other than that with which arrangements have been made and eventually prices go up.

The great growth numerically speaks for the increased volume of business throughout the country. There were 686 members added during the year, making the total enrolment 9,320. There has been little, if any, added expenditure to the working expenses. Seventy-six death claims have been paid since the last annual meeting, and out of the $65,-268 allotted for the year for mortuary benefits, $11,275 remains to the credit of that fund.

The report also referred to the matter of fire protection in hotels which was elaborated on by Col. Stoneman. A resolution was passed commending the action of the Board of Directors in requesting from the government that it should see that fire escapes were placed in every room in every hotel in Ontario.

Secretary Sargant received a great ovation, when Mayor Oliver, in the course of an address calling attention to the work of the Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society, made the remark "that there was no better secretary on the top of this green earth."

The following was the result of the ballot:—

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

A PAIR OF CONVERTS.

It is said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has advised the Premier of Quebec to appoint a business man to the portfolio in the Provincial Cabinet which is to be vacated by Hon. W. J. Weir, who is being elevated to the Bench.

This reminds one of the speech of R. L. Borden, at the banquet of the Manufacturers' Association at Montreal, a few weeks ago, during which he strongly expressed himself in favor of more manufacturers being in Parliament.

There is undoubtedly a growing spirit in Canada in favor of giving business men a more prominent place in the administration of public affairs. And its growth is being fructified by necessity. Professional men are all right in their place, but they too often lamentably fall down in practical business affairs.

The work of governing a country is to all intents and purposes a business affair, and it naturally follows that those who administer should be men of practical business experience. Like begets like.

Very little reliance can, as a rule, be placed on the public utterances of politicians. They are given a great deal to "jollying." They loiter around the corner and only get into the procession when they see that public opinion is strongly represented in it. In other words, the politicians do not lead, they follow public opinion.

The significance of the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier, and R. L. Borden, the leader of the Opposition, in regard to a representation of business men in Parliament, is an evidence that they are realizing that public opinion is becoming strong in regard to this matter, and wish to march in the procession. They are both to be congratulated. It is an evidence that they both have eyes with which to see the trend of affairs. And when they begin to see things in the right light, others will follow. It will be fashionable, for there are fashions in political ideas, as well as in garments.

It is to be hoped that when opportunity affords, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden will bring forth works meet for repentance.

A FRUIT GROWERS. DEPUTATION.

Some time ago W. A. MacKinnon, Canadian Trade Commissioner, Birmingham, Eng., proposed in his weekly report to the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa that Canadian fruit-growers visit the Old Country with a view to studying the British markets and the conditions existing there.

This suggestion has borne fruit. The matter was brought to the attention of the president of the British National Fruit Growers' Association, who discussed it with the council of the Federation, and the result was the issuing of a cordial invitation to Canadian fruit-growers to visit the chief fruit plantations in England.

The aggressive work of Mr. MacKinnon along this line is to be commended. The next move should be the acceptance of the invitation by the fruit growers of Canada, for there is much to be learned from studying the conditions in the country to which our fruit is exported and the express desires of those who purchase it for consumption.

Every little while we read of deputations from other lands studying the British tastes, with regard to foods, and these naturally result in taking away a portion of Canadian trade because their exporters know exactly what John Bull and his family require.

Let Canadians do the same with fruits and there is every possibility of a vast industry growing in leaps and bounds in Canada—raising fruit for the British market.

MANY CONVICTIONS RECORDED.

Government statistics are to hand regarding the convictions this season of apple packers for violations of the Act regarding packing for export. Over forty names appear on the list, with all the way from one to four convictions registered. Practically all the apple-growing sections of the Dominion are represented, but Ontario seems to be the worst offender.

It seems strange that there is such a lack of foresight on the part of packers. This subject has been brought up time and again, and it has been clearly shown that if it is persisted in, there will be an alarming decrease in English imports of our fruit. It may mean an extra dollar or so of immediate profit for the man guilty, but apple-growing is not a temporary business. There is a future trade to be looked after, and continued disregard of repeated Government and other warnings will eventually end in England, our best apple customer by far, transferring her trade where she will be better treated. This is by no means the only country where apples can be successfully grown, though it is probable that few competitors would be successful if our customers received fair treatment.

Complaints are heard every day among Canadian dealers about the treatment meted out to them by Greek and Spanish dried fruit exporters. Perhaps there had better be a housecleaning at home before we find fault with others.

Considering the relationship which exists between Canada and the Mother Country, it seems shameful that persistent efforts to make a little dishonest money from her buyers, should be going on every year. It is about time our regulations were made more strict, and examples made of all packers convicted. A ten-dollar fine is not going to stop a man of dishonest instincts, when he knows it is almost impossible for anything like a thorough inspection to be made. More severe tactics must be used if much is to be accomplished.

The Government officials may do their best, but the recurrence of the same names for additional convictions shows that the penalties are too light.

THE LAW AGAINST SECRET REBATING.

It is gratifying to learn that Boards of Trade in Canada are calling the attention of their members to the Secret Commissions Act. Probably no other Act of present-day legislation has created such widespread interest. The St. John, N.B., Board of Trade has just sent out a copy of the Act to its members, and other boards have done and are doing the same.

It must now be clearly understood, according to the Act, that it is illegal to pay or accept a secret rebate in the selling and buying of merchandise. Too much of this has been going on in Canada and the sooner it is stamped out the better will it be for Canadian trade and commerce. It is only right and proper that goods and salesmen should stand on their merits, and if it is necessary for a manufacturer, wholesaler or traveler to give a secret rebate on goods in order to sell them, then something is lacking. It may be in the quality, service rendered, or salesmanship, but, nevertheless, it exists.

Under the terms of the Secret Commissions' Act everyone who is found guilty, on indictment, of a breach of it is liable to two years' imprisonment or to a fine not exceeding $2,500, or to both, and, upon summary conviction, to imprisonment for six months, with or without hard labor, or to a fine not exceeding $100, or to both.

With the elimination of infractions of this law, better business methods will prevail. Manufacturers, wholesalers, travelers and retailers will then stand upon an equal footing so far as prices and dealings with each other are concerned. There will be no unfairness and no dishonesty practised—for it stands to reason that secret rebating in order to get trade is positively dishonest. No honest man will stoop so low as to be guilty of such practices and if he does, the sooner he passes out of the business sphere the better will it be for the commercial interests of the country and the morality of the human race.

Honest methods are to be commended and so are honest men. Honesty is simply a matter of square-dealing with one's fellow men. It is dealing above the board, and not passing the cards beneath the table. Yet men who consider themselves "fair-and-square," so far as their conscience and reason dictates, will deliberately give and take secret moneys in order to dishonorably get a little more consideration from their houses or to be able to sell a little cheaper than their competitors.

Every business man should consider it his duty to stick to the letter of the Secret Commissions' Act. Any deviation is wrong, and, as pointed out above, the penalty is steep. However, it is not because there is a penalty attached that the law should be kept. It is because it is the simple duty of every man to keep the law. It is morally right to do so.

In other words, we should do right, not because we are going to be punished if we do wrong, but because it is the right thing to do.

A PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

The trade paper which is the most valuable to its readers is the one that proves to be a profitable investment. In fact no merchant wants to invest in anything that does not prove profitable; he is in the business to make money and the greater the turn-over and the less the outlay the more money will he make.

On another page of this issue will be noticed a short article under the heading: "Gets a Raise in Salary," which gives the experience of a Vancouver grocer. He shows how one of his assistants has had his salary increased twice in eight months, due to the interest he displays in The Canadian Grocer, because he puts into practice suggestions that are from time to time made by this paper.

If that merchant thought that this salesman was not becoming more valuable to him would he have raised his salary? It is not likely.

It all goes to prove that the less-than-four cents per week spent on The Canadian Grocer can be made an investment which, if carefully watched, will be shown to be one of the best the merchant can make.

UPROOTING THE VINEYARDS.

A report from Greece was published in last week's issue to the effect that currant growers were contemplating uprooting their plants in order that the decreased production of the next crop would produce higher prices.

Whether this be true or not, there is a certain amount of similar circumstances occurring to warrant calling attention to the matter. It would be a foolish idea for the growers to seriously consider doing such a thing. Much better results would be effected by increasing the production and enlarging the buying field. This could be done by extensive advertising, which would prove worth while to the growers of currants.

The same thing applies to many other businesses. Producers and manufacturers get the idea that the only thing to be done if prices are low is to decrease the production, forgetting all about extending the purchasing field by aggressive measures. They must go backwards to obtain the results desired and eventually they are considered too small by purchasers to transact business with.

INADEQUATELY PAID MEN.

The business men of Ontario who have any influence with the Government of that Province should exercise it on behalf of the professors of the Agricultural College at Guelph, who are at present requesting an increase in salary.

The salaries of these men are most inadequate for the work they are doing on behalf of the agricultural interests of the country. They are shamefully underpaid.

A short time ago a body of business men were invited to visit the college. They spent a day there, and after coming away many of them expressed their opinions very strongly in regard to the inadequate remuneration paid the professors. Many of them had clerks who were getting better pay than some of the professors.

Millions of dollars annually are being added to the productive value of Ontario because of the work which the professors at Guelph are doing in the way of instructing the farmers in intensive farming. The results they obtain from experiments at the Guelph College are passed on to several thousands of farmers in Canada annually to the manifest advantage of the material wealth of the country.

The more money the farms of this country earn, the more money is there for distribution among the business men. Obviously, therefore, it is in the interests of the business men that the professors at Guelph should receive adequate compensation, because if Canada does not do so other countries eventually will.

Canada has already lost a good many valuable public servants because of the parsimony with which they have been treated in the matter of salaries. We should profit by the mistakes of the past.

THE TURKEYS THAT FAILED.

Some retail grocers have written to The Canadian Grocer this week to tell of their troubles in obtaining their Christmas supply of turkeys. The cause was the unfaithfulness of farmers and their wives, and the fact that Montreal and Toronto buyers were out offering better prices. One merchant states that a farmer's wife had agreed to take to him his supply on a certain date and at a specified price. He had an advertisement all prepared for the local paper and all his customers promised, but the woman from the country did not appear. He disappointed many of his customers and may probably lose some. Many others and even some wholesale produce merchants experienced the same troubles.

While this is disgusting particularly from a moral standpoint, it is something difficult to overcome. In these days of advanced civilization, the word of a man or of a woman is usually taken where there is a reasonable amount of assurance that the party will make good, and it is not usually wise to obtain statements in writing from persons who are customers at your store. But nevertheless something should be worked out, to meet individual cases as described above, so that the party with whom a merchant is doing business will be bound to make good or lose money, without him knowing that he is so tied down.

While the principle of the thing is wrong yet money talks and it is better to make sure than go sorry.

Montreal, Dec. 30, 1909.

Considerable interest has been evinced in the sugar situation of late. Reports of record crops in Cuba and Barbadoes, with large ones in most other sections, have had a very depressing effect on the raw market. There seems to be little doubt that eventually the refined product will be lower.

Christmas is a thing of the past and New Year's trade is practically over. Dealers are beginning to figure out how good trade has been, and first reports are certainly encouraging. Jobbers report large initial orders from retailers and many repeats. The retailer reports a bumper two weeks to end up the year and the consumer wears a satisfied smile after his Christmas dinner, so everyone seems to be prosperous and in fine shape to start the New Year.

Some lines, particularly certain lines of nuts and dried fruits, are scarce, and prices have gone up correspondingly. Walnuts, peanuts and valencia raisins show this markedly. The general market trend is higher and in coffee and tea a firm situation is present.

SUGAR—Raws are weak and though temporary rises occur, the large Cuban crop, almost 2,000,000 tons, is sure to have a depressing effect on the market. As yet no changes in refined have been observed.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES—Prices on fancy molasses have gone up 2c, while on choice they are down 3c. This makes a very peculiar situation, as the expected course of events would cause a sympathetic action on the part of both. The low price of choice has caused a large increase in the demand for it, while fancy is still holding its own, in spite of the high price. Syrups are steady, with slow sale.

TEA—Tea trade has been doing what seems the proper thing at this season of the year, that is, taking a holiday. In other words trade has been dull. Prices remain firm, however, and after New Year's it is expected to be brisk, as retail stocks will need replenishing. Dealers expect also that prices will not only be maintained, but will probably be higher.

COFFEE—Trade in coffees has been somewhat dull, but prices remain firm with future prospects good for those who have large present stocks. After the middle of next month prices seem sure to go up, as the exportation duty on Rio and Santos will have to be paid. The limit has been nearly reached already.

DRIED FRUITS—Valencia raisins are up, and the better grades are in great demand even at the advance. They are scarce. Other lines are in the usual Christmas demand at former prices. Reports at present as to the volume of Christmas trade are very encouraging, and for these lines there seems to be general satisfaction among all the dealers.

NUTS—Shelled walnuts are up. This has been expected for some time, owing to the scarcity prevailing for the past two weeks. Even with the increased price the demand exceeds the supply for the better grades. Peanuts are scarce and higher. There are no French on the market, which fact has had a considerable influence in this direction. All lines are having a fine sale, probably the best in spite of the poor quality of this year's crop, that we have had for some years past.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—Seed tapioca is scarce and is already higher in the primary markets. It is not expected that the rise will be sufficient to justify an increase to the retailer. Trade in other lines is somewhat dull in keeping with its normal state at this season of the year.

BEANS AND PEAS—In spite of a large crop this year, good beans are becoming scarce, and prices have already gone up 5c. This is thought to be due partly to an increasing demand, and partly to larger exportations than in previous years. Even with these reasons, dealers are surprised at the strength evinced by this commodity. Peas are firm at last week's quotations, and find a steady sale.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—With the exception of canned lobsters, fish trade has been light of late. Vegetables and fruits, on the other hand, are finding a brisk demand. Prices are firm here.

In the United States, tomatoes are reported as a drug on the market, and are selling as low as 55c. Canners are very much discouraged there over the situation. They are hoping for an improvement later and are holding for a future rise.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Tendency to lower prices.
Tea—Market very firm.
Nuts—Scarcity in almonds.
Evaporated Apples—Lower market.

Toronto, Dec. 30, 1909.

This is stocktaking week among nearly all the wholesale houses; the travelers are home, and business is almost at a standstill. Judging from their appearance and cheerfulness, they have a pretty good idea on which side of the ledger the balance will come out. If the wholesale men did well, it is to be hoped that the retailers also got their proper share, and if they did not, they have either themselves to blame or else there is something wrong in the system, which should be corrected. Therefore there is no room to complain, but merely get ready and remove, or assist in removing, the wrongs which are a hindrance to the retail trade.

From all accounts, however, retailers all over the province did a good Christmas trade, particularly in dried fruits, nuts, peels and green fruits.

SUGAR—The sugar market is quiet, with a weaker feeling in sympathy with the large Cuban production. With stocktaking going on, in almost every wholesale house, and the travelers off the road the orders for sugar are light, and prices are stationary.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—Although the Montreal market shows a little fluctuation in these lines, it does not seem to have reached this market, for the prices here have been steady and remain unchanged. Prices on the new crop are being quoted to Canadian firms from the Barbadoes, which is the earliest ever received. It indicates that, while the new crop is not actually ready, the market has opened and operators are willing to sell in advance below the closing price of last season.

RICE AND TAPIOCA—When everything is so high, grocers who are real caterers to the public needs, would do well to push rice, on the ground that it is wholesome, nourishing and a cheap food. The enormous increase in the production of rice in the United States, from a very small beginning to 608,000,000 lbs. last year shows that the value of rice as a cereal is being realized.

MANITOBA MARKETS

POINTERS—
Advances—Beans, seeded raisins.
Firmer—Fresh fruits and vegetables, syrup.
Weaker—Sugar, evaporated apples.

Winnipeg, December 30, 1909.

Although wholesalers are lamenting the scarcity of stocks in nuts, figs, table raisins and peels—they are comforted by the fact that the demand is still strong for such goods as can be had. The proposition of poor accounts this year is the smallest on record and this is a decidedly good feature of the trade.

Just now wholesalers are feeling the benefit of the great crop, that has been issued out of the country, probably more than at any other time of the year. It takes on an average six weeks for returns to be made from points in Saskatchewan and Alberta. For the heavy general trade of last autumn and the augmented trade for the holiday season the wholesalers are now being remunerated.

A few months ago a manager of a local wholesale house visited the second floor of the warehouse and found the whole floor covered with peel. He was wrathy with his buyer for stocking such a large amount of one line that could not be used up for two years. To-day there is not a pound of peel in that warehouse. The old manager has been surprised—and there are others.

The markets are interesting in that the scarcities have forced prices up.

SUGAR—The market is weaker south of the line, having declined 10 to 15 cents, but the Montreal market did not follow. The break in U.S. was attributed to the sugar trust investigation. This may not cause a decline here at all.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS—Prices are firm and stocks are low. Seeded raisins have gone up ¾ of a cent, owing to scarcity. It is claimed that the stock of seeded raisins is 10,000 tons less than it was last year at this time. The market is also strong on currants, apricots, figs and peel. Peel is scarce and in some houses it cannot be had. Prunes are moving well; stocks are abundant and quality fair.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 30, 1909.

This year has been one of the best seasons for trade that Vancouver ever had. As it has been put, "this is the biggest Christmas that Vancouver has ever seen, and this is the biggest Vancouver that Christmas has ever seen." Few merchants in any line of business are reporting things not up to the average, and the average man is always ready to tell one how good everything is looking. It is an excellent condition, and shows that activity is general. The prospects, moreover, are of the best, and though there may be a quiet period immediately after the holidays, which is but natural and looked for, still it is not expected to be in any way harmful.

There have been no advances in prices during the past week, with the exception of Japanese oranges, as the supply has been short. No. 1's are being jobbed at 85c a box, and second grades at 75c, which is usually the retail price for the best. This year the quality is good, and they arrive at a time when the navels from the south are anything but of fine quality. The California oranges at this time of year are pale in color and quite sour, and if the Jap article is good at all it has a large call. It is rather unfortunate for the Christmas trade that good oranges are not available, for the demand is good.

CALGARY MARKETS.

Corrected by Wire.

Calgary, Alta., Dec. 30. 1909.

Friday night last practically completed the holiday buying, which has been by far the most active and extensive in the city's history. Retailers in all lines state that their trade has been satisfactory. The markets are well supplied with seasonable fruits and luxuries. Alberta grown poultry is in good supply; turkeys are particularly good, the retail price being from 25 to 28c per lb. Chickens are 20 and geese 18 to 20c.

Another car of Jap oranges arrived on a market already heavily loaded, consequently the last shipment had to be disposed of at a cut price. The retail price dropped to 60c per box, while at Vancouver, they are retailing at 75c and 85c per box. The wholesalers are over their rush, and are now preparing for stocktaking, which usually occurs in January. Sugars are easier and a decline is anticipated. Owing to the rapid development of the province, a new jobbing centre is being started in the north east portion of Alberta, at Camrose. This point is particularly well situated as a distributing centre, being served by the three great railways, C.P.R., C.N.R. and G.T.P., with several branch lines radiating in different directions. Already several wholesalers have decided to locate branch houses at Camrose. While this new distributing centre will to some extent cut off trade from points hitherto supplying that territory, the trade is growing so rapidly that the loss will only be a temporary one.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Dec. 30. 1909.

Fresh eggs continue scarce and high prices prevail. The choicest stock is selling wholesale at 32 cents per dozen, and the demand is good. The case eggs offering are only of fair quality, but they are selling at 28 cents per dozen.

The butter situation is practically unchanged. Some fresh dairy butter was marketed during the week, and it found a ready sale. There is a fairly good supply of butter on the market, but the price is high for any kind of decent stock.

The sales of confectionery this Christmas were very heavy. The demand was principally for high grade chocolates, and the total sales are reported to be away ahead of last year. The grocers handled quite a lot of confectionery this season, mostly box goods. The fancy packages were much in favor. Some of the retail grocers also handled quite a lot of bon-bons and Christmas stockings. There was little call for the cheaper grades of confectionery, and the demand for creams shows a heavy falling off. The demand for the best class of goods is attributed to the fact that the people had more ready cash than usual, and they spent quite freely.

Since we introduced "MAYBELL" TEA, our trade each year has shown a very decided increase. In the first place our customers bought and recommended it because they were convinced the quality was right; they continue to buy it in increasingly large quantities, because their customers found it the best value obtainable.

Briefly stated, the THREE MAIN REASONS why you should push "Maybell" Tea during 1910 are as follows:—

1. Your customers whom you induce to try it will appreciate the extra quality at the price.
2. You make the profit which now goes to the Packet Tea Man.
3. The Bonus Plan outlined on the opposite page is worth while.

Arranging the Departments in a General Store

How a Western Ontario Merchant Has Accomplished This—Has it Equipped With Modern Fixtures—A Feature Made of Quality in the Goods Sold.

Harrow, Ont., Dec. 29.—Among leading general merchants in Western Ontario the consensus of opinion both at home and abroad will reserve a place for T. B. Adams of Harrow. He has moved into a fine new store and it is fitting just now to direct attention to his well merited success. Too good a business man to be "hail fellow well met" with the crowd, Mr. Adams has won, nevertheless, the respect and admiration of the great body of traveling men; and they know.

After 30 years in the trade in Harrow Mr. Adams' business is larger than ever before and the office and store staffs number fifteen. Among them F. H. Ferris, manager of the grocery department, and W. R. Boyce, manager of the dry goods department, have both been eighteen years with Mr. Adams. Grocery travelers state that Mr. Ferris is one of the most capable men in the grocery business in Ontario. With Mr.

Cut Showing Front of New Store of T. B. Adams, of Harrow, Ont.

Adams' approval and co-operation he aims steadily to sell quality goods, with the result that Mr. Adams' grocery department is unique in rural trade for the high average quality of the goods sold. The character of the whole store vouches for the quality of goods handled and the progressiveness of the methods ruling in the other departments.

How Store is Laid Out.

The new store is of brick, two stories, 18 by 90 feet. There are two fine display windows and they are used to splendid advantage. On entering, the left side is devoted to dry goods. The right side houses the boot and shoe department; and farther on is a section of the dry goods department, and beyond that the offices.

The grocery department is across the farther end of the store, and at the right hand corner an extension has been built for an up-to-date crockery and glassware department, which includes a number of lines of fine china. Down the centre of the store is a line of plate-glass, silent salesmen, 104 feet in all. The grocery department is equipped with the most modern fixtures to facilitate the sanitary and rapid handling of goods, pivotal, dust-proof bins, computing scales, plate-glass silent salesmen, and other essential features of the modern grocery.

The millinery and house-furnishing departments are up-stairs, and the clothing and merchant's tailoring departments also are located on the second floor. Among the general stores in Western Ontario there are few equals of this one for the convenient and commodious housing of a large departmental business.

CATALOGUES AND BOOKLETS.

W. Clark, Montreal, issued an artistic Christmas greeting card to his customers and friends throughout Canada. The design used is one of the prettiest out this season

SHOULD SERVE AS APPRENTICES.

Editor Canadian Grocer—The daily press reports that fewer students are attending university than formerly, that the lines are being drawn tighter, and that it is not so easy to pass the examinations. This has been done so as not to overload the professions.

Why not apply the same methods in the grocery business? Some years ago I advocated an apprentice system to the grocery business which was and is yet on too cheap a basis, speaking in general terms. This is borne out by the well known fact that when a person fails in other lines of business or gets out of work, he usually starts in the grocery trade.

Statistics were published some time ago to show what pursuits the men followed who were thrown out of work by the introduction of machinery. A large percentage of them took to selling groceries. Some travelers and wholesale houses often, when they find a man with a few hundred dollars, advise him to go into business so that they may get the first order—as it often turns out that is about all they do get.

Often, too a traveler finds that he is not getting any business from a certain locality, so he feels sore and trys to work up some opposition to the men who are there. Thus men of little or no experience are induced to go into the trade and very often they not only fail themselves, but cause unnecessary trouble to their honest competitors.

Therefore, I believe that the apprentice system should be adopted and that a man should serve a certain time at the business before he goes into it for himself. Credit should be absolutely refused an inexperienced man and I think that wholesale firms should even refuse cash unless a man had served his time and understood the business.

CALENDARS FOR 1910.

Libby, McNeil & Libby, of Chicago, have sent out a prettily illustrated calendar to their friends. The picture is that of a laughing little summer girl holding a poppy in her hand and printed on a sky-blue background. The same company have also issued a smaller calendar showing a bunch of violets on a white background.

W. C. Christmas, Montreal, Canada, has a calendar scheme which promises well. He is issuing one every month, with a neat picture above. He thinks that it will be better than any other method of sending out calendars.

"The Gamblers," is the subject of the Kearley & Tonge (London, Eng.) calendar, which The Canadian Grocer has received from across the ocean. The illustration is that of an old man and a little girl engaged in a "head-or-tail" contest with the latter in possession of the coin. The colors have been worked out beautifully and the whole picture is certainly a work of art.

AFTER CORNER IN CORN.

There is a report in circulation to the effect that speculators in Chicago are attempting to manipulate the market in corn used for the manufacture of syrup and starch. Patten, the wheat speculator, who created such sensations in the wheat market during the past year, is stated to be interested in effecting a corner in corn, while other strong financial corporations are endeavoring to keep him off. The outcome of the situation will likely be a material advance in May corn.

This, of course, will affect the Canadian situation, as manufacturers here get their supplies through Chicago. If prices of the raw material advance, syrup and starch will follow suit.

PERSONAL NOTES.

"Joe" Boyd, traveler for Red Rose Tea in London and south western Ontario, went back to the haunts of his boyhood at Acton for the holidays.

On Wednesday of last week the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, Ont., held a reunion of their U. S. and Canadian salesmen. One of the features of the day was the presentation to Frank Menzie of a handsome traveling case by the United States salesmen. Mr. Menzie is their sales-superintendent. In the evening the travelers were entertained by the company at Arlo House, the residence of F. F. Dalley. This entertainment included a Christmas tree with "Bay" Hill, the acting Santa Claus.

There is always a proper time for everything, and this is when stock should be looked over with a view to cleaning up for the New Year. Odds and ends are bound to collect after a year's business, and the wise merchant will see that they are cleared out at the right time. A hint to a man who has his own best interests at heart is sufficient.

A Good Repeater

A prominent grocer, when recently asked what kind of goods he liked to sell best, replied:—

"Give me a good repeater like Royal Baking Powder; an established article of undisputed merit which housekeepers repeatedly buy and are always satisfied with."

NEW baking powders and new foods, like new fads, come and go but Royal goes on forever. Grocers are always sure of a steady sale of Royal Baking Powder, which never fails to please their customers, and in the end yields to them a larger profit than cheaper and inferior brands.

Packers Refusing to Buy Hogs at Present Prices

Losing Money in Exporting—Bacon Prices go Down in England Making it Worse for Canadian Competition at Present Cost of Raw Material—Weaker Tendency in Butter—Firmer Market in Eggs—Turkey Prices Decline.

The bacon market in England is from 2 to 4 shillings lower, the market being well supplied from Ireland and Denmark. With the high price of hogs here it is impossible to sell on the English markets without a loss. One Canadian packing firm has not cut a hog for export during the last three weeks and this week it did not want any hogs at all, simply because it was losing money. This is not as it ought to be. If we lose the British market for our surplus we may suffer when our farmers produce more hogs. The farmers seem to have the whip on the packers, but it may not be good policy to crowd them too closely. If they cannot make money they would be foolish to continue the business, and if they would close down it would mean lower prices to the farmer. As stated last week, the well-equipped packing houses are aiding the farmers, and it would be a serious matter if the latter should cripple the institutions which are of such great benefit to them.

Butter is quiet and without any export demand is showing weakness. The price here, also like bacon, is too high to compete in England with other countries, who ship butter there at lower prices under less favorable circumstances. Denmark is buying bran in this country to feed their cows, and even then that country makes dairying pay. It would be interesting for a patient public whose money was spent to send a commission to Denmark, and who have waited a long time, to know whether the methods of dairying in Denmark can be introduced in this country.

Cheese in England is firm and will likely take our cheese from the hands of the holders here at a profit.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Live and dressed hogs are in an uncertain state just at present. Prices are changing almost daily. The range for live is from 8.30 to $8.75, and at present they are at the latter figure. Other lines are steady at last quotations. Higher prices are looked for in the near future.

BUTTER—There is a scarcity of dairy rolls at present, and most of the butter coming in at present is of poor quality, as is only natural at this season of the year. Finest quality butter is in good demand, with a somewhat short supply. Receipts for the week are 2,485 packages, as against 2,369 packages same week last year. For the season they are 386,082 packages as against 404,121 packages 1908, showing a decrease.

Receipts for the week are 938 boxes as against 604 boxes same week last year. For the season they are 1,965,799 boxes as against 1,898,722 boxes same season 1908.

EGGS—New laids are out of sight, up to forty cents wholesale, and rapidly preparing to soar again. Some retailers are asking sixty cents retail for them and getting it. The reason of course is the lack of supplies. Practically no first-class new laids have come in during the past week, and this has caused a sympathetic rise in other lines. Storage stocks have been freely used with the result that dealers are buying anywhere, in small lots or large, just what is offered. Receipts for the week are 276 cases as against 549 cases same week last year. For the season they are 190,097 cases as against 194,146 same season last year, showing a decided decrease in both.

POULTRY—The market kept up well under a heavy Christmas demand, and dealers generally report good business. Cold storage stocks are light, and it is prophesied that New Year's demand will fully equal that of the past week. Turkeys are particularly scarce.

PROVISIONS — On account of the wild figures asked for turkeys and fowl in general, a good deal of bacon and other cured meats took their places this year. Even at the high price of cured meats, it looks cheap along side of turkeys at 25c a lb. This was illustrated by one of the workmen in one of our provision houses, when the proprietor offered him his usual Christmas turkey. He looked at it, and then said: "Turkey is pretty dear eating for a man in my circumstances and if it makes no difference to you, I would prefer its value in bacon." The proprietor commended him on his good judgment and satisfied his wishes.

BUTTER—This also is a dull week on the butter market. The larger quantities used in the country has reduced the receipts this week and as the demand for baking has been supplied before Christmas, the turnover is light and unimportant.

EGGS—Cold storage eggs may be said to be one cent a dozen higher, although some are still selling at the same price as last week. New laid eggs are a little easier to get hold of and the very outside sky-high prices may not so easily be extorted from the poor mortal who believes he must have a newly laid egg at least once a day to keep soul and body together.

POULTRY—The anxiety which usually precedes the holiday season, about the supply and demand of poultry, is over, and the usual lesson has been learned, again to be forgotten in less than one year from now. To run up turkeys to 25c a lb. wholesale has been proven more than once will result in loss. People are not obliged to eat turkeys on Christmas day, and the majority cannot afford it. They wisely will do without them,

Many of the retailers are hit pretty hard, who have still large quantities on hand which they bought at high figures.

RETAILERS LOSE MONEY.

Buy Their Christmas Stocks of Turkeys too Early as Usual.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Year after year the same unsatisfactory conditions prevail in the poultry trade during the great rush for the Christmas supply. Few of the retailers make any money in them, and some meet with serious losses. Why should the retailers not have a decent profit to handle these goods at a time when they are so large a part of their trade? This year in their eagerness to do business, and their want of knowledge of the condition of affairs, they paid as high as 25c wholesale, and a great many of these birds are on their hands, for which they will never see the money they paid for them. It takes a good level head to stay out of the fray when others get started on a stampede, but it is he who can step out as soon as he sees no money for himself that comes out best in the end.

This year it was not expected that farmers would kill before the Monday preceding the Christmas day. When the birds did not come in to the Toronto market on Tuesday, a general alarm was raised, and the retailers tumbled over each other to get turkeys at any price.

This was simply unreasonable, because the turkeys could not come in by that time. Even Wednesday was the very earliest that they could arrive. To buy turkeys at 25c a lb. and expect a profit from your customers is simply crazy. Through this eagerness and greed, hundreds of people were deprived of their usual Christmas turkey, which is now hanging in the stores deteriorating in quality and value.

This same thing has happened before, but the lesson is forgotten and the same mistake is repeated. Retailers should make up their minds not to touch them if they are too high.

By-law to Have Fowls Drawn Defeated in Council

Proposal Made by Controller After Being Widely Discussed is Finally Turned Down—Dealers in Poultry Claim that Undrawn Fowls will Keep Longer.

Ottawa, December 29.—How should a chicken be offered for sale? As it is made, or as it is modified according to the contentions of pernickety housewives? This was a question which recently caused considerable discussion in Ottawa. Controller Geo. H. Wilson proposed a by-law calling for the removal of entrails of fowl, and the removal of head and feet before being offered for sale.

The Health Committee of the Women's Council contended that it would favor the measure from a sanitary standpoint as well as from the convenience effected. They claimed that when fowl have been killed some time and the entrails left in them, they become unfit for eating.

Against this argument A. G. Gilbert, of the Experimental Farm, maintained that bacteria have a better chance to attack drawn fowl than undrawn. Further argument was advanced to show that such a move would account for a decided increase in price and consequently add to the cost of living.

The National Trades and Labor Council opposed the scheme, as did also the Ottawa Poultry Association. The latter presented a strong protest to the council against the by-law, on the grounds that when the head is off, it is difficult to tell the breed of the fowl, and when the feet are likewise removed it is hard to tell the age, and when the entrails are removed it is then that bacteria have a better chance to enter.

In conversation with some of the capital's best housekeepers, they maintained that the present method of handling fowl was the best for all parties concerned. When a chicken is purchased and taken home, does the purchaser immediately draw it if it is not the intention to cook it at the time? No. The fowl is placed in a cool place until required and at the right time it is cleaned and prepared for the table.

The outcome of the various arguments was that the by-law was defeated and poultry may be sold undrawn as before.

[EDITORIAL NOTE]—Experience has taught those who handle poultry extensively, that it is better not to have them drawn providing there is any chance of them not being used right away. The air coming in contact with the small particles of blood and with the flesh causes decomposition and decay. Fowl, of course, should be starved before killing to get the best results, as food left in the crops taints the flesh.

Wheat and Flour Markets are Inclining Upward

And This in the Face of Greatest Wheat Crop of the Year—Wheat Prices Fluctuating on Account of Speculation—Demand for Cereals Rather Quiet During Holiday Season.

Owing to speculative manipulation the prices of wheat are constantly fluctuating, but after all they are getting little away from the same point. Contrary to the expectation, however, the tendency is upward. With the enormous crop and the good prospects of the coming harvests the reasonable conclusion is that plenty will rule through the entire year. The fact, however, that the reserves for the last two years were gradually decreasing and that the year was found with a very low surplus, must not be overlooked, and that a large portion of this year's stock will be required to make up for that deficiency. Looking at the whole situation it is difficult to see why prices should go any higher.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Retailers report large sales of flour during the past week. For the miller it has been somewhat slower, owing to the fact that dealers had placed most of their orders early. Many repeat orders were received, however, showing that trade has been good. Prices are firm and unchanged in all lines.

MEN WITH BACKBONE.

Proportionately, if a man's backbone weakens his "wishbone" develops.

The nine-dollar-per-week clerk wastes his time in wishing he had the luck of a Rockefeller, a Carnegie or a Morgan—wishing that he had this, that or the other job—continually wishing.

The material parts of the human body, muscle or bone, develop only by usage. There is not, in nature, any spontaneous generation; everything comes by propagation.

Which are you developing—your backbone or your wishbone? Do not compaginate them. By constantly using your wishbone it will develop in undue proportions. On the other hand, in properly strengthening your backbone you should have no cause to wish.

Brace up; stand erect; strengthen your backbone—also your jawbone. Learn to say "I will" instead of that monotonous "I wish." The world bestows prizes on men with a backbone, while to those with a wishbone, asking for fish, she gives a serpent.

Motion propagates motion and life throws off life. Wishing you were fabulously rich leads you to the bread line. —Karl Graft in "The Bookkeeper."

This Binding Pledge We Hand You

BY the way, Brother Grocer, you must have seen the advertising we are doing for YOU in all the best papers in town and country. Well, in one of the FIVE ROSES ads. which will have immense circulation, we say the following.
And we want you to try and live up to it, Brother Grocer.

* * * *

This is what we say, listen :

" The label on every sack or barrel is your absolute guarantee, as redeemable as a signed statement, that the flour is right, the packing right, the baking right, the results right.
" When we say FIVE ROSES is right, we mean it is all right. Not one pound, or two pounds at the top, but the whole sack, the entire barrel from the first cupful to the very last grain at the bottom.
" Even if it takes you six months to reach the bottom, the guaranty still holds, the strongest guaranty ever given by any miller anywhere.
" FIVE ROSES, Madam, will " make good " every time. Try it for bread, cakes, biscuits, puddings, pies, puffs—anything you like.
" Try it with that difficult little recipe which has floored every other flour you know.
" Use it down to half the sack. Then if you don't want the flour after that, your grocer will take it back and refund the full price, charging you NOTHING for the flour used.
" Surely, that's fair enough, isn't it ? "

* * * *

We mean it, Brother Grocer.
If an accident should possibly happen, for we are dealing with the human element, you are safe anyway.
Even if your customer has used half the sack, we will refund YOU the full purchase price, charging NOTHING for the flour used. Such, Brother Grocer, is the confidence we have in FIVE ROSES. Some said the privilege would be abused, but we will trust your customer and her grocer too.

* * * *

You know the value of the " moneyback " policy, don't you ? It's the policy that has made Wanamaker, Brother Grocer. Will any other Canadian miller give you this binding pledge ? YOU think not.
We guess not.

Hints for the Trade to Follow During January

The Taking of Stock Should be Given Early Consideration—Information That Ought to be Gleaned—Getting Rid of Held-over Stock—Need of Co-operation Among Merchants.

By M. Moyer.

The work for the year 1909 is now finished, and we are entering upon our journey for the year 1910. Whether we have realized our expectations, and reached the goal we aimed for or not, one thing is certain and that is, that we all have gained one full year's experience, which should enable us to do our work better in 1910, than ever before. Success in life is not altogether measured by dollars and cents, although from a business point of view, this is the one thing which must work out right, or the business cannot stand. It is therefore necessary, first of all in the New Year to find out how the business stands financially, and the early days of the month of January is the most fitting time to do this.

One of the things that should be done in January is to take stock. Stock-taking should not only mean finding out whether the balance is on the right side of the ledger, but it should also show the amount of goods that had been bought according to the wholesale invoices, the amount of goods turned over according to the selling prices, the amount of goods which are still in stock; how much more or less stock is on hand than the year previous; how much is on the books against your customers, and how much more or less than the year before; how great were the expenses in making this turn over, how much for rent, how much for gas, coal and ice, how much for clerks, drivers, horses, waggons, feed, etc.

On the total of the expenditure should be figured the percentage of the cost of the year's business. In order to do this, it is not necessary to say that the books must be properly kept, showing every invoice for goods purchased, every cent paid out in expense, and all the cash taken in for goods.

This is sometimes considered too much trouble and work, but it is never so considered by a good, systematic and successful merchant. Stock-taking is not only necessary in order to find out the financial standing of the business, but it serves the purpose of a general house cleaning. Every article in the store must be handled, examined and recorded, and in this way things are often discovered which were overlooked, and which must be cleared out at any cost. The entire stock gets a hauling over and a shaking up and a general revival in business follows as a result.

Plan for the Future.

When stock-taking is all done, and you have everything in shape so that you know how you stand, whether you have made money or not, it is a wise and up-to-date business idea to consider how to make 1910 a better year than 1909. This cannot be accomplished by yourself alone, but if you employ salesmen or any other help, you should take them into your confidence and consider with them ways and means how to improve your business. Even the delivery boy very often gets pointers from the customers which are worth while considering, and often beneficial to the business. It would therefore be a reasonable suggestion for grocers to introduce in January a regular system of conferences to be held, say monthly, for the purpose of discussing matters relating to the welfare of the business. It would no doubt be a good idea to give the employes a banquet or supper some evening, to launch this work, and to which might be invited one or more outside practical men to speak on the relations of employer and employes, their duties towards each other and the benefits to be derived by both parties through proper methods and a better understanding of each other.

From one conference to the other it should be the duty, or I should say the privilege, of each one connected with the business to make a note of anything that comes under his observation on which he could suggest an improvement. This could then be brought up for consideration at the next conference, and if the improvement or change as suggested be approved of, and adopted, he should get credit for it. This is merely a suggestion, but if carried out will without a doubt bring good results.

Show Only Small Quantities.

Another thing that should be done in January, if you are unfortunate enough to have left considerable of your Christmas goods in your hands, and that is, to put them out of sight of your customers with the exception of small quantities. It is not good policy to let your customers know that you did not get your proper share of the trade, for they will form the idea that others were doing a more successful business, and that you are not up-to-date. Bring them out in small quantities as you require them, and offer them at prices that will make them move quickly.

Another matter that should be considered by a grocer during the month of January is the duty he owes to the grocery trade in general. Are the laws governing your interests fair? Are you laboring under any disadvantages, and if so how can they be improved? Can the life of a grocer be made less slavish and yet improve the service?

United Effort Essential.

These are matters of general interest to the trade, and should concern every grocer. This usually becomes the burden of the few, which is often not realized, while all derive the same benefit. This is positively not fair, and is not even honest.

There is not a province or even a town in Canada where the necessity of this general work is not felt by some, and the only trouble is the fact that some, while they are all willing to share the benefits, are not fair enough to bear their trifling share of the expenses. The Co-operative Bill which has been defeated at great effort and cost is again before the house this session, and if that bill will be allowed to become law, the retail trade will have to face a competitor so absolutely unfair that it will mean much to the trade. Therefore during the month of January every town should have its well organized association to do its part in securing and maintaining fair play to the legitimate trade of this country.

When these things are all attended to the work for the month of January would still be incomplete without The Canadian Grocer, which keeps you in touch with everything that relates to the grocery trade; therefore if you are not a subscriber, become one in January.

NEW HOLIDAY HITS.

Sprigs of Holly and Mica Flags Used by Scandrett Bros., of London.

London, Ont., Dec. 28.—Scandrett Bros., of London, carried out a very happy idea in their Christmas trade. With every order there was sent out a spray of holly and attached to it a card bearing the inscription:

With the Compliments of Scandrett Bros.,
London, Ont.

The holly is English-made, not grown, but it is as natural as can be and has the further great advantage that every sprig bears half a dozen bright red berries. The firm adopted a unique feature of store decoration. It was a great number of small, different-colored, mica flags 3 inches by 2 inches, on wire spears. Each flag bears a motto in gold, such as, "Health and Happiness," and "Prosperity to all." These little flags were all over the store, bearing their message and greetings of good-will.

GETS A RAISE IN SALARY.

From Our Vancouver Correspondent.

"The Canadian Grocer is the best trade journal I have seen," remarked a merchant here recently. "I have read it for 10 years and I will keep on reading it. I cannot find time to read it during the week so I keep it until Sunday when I go right through the whole paper. My assistant always expects me to bring it down on Monday. If I don't he asks for it. I believe he keeps every copy. I am glad he takes this interest in the trade. It gives me more confidence in him. In fact it makes me take an interest in the man himself. That man will be a big grocer one of these days.

"I don't think that there has been a photograph of a store window published in The Grocer during the time he has been with me that he has not tried to copy. It does him good and it does me good. It is a pity there are not a few more like him. It is against their own interests to be otherwise but they can't see it. I have raised this man's salary twice in eight months and I will raise it again rather than let him go. The Grocer is worth ten times the annual subscription to me if it is only to maintain this man's interest."

Florida Strawberries at 75c Per Quart in Montreal—New Asparagus at $12 per Dozen Bunches—Markets Generally Quiet After the Holiday.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—High priced importations present the market feature this week. Among the lines are Florida strawberries, which are quoted at 75c per qt. Even at that price they are in good demand and scarce. Tangerines sell at $6 per strap (two half boxes), and kumquats at 20c per qt. are in fine demand for New Years. Better grades of Florida oranges are selling higher, at $4.50 per box. Other lines are steady, with a comparatively brisk sale.

VEGETABLES—As in the fruit market, vegetables most in demand at the present season are the high priced, rarer lines. Chief of these, at least in price, is Illinois hothouse asparagus, which is quoted at $12 per dozen bunches. It has had a limited sale however. Florida tomatoes are selling fairly well at $4.50 to $5 per crate, Brussels sprouts at 30c per qt., and California celery at $5.50 per crate. In the regular lines prices are considerably higher, some of the lines being over double last week's quotations. Cauliflowers are a case in point, now selling at from $2 to $4. Cucumbers are at $2 for the best. String beans are scarce and sell from $5 to $6, with a further rise in sight. Tomatoes and lettuce are higher. Trade has been all that could have been expected and dealers express themselves as satisfied, in most cases.

FISH — During the holidays the fish trade is never so brisk, though some lines, such as oysters and frozen salmon, are in strong demand. Halibut have also a fair sale. With suitable cold weather the trade is now looking for activity in frozen fish, such as herrings, smelts, tom cods, haddock, and steak cod, but so far supplies have been poor, and if conditions do not improve there will be a scarcity. There is a rumor that Newfoundland herrings will not be so abundant this year, and as a result higher prices are looked for.

HAS CHRISTMAS RECEPTION.

Unique Idea of a Toronto Grocer in Attracting Customers.

Toronto, Dec. 28.—In this telephone age a growing problem with the progressive merchant is how to get some of his best customers to his store. H. G. Macdonald, of 223 Sorauren Avenue, Toronto, is adopting a plan to at least partially solve it for himself. For four or five years now, and every year with increasing success, he has held a reception for three afternoons and evenings of the week preceding Christmas. Each year he issues to customers and to a selected list of prospective customers, handsomely printed invitations. The store, always handsome and well kept, is decorated for the occasion with a profusion of flowers, and small colored electric lights. An excellent orchestra provides an attractive musical program each evening. During the last three years a further attraction has been added by serving tea, cocoa and jelly.

Mr. Macdonald has been doing business at the same street intersection for twenty years, and he held his first reception when he moved across the street to a new and larger store. His telephone trade has grown to large proportions, and he found that many of his best customers seldom saw inside the store. The reception, he found served a triple purpose; brought out old customers; brought in new ones, and increased his Christmas trade. Every year has encouraged him to continue it.

HE LOVED HIS PAPER, BUT—

Of all the reasons given by merchants for discontinuing their subscription to trade and daily newspapers, it is hard to beat the excuse made by a certain St. Louis grocer who wanted The Interstate Grocer stopped. Judging from his letter, his wife runs his business and cannot see the value of a dollar because a nickle obscures her vision. He says this: "Please stop your paper; my wife won't let me take it." To paraphrase, "I love my paper, but oh, you wife."—The Interstate Grocer.

Canadian Grocer representatives wonder whether this is supposed to be up-to-date news. The situation is a very familiar one to them.

PERSONAL NOTE.

Stanley Douglas, representing Gunns' Limited, between Sudbury and the Soo and as far west as Port Arthur and Fort William, is in Toronto this week. Mr. Douglas states that trade on the north shore has been brisk this season and that everything points to a continuation of the same during 1910.

An additional $1 worth of goods to each of Grocer's 7,000 readers:

If 7,000 of the best grocers in Canada held a meeting every week at Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg or some other point, what would a manufacturer pay for the privilege of giving them a series of talks about his goods?

If this manufacturer was able to demonstrate the solid worth of his product, and show that it paid the dealers a fair profit, could he induce each one of them to buy an additional $1 worth of it in a year?

$1 worth of any manufacturer's goods would make a pretty small parcel. Yet multiply that quantity by the number of dealers and you find that it means $7,000.

There is only one way in which a manufacturer can address the 7,000 leading buyers of grocery lines every week. That is through The Canadian Grocer.

If he approaches his talks in this paper as carefully as if he were actually addressing a meeting of these buyers—says something worth while—do you mean to say that he could not make it worth many times what it costs?

A space this size costs $425 for 52 weeks, which means that a manufacturer using it could talk to about 10 good buyers for every cent expended. The value of the space to him would depend entirely upon what he said in it.

The Manufacture of Milk Powder in Canada—How the Solid is Obtained From the Milk—Great Care Used in Keeping Clean the Machinery.

MILK POWDER.—In view of the increasing use of milk powder and the extent to which it is supplying the needs of consumers both in localities where fresh mill cannot readily be obtained, and in the large cities, it is interesting to know the process of manufacture used by the largest company making milk powder in Canada.

The factory of this company has a capacity for drying over 60,000 pounds of milk a day. The milk is produced on the neighboring farms, and the farmers supplying this plant agree to keep their cow-barns and premises thoroughly clean, to use the utmost care to prevent any dirt from getting into the milk during or after milking, to keep the milk in a special milk-room away from the barn until it is delivered, to feed no turnips or anything that can affect the flavor of the milk, and to cool and aerate it immediately after it is milked. The milk from these farms is then brought to the factory in large cans holding about forty gallons apiece and is carefully weighed and inspected at the weigh-stand of the plant. Any milk which has not been properly cooled or which is in any way off flavor or in which any acidity has risen, is rejected and returned to the farmers. It is an interesting sight to see the long line of teams bringing the milk to the plant in the morning.

Process of Manufacture.

When the milk has been received a sample of each farmer's milk is taken and is tested chemically to determine its quality. The milk is then pasteurized to prevent any possibility of dangerous germs remaining and is then filtered to remove any possible dirt or impurities. After passing through the filter into vats lined with tinned copper, it is taken to the great vacuum pan in which at a low temperature a large part of the moisture is driven off leaving a thick liquid about the consistency of heavy cream. This is drawn off from the vacuum pan and is then driven under a tremendous pressure of thousands of pounds to the square inch by powerful hydraulic pumps through very fine sprays into large tin lined drying chambers. It is stated that the speed at which the milk passes through the fine hole of the spray head is several miles a minute. This great speed breaks up the jet in the drying chambers into drops so small as to be more like a fog than a spray. Through these drying chambers currents of filtered, heated air are driven and this dry air takes the remaining moisture from the milk allowing the solid matter to fall in a fine dry powder on the floor of the drying chambers. This is then sifted to do away with any danger of any lumps or impurities and packed in cans for use.

This plant is the principal industry of the neighborhood where it is situated and has about 200 farmers delivering milk to it, some of them bringing over a ton of milk a day. Milk producing is the principal business of the district.

One interesting feature of the plant is the scrupulous cleanliness that prevails through it. There are about 30 men employed and the manager states that nearly half of the time of the employees is occupied in the constant washing and cleaning of the machinery and everything which ever comes in contact with the milk. For instance, all pipes through which milk has passed are first washed with cold water, then washed with hot water, and lastly thoroughly sterilized with live steam.

This milk powder is already being largely used in place of fresh cow's milk by food manufacturers, and is especially satisfactory on account of its unvarying quality. It is coming to be used more for domestic purposes in the west, and wherever it is difficult to obtain fresh milk. The process does not take away any of the good of the milk, and the powder is easily soluble in cold water. The strictness of the company in accepting only milk of the highest possible quality and the scrupulous filtering and pasteurizing does away with all danger of disease from impure milk for those who use this product.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and it is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good customer by passing out an inferior stove polish, which is wrong more often than it is right. RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.
